D. & R. G. TRAIN ROBBED; BANDITS STILL AT LARGE

Engineer, Fireman and Mail Clerks Are Forced to Do Bidding of Robbers at Point of Gun. Passengers Are Not Disturbed.

DARING HOLDUP OCCURS NEAR DENVER

Exact Amount Secured From Mail Car in Form of Registered Letters Not Known. Men May Have Boarded Train in Colorado Springs.

DENVER, Feb. 13.—That the holdup of the Denver and Rio Grande passenger train near Denver early this morning was the work of three instead of two robbers, and that the robbery of the mail car gave them a loot of possibly $35,000, are indicated by the investigations of the postoffice and railroad officials today. So far, no tangible clew to the identity or whereabouts of the robbers has been found, but it seems probable that the men came to Denver and are now hiding in this city.

Eighteen packages of registered mail were secured. These included five from Salt Lake, addressed to Greeley, Colo.; Georgetown, Colo.; Waco, Texas; Whitewright, Texas, and Denver; one from Pueblo to Denver; one from Colorado Springs to Denver; one from Taylor, Washington, to Steamboat Springs, Colo.; one from Winfield, Wash., to Sterling, Colo.; one from Leadville to Denver, and others from Glenwood Springs and other Colorado towns. One of these packages is said to have contained a large sum of money, but until a thorough checking up of the missing packages is possible, the exact amount taken by the robbers can not be ascertained.

As to the exact amount taken by the robbers [illegible] It is [illegible] that [illegible] Denver [illegible] that [illegible] of value [illegible] The [illegible] Denver [illegible] to the Denver postoffice.

[illegible]

The [illegible] was [illegible] within [illegible] of [illegible] less than two miles of Fort Logan, the United States military reservation, and at a spot where habitations are plentiful. Yet so thorough was the work of the robbers and so well were their plans laid that they had fully an hour and a half start of the officers. Search of the vicinity of the holdup indicates that a third man and possibly a fourth were engaged in the robbery, that a rubber-tired buggy was in waiting for the actual holdups, and that torpedo and red signal fires were used in an unsuccessful attempt to stop the train before the automatic revolvers of the two men on the train succeeded in doing it.

From the manner in which the holdup was accomplished it is thought possible that the robbers are the ones responsible for the holdup of the Denver and Rio Grande train last May, when Express Messenger Wright was killed.

Whether or not the bandits were Denver crooks or whether they having [illegible] of a [illegible] large shipment of [illegible] by a Colorado Springs bank [illegible] all the way to Denver from that city is problematical; but from [illegible] by one of the mail clerks it appears more than probable that the holdups were aboard the train before the holdup. This clerk [illegible] that he saw a man whom he thought to be a hobo, riding the "blind baggage" when the train stopped a few minutes at Palmer Lake. [illegible] stopped but a [illegible] upon that occasion only long enough to put the mail aboard. It is thought that the man boarded the train before it reached Palmer Lake. The last stop made previous to Palmer Lake was made at Colorado Springs. The mail clerk paid no particular attention to the hobo as it is quite often that men are found riding the "blind baggage"—that is ride on the bumpers between the tender of the engine and the first car, usually the mail car.

Had Boarded Trains Previously.

In the light of subsequent events the police are of the opinion that the man seen by the mail clerk was one of the bandits. The holdups made their appearance when the train running at a rate of about thirty five miles an hour was approaching the city. It would have been a physical impossibility for them to board the train after it had left Palmer Lake.

The train had passed Littleton and was within half a mile of Military Junction when Engineer C. H. Gunn and Fireman O. H. Lessig, both engaged in their work in the engine cab, were startled by a voice behind them. Turning they found themselves facing two desperate looking fellows pointing the barrels of revolvers at them. One of the men, like his confederate partly masked, ordered Gunn to stop the train. Fearing death at the hands of the desperado the engineer obeyed. With a sudden jerk the train was brought to a standstill.

Evidently the train had stopped too suddenly for the bandits for no sooner had they secured their bearings when they ordered Gunn to continue toward the city, informing him they wished to stop at Military Junction. It is this order showing great familiarity with the territory just south of the city which leads the police to believe the bandits were Denver men.

Gunn obeyed the order promptly but the train was a little slow in starting. Enraged at the delay the taller of the holdups fired his revolver three times and threatened Gunn with death should the train not move instantly. Not until Fireman Lessig had explained that the air was still holding the train but that they would presently be under way did the bandit calm and cease making threats.

Ordered to Leave Engine.

Slowly the train moved until Military Junction was reached. When the train had come to a standstill the holdups ordered Gunn and Lessig to leave the engine. With a bandit behind each one of the two men they did as they were told. They were marched to the side of the mail car and ordered to stand there. The door of the mail car was wide open, the clerks in charge having opened it when they heard the three shots fired by one of the bandits at the first stopping place. For some reason they had failed to close it when the train had again started.

With the smaller of the bandits covering Gunn with his revolver the taller of the holdups and evidently the leader ordered Lessig the fireman to step up to the door of the mail car and call the clerks. Lessig knowing that most mail clerks are armed protested saying he would be shot. The bandit, with an oath told him to do as ordered, preferring that he (the fireman) would be shot than he himself. Fearing death at the hands of the bandit Lessig obeyed as he had been ordered.

WILL BUILD FINE APARTMENT HOUSE

MRS. MADDOX TO IMPROVE TEJON STREET PROPERTY.

Contract for Artistic Structure Will Be Let in the Near Future.

One of the finest building improvements planned for Colorado Springs this season is the erection of a strictly modern three-story apartment house, at a cost of more than $26,000 by Mrs. Iona Maddox of 104 East Boulder street on her two lots at the northeast corner of Boulder and Tejon streets. She expects to have the building completed and ready for occupancy within the year.

Mrs. Maddox leaves tomorrow morning for several weeks' visit to New Orleans and on her return to Colorado Springs will award the contract for the building. The two-story frame residence building now occupying a portion of the two lots is to be moved to the east line of the property and occupied as a residence by Mrs. Maddox.

Will Be Artistic.

Gray brick is to be used in the construction of the new apartment house. Facing Tejon street, the building will occupy the extreme edge of the site while on the Boulder street front a space will be left for a park entrance leading into an open court, giving each room an outside exposure. The building will cover a space 100 feet wide.

The first floor of the Tejon street front is planned for physician's offices and will have a separate entrance above which a balcony will extend along the second story. The base of the court facing Tejon street will be a sunken garden in which flower beds will be attractively arranged around a central fountain.

Mrs. Maddox will park a distance of 30 feet into Boulder street.

LIVES OF TWO GREAT MEN ARE REVIEWED

LINCOLN-DARWIN MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD.

Former Governor Thomas and Professor Finlay Speak at Colorado College Celebration.

A scholarly address by Professor George I. Finlay of Colorado College on Charles Darwin, the great scientist, and an interesting talk on Abraham Lincoln by former Governor Charles S. Thomas of Denver, were the features of the [illegible] celebration held last night in [illegible] hall under the auspices of Colorado College. Dr. James B. Gregg presided and in a brief introductory speech, styled the one "the greatest man of thought of the nineteenth century," and Lincoln "the greatest man of action of the same period."

Boy of No Promise.

Dr. Finlay's lecture, while partly biographical was devoted principally to an analysis of Darwin's work in the field of science and the place which his theories as to evolution of species occupies in the world of scientific investigation today. Touching on Darwin's early life and parentage he showed that the boy gave no indications of unusual mentality in his youth except a fondness for the collection and classification of insects, and was even at one time accused by his father, a physician of unusual qualities, of caring for nothing but dogs, shooting and rat catching, and of promising to grow up a disgrace to his family.

Failure in School.

During his seven years at school, studying languages exclusively, Darwin made a poor showing from a scholastic standpoint and was then sent to the University of Edinburgh to study medicine. Here he made a conspicuous failure and after two years gave up the university work much to the disgust of his father who said he feared his son would grow up to be nothing but a sportsman. At his father's suggestion he then turned toward the ministry as his life work and attended Cambridge but soon forsook the study of the [illegible] to join a scientific party on a five years' cruise to the coast of South America and various tropical waters.

Forges to the Front.

Darwin returned to England and [illegible] in health but the foundation [illegible] all for his lifework [illegible] For the 20 years following his return in 1836 he worked on his investigation into the question of the origin of species and it was not until 1857 that his famous book bearing the message of his conclusions to the world was published. The result of this and subsequent works was to revolutionize the methods of scientific work the world over and to place Darwin in the forefront of the world's great thinkers.

Mr. Finlay spoke at some length on the theory of evolution as expounded by Darwin to explain the origin of species, and pointed out that while in some details the conclusions drawn by Darwin have been practically abandoned the main lines of his principles are still being followed in every branch of scientific thought and he predicted that in 1,000 years from now the great expounder of "natural selection" and "survival of the fittest," as opposed to "spontaneous creation" would hold a much higher place in the pinnacle of fame than is now accorded him.

Remarks on Lincoln.

The assertion that in the four years of Lincoln's administration "he never made a mistake when he acted deliberately," was perhaps the most striking encomium of the martyred President that former Governor Thomas made in the course of his eloquent and comprehensive exposition of the life and character of Abraham Lincoln. As an orator, he said Lincoln stood alone in simplicity and strength of expression and in his power of placing the truth before his hearers in such a manner that they never forgot what he said. As a thinker he was invariably right in his conclusions because he held to the line of certain great principles and

ATTORNEY SUES TO RECOVER WHISKERS

WAS SHORN OF FACIAL ADORNMENT ELECTION DAY.

Prominent Louisiana Citizens Indicted on Charge of Conspiring to Injure and Threaten Voters.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—Attorney E. A. O'Sullivan of New Orleans was ruthlessly shorn of his flowing whiskers at a recent election and as a result Mayor Paul Felix and four other prominent citizens of Kenner, La., were indicted today on a charge of conspiring and agreeing to arm themselves with pistols, guns, scissors and other weapons to injure, oppress and threaten certain voters.

Mr. O'Sullivan's whiskers were of unusually luxuriant growth and made him noted far and near. The attorney went to Kenner at the late election to give legal advice to clients who were opposing the Felix regime. As Mr. O'Sullivan approached a voting booth it is said a number of his political opponents popped out and not very kindly, refused to permit him to enter.

"We'll cut off his whiskers," one is quoted as saying. The delighted politicians fell to with a will and the barber act was quickly and painfully if not artistically performed. Mr. O'Sullivan started legal proceedings, evidence was secured and the indictments were returned.

Other persons at the polls were intimidated to some extent also, it is charged, but their whiskers were not disturbed and so they left the prosecutions to Mr. O'Sullivan.

SEVEN BOYS FACE DEATH IN BLIZZARD

CAUGHT IN STORM ON PRAIRIE NEAR FOUNTAIN.

Two Separated From Companions, Found Alarm [illegible]

Caught in a blizzard on the prairie east of Fountain yesterday afternoon, seven boys, the youngest of whom is 7 years old and the eldest 14, wandered for four hours in the blinding [illegible] and were on the point of perishing from cold and exhaustion when two of the boys, the youngest in the party, became separated from the others and, accidentally finding the road to Fountain, gave the alarm which resulted in a posse of 20 men rescuing their companions. Alva Ellington, 9 years old, is in serious condition. His feet are so badly frozen that amputation may be necessary. All of the boys are suffering intensely from exposure and frozen hands and feet, but with the exception of Ellington no serious consequences are feared. They are Lorin [illegible], Thomas [illegible], Carl Wolf, Charles Cross, Alva Ellington, Wayne Cross and [illegible] of Fountain. It was the two latter who found their way into Fountain and gave the alarm, shortly after [illegible] o'clock last evening.

Searching Party Formed.

The little town was stirred to a high pitch of excitement as it was feared that the boys must surely have perished in the storm. Twenty men responded to the call and started out across the prairie in the blizzard in search of the missing boys.

Within a mile of town and pretty near the road they came on the youngsters. [illegible] unconscious and [illegible] frozen. A few [illegible] would have [illegible] from exhaustion. They had [illegible] a wagon. They [illegible] the fact that they had at last struck the road leading home and had almost given up hope. [illegible] when [illegible] that they were [illegible]

Shortly after [illegible] the youngsters [illegible] and left Fountain [illegible] pasture of 2,000 acres adjoining the town. The day was bright and warm and the boys had a [illegible] time. They were in the extreme east edge of the pasture [illegible] when the storm broke over them shortly after [illegible] o'clock. Realizing their peril they started for home and lost their way. While the boys were at play, the burros wandered away and could not be found.

PLUCKY BOYS SACRIFICE SKIN TO SAVE A FRIEND

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 13.—Three plucky boys today sacrificed four square inches of skin each to help replace that which Delia Helm, a 15 year-old girl, lost four months ago in an accident which scalded half the surface of her body. The operation in skin-grafting was performed at the county hospital. The boys bared their backs and allowed the surgeons to strip off shreds of skin and transfer them to the raw wounds on the body of the little girl, an acquaintance of theirs. They were George, Ralph Deloe, Henry Deloe and Earl Morris. About one-half of the surface of the girl's body was literally parboiled when she fell backward into a tub of boiling water. It will require many skin-grafting operations to replace the skin that was burned away.

MRS. DURHAM EXONERATED

CRIPPLE CREEK, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Rosella Durham, who on the morning of February 9 shot and killed her husband, a miner, out of fear that he would do her and their two small children bodily harm, was practically exonerated by the coroner's jury investigating the affair, it being found that the shooting was justifiable.

WILL STAND BACK OF MEN BUILDING BIG CANAL

President-Elect Declares Work Is Being Done Honestly Despite Rumors to Contrary.

SCORES TROUBLE MAKERS

Taft Criticises Politicians Seeking Notoriety Through Springing of Unfounded Sensations.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 13.—Talking through Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, like during campaign days, President-elect Taft today had the gratification which he evidently enjoyed of being heartily received by large and enthusiastic crowds who had not voted for him. Several times he made his appreciation plain. At the same time he left a touch of irony as a reminder that his predictions had surely come true and not only did the south seem willing to accept him as their President but his greatest desire was to be the President of every man, woman and child in the nation.

There was one other burden on the Taft mind today—a desire to show utter contempt for what he termed the baseless and hurtful criticisms of the work being done on the Panama canal.

Displays Sense of Humor.

The geniality of the Taft smile may be seen in this sentence in his address at Hattiesburg, Miss.

"I am delighted to say to you that I am your President and you cannot help it, and if ever an opportunity comes up to show it, it will gratify me to come down here to Hattiesburg, [illegible] I doubt not, a beautiful [illegible] and say to the people of Hattiesburg come up to Washington and we will give you the right hand of fellowship and will show you that you own just as much of the White House and have as much right to [illegible] President and indeed on the [illegible] and runs it [illegible]

[illegible] remarks of Mr. Taft [illegible]

Canal Will Be Built.

"The Panama canal is going to be built," he declared, "and what I want you to do and what I want every American citizen to do is to stand by the men who are building it. Don't [illegible] a fire in the rear, don't distrust the men who are giving up their strength and energy and enterprise to put that great work through. When you have agents who are doing your work you stand behind them. If you don't, you cannot get your work done. The men who do your work are entitled to your help and confidence, and you ought not to allow yourselves to be led astray by buncombe speeches in the House of Representatives or by headlines in sensational newspapers and go back on the men that are doing your work.

"I don't care whether you are Democrats or Republicans, you want the work done and when the engineers who are doing this work are giving all their [illegible] in carrying out this work you are [illegible] to go back on them or to believe every idle story that comes from the mouth of some politician who is seeking to make himself prominent or to give himself the advertisement of a little unfounded sensational statement.

Work Is Done Honestly.

"That work is being done honestly, I know what I am talking about. It will be built and all the wind opposition that comes merely from a desire to exist and exploit the man who makes himself responsible, won't obstruct it.

"I know what the people of the United States want in that regard and insofar as I have power as the executive of this country, I am going to push the work and I am going to stand behind the men who are doing it. And [illegible] gentlemen you have gotten me [illegible] more heat than I expected, but I thank you very much for your welcome."

There was a cordial leave taking at New Orleans this morning when the Taft party departed. Slidell, La., turned out the first crowd to greet the President elect and from that time on he was almost constantly on the rear platform of his train expressing his pleasure at the crowds and talking to the people.

Floral tributes, bonbons and two live "billy possums" constituted the presentations of the day. The possums were allowed to escape from their wooden crate and take to the woods at nightfall.

The two gigantic demonstrations of the day were at Hattiesburg and Meridian while at Birmingham tonight there was a tremendous ovation.

Mr. and Mrs. Taft will reach Cincinnati tomorrow.

HOUSE WILL CONTEST KNOX ELIGIBILITY MEASURE

Objection Raised to Bill Designed to Make Possible Acceptance of Cabinet Job.

MINORITY REPORT READY

Provision of Constitution Should Not Be Annulled in Manner Attempted by Senate, It Declares.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Although the bill removing the bar to the eligibility of Senator Knox to become secretary of state in the Taft cabinet was reported promptly to the House today from the committee on election of President, vice president and representatives in Congress, the filing of a minority report also indicates that a contest will be made against the passage of the measure. Representative Gaines of West Virginia, author of the House bill, which is identical with that passed by the Senate, expects to call up the measure on Monday under suspension of the rules and a motion will be made to substitute the Senate bill which, if passed, will bring the two houses into immediate agreement. In spite of the minority report, Representative Clark of Missouri, the Democratic floor leader, [illegible] will not be [illegible] the [illegible] expected.

NO DANGER OF NEW COUNTY BILLS PASSING

THIS IS THE WORD RECEIVED FROM DENVER.

Opposition Has Apparently Succeeded in Defeating [illegible] Schemes [illegible]

That a combination has been formed in the senate to defeat all measures providing for the creation of new counties is a report emanating from an authentic source in Denver. Further statement is made that the bills, which include the measures for the formation of Holt, Boone and Bryan counties from parts of El Paso, Elbert, Douglas and Arapahoe counties, will never get beyond the committee.

Regardless of the report, opponents of the scheme with their legal representatives, Judge L. W. Cunningham and R. L. Chambers, will present their protest before the legislative committee on county and county lines at a meeting tomorrow evening in Denver.

A Strong Point.

That the sections from which it is proposed to create the new county of Holt are unable to provide revenue sufficient to maintain a county government is a vital point to be brought to the attention of the committee. A shrinkage of more than $125,000 in the revenue expected to be derived from railroad taxation in the new county will be shown by an order of Holt county supporters in [illegible] the actual number of [illegible] the district [illegible] against the [illegible] townships [illegible]

WORLD CRUISE IS NEARING THE END

FLEET WILL ARRIVE HOME WEEK FROM TOMORROW.

Haskin Writes Interesting Article on Famous Voyage and Efficiency of Navy.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

A week from tomorrow the famous Atlantic fleet will steam into Hampton Roads after the most wonderful cruise that the world has ever known. The President will be there to review it as he did when it sailed out on December 16, 1907 and it will pass before him in the same formation with the same officers and men on board—with the notable exception of Rear Admiral Evans, who retired from command with full honors at San Francisco last spring. The ships will be a trifle sea worn, the paint may not be quite so fresh, but the gleam of brass in the sunlight will be as bright and the sailors will appear as trimly clad as when they sailed away fourteen months ago. A world record will have been made when the fleet comes home, a precedent set for nations to follow if they, too, would show their invincibleness to the world, and a lesson in the fitness of the American battleship and its men will have been demonstrated.

Efficient Body of Men.

Never has the navy been able to boast of so efficient a body of men aboard the ships. The news of the great cruise bruited about from coast to coast, from Canada to Texas, drew an army of recruits that lifted the seaman far above the average hitherto known. Sailors, farmers, students, adventurers, journalists, soldiers of fortune, all came to enlist. Twenty per cent came from sailing vessels. Sixty-five percent came from the farms of the middle west—where Rear Admiral Evans claims the best sea fighters grow—from the farms of Virginia and New England. These, with the thousands of able seamen already on board, were massed into a city population of 16,000 strong, and were given training on these sixteen battleships such as no civilian has ever had, for there was perfect home comfort, good food, good discipline and superb sanitary conditions such as the average civilian has never known in his own home town.

The outgoing battleships passed in review before the President over a year ago. The line was so long that the Connecticut was only a blur of smoke on the horizon four miles away when the last ship was firing its last gun. They formed into a giant checkerboard, and kept always a certain formation that was not broken even in passing through the Straits of Magellan. Once a fog sprung down like a great grey curtain, and for twenty-four hours shut out from each ship the other ships, the sea and the sky, but when it finally [illegible] the great checkerboard was sw[illegible] along with undiminished speed [illegible] in perfect formation.

Nation's [illegible] Its Own

These [illegible] the steps of the [illegible] famous run of 1898. [illegible] taken peaceful [illegible] a vision of the Pacific, throwing a force of eighteen battleships and eight armored cruisers on the western coast, in proof of the nation's ability to hold its own as a sea-power, if need be. They have put a girdle about the world and the trailing smoke from the funnels and the white foam in their wake has spelled out across the seas the efficiency of a people not yet a century and a half old, who are in the van of naval supremacy, with older nations left far behind.

Ports of call on the route were chosen with a view to their convenience as coaling stations or in answer to diplomatic invitations. Weeks before the ships sailed their itinerary had been named, and they touched at each port as planned with so little deflection from the hour and day named that it was not worth considering. Only the recent earthquake troubles in Italian waters caused any changes in the year-old plan and these were made in accordance with the altruism of a nation that would send its ships to succor those in need, and divert the provisions intended for the fleet to the more immediate needs of the homeless starving thousands of Sicily.

Leaving Norfolk in winter time the ships rushed through eight seasons of summer and winter before they reached San Francisco and returning again on a winter's day they will have the memory of the Mediterranean summer only three weeks behind them. Puck's putting a girdle about the earth in forty minutes is a tame feat compared to that of the Atlantic fleet and its fourteen months achievement. The ships kept in ordinary cruising speed of ten knots an hour without interruption for from eight to fifteen days, and then they remained in some port of call for from five to ten days.

Holiday Aboard Ship

Christmas they spent off Trinidad, where New England Christmas trees and tropical palms adorned ship and mess table. New Year's Day was spent off the coast of Dutch Guiana. The middle of January they arrived at Rio Janeiro to be guests of the city. Two hundred and fifty miles off the coast of Argentina the sixteen battleships were met by a fleet of four Argentina cruisers and as the Atalantic fleet fell into line, with Argentine flags displayed and guns firing salutes the most unique mid ocean ceremony ever known to the civilized world was witnessed.

Into the Straits of Magellan they passed through the straits skirting bleak unpeopled shores, daring the hurricanes of the far southern seas and passing the last stage of the journey in a dense fog. And this one hundred million dollars worth of steel fighting machinery with its resident population of 16,000 souls weathered the treacherous straits and arrived on the western side unruffled and unscathed. At Punta Arenas, the southernmost town in the world they stopped again to coal and in the shadow of giant glaciers the men watched the sun set at ten at night and rise again four hours later.

Many Amusements Provided

A Chilean cruiser met the fleet far down in the straits and led it to Valparaiso, where in and out of the big harbor the ships passed in review while Chilean sailors in white spelled out the word welcome on the steep hillside of the city. Out again on the Pacific without touching shore they beat along the coast until they made Callao in late February. There were bull fights and other Latin-American diversions and with the bunkers full of coal they headed eight days later for Magdalena Bay, where the Pacific squadron was at target practice. Then they came to San Diego in April when the men saw home soil for the first time in their long rush of 14,000 miles.

Into San Francisco Bay the fleet sailed in May, a fleet bigger than the entire navy of any country in the world save Great Britain, France and Germany. From the Pacific coast and a bit of rest there they went to Honolulu passing close inshore as they rounded Molokai in order that the lepers in exile there might see the great wonder. They then went to New Zealand and to Australia, where at Sydney [illegible] school children in a solid mass represented the crossed flags of Great Britain and the United States, and where provincial authorities bestowed true Anglo-Saxon hospitality. In Manila Bay the ships outrode a hurricane of twelve hours duration that played havoc with the lighter shipping in the harbor and later they returned to the scenes of Dewey's victory of ten years ago to demonstrate one world breaking record at target practice, the advancement of the ship, the gunner and the gun in that decade.

Amity of Japs Proved

They went to Japan where much ceremony and many garden parties proved the amity of the people there, to the China Seas and on to the route that Columbus thought he was following to the beckoning East Indies four centuries ago when he touched San Salvador on the opposite side of the globe. Through the Indian ocean up the Red Sea, palpitant with the history of countless centuries through the canal that has knit the Seven Seas into one, and into the Mediterranean they passed. They brought the panoplied greatness of the twentieth century to cut into crisp foam the waters where once sailed the Argo of Jason, the galleys on the way to the siege of Troy, the barge of Cleopatra, the biremes and the triremes of ancient Greece, the ships of Saint Louis, of Napoleon, of Nelson and of Decatur and of the hundreds of other heroes who made the history and song of that sea through thirty centuries.

They bombarded Gibraltar with friendly greetings that hung the sea with a pall of smoke for hours, and doubtless awoke false hopes in the shades of Moors long dead. The ever-yawning bunkers received more coal there and the fleet began on the first of February its homeward cruise. The cost has not been much more than would have been spent had the fleet remained in home waters, something like [illegible] a day, but each man has learned more in each day of that practical trip than he would have learned in a year of theoretical instruction.

It was all on a gigantic scale, things were measured as for a big city. Take the food for example. The fleet, exclusive of the auxiliaries, consumed a daily average of over 7,700 pounds of fresh beef and other fresh meats in proportion. It used over 3,000 pounds of sugar a day, 13,200 pounds of flour, and canned meats that ranged from 65 pounds of codfish to 1,300 pounds of [illegible]. All other things of a widely varied menu were in proportion and the ships will have been out 434 days all told.

This was no pleasure cruise. All the while the ships were sailing the men were drilled and drilled, guns were manned and marines defended the ship against imaginary invaders. From the crews the officers daily hammered into shape a fighting force that will be able to cope with any in the world. The President will review this fleet with pride on its home coming. The nation will smile with pardonable arrogance over its great achievement. The world will look with renewed interest on the plans for the new sea-going fighters that are being made. And the song Rule Britannia will now be sung with less assurance on the high seas while the lilt of Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean will be fresher and clearer in the world's ears.

Tomorrow—The Motor-Boat Show

ROME, Feb 13.—Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, was received in private farewell audience by the pope today.

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio, Feb 13.—George W. Rollins, a farmer of Extra postoffice, W. Va., has been left $10,000 by Captain G. W. Forrester, a former Ohio river steamboat man, who went several years ago and became wealthy in a bank and mining business in South Dakota. Rollins father saved Forrester from drowning.

NEW YORK, Feb 13.—Officials of the Erie railroad here received the decision of the public service commission in the bond issue matter with some reserve. Several of the restrictions imposed by the commission were evidently quite unexpected. In the application for authority to issue the $30,000,000 bonds, the Erie's representatives stated to the commission that it was the intention of the company to make improvements generally along its entire line.

LONDON, Feb 12.—Edward George Hugh Grosvenor, aged [illegible] years, eldest son of the second Duke of Westminster, and heir to the dukedom, is dead after an operation for appendicitis.

Initial Showing of New Spring Merchandise

We continue our march as the style shop of Colorado Springs. Years of earnest labor, and the faithful exercise of business principles, were spent in attaining this supremacy, and the representation of the new spring merchandise now ready for your inspection not only displays the zeal with which we have endeavored to maintain this achievement, but also serves to establish a new epoch in this city's retailing. We cordially invite your most critical inspection.

Of Interest to the Men

We have, this past week, installed in our men's furnishings department a complete line of ARROW BRAND COLLARS, famed for their superiority of finish and exclusiveness of style. You will find a majority of their newest ideas in all sizes including quarter sizes. The usual prices, 15c each or two for 25c will prevail.

SALE OF NEW SPRING SUITS

While new spring suits are barely shown around town, and while winter is hardly over, Kaufman's come forward with a sale of authentic new suits in the proper fashions that will prevail the ensuing season. We bought them at a very low price and could easily put them in our regular lines and get a large profit out of them. But we don't do business that way. We want to make February one of the best months of this year in the volume of business done and will tomorrow give you the benefit of the purchase by offering it in two lots as follows:

Lot No. One We Think Is the Best Bargain You Will Be Able to Get This Season at

Nobby tailored models for both women and misses, made of good quality serges, panamas and fancy worsteds; in the favored shades of navy, tan, green, grey and gendarme.

Satin bands and satin covered buttons are used for trimmings.

Suits of this character and equal elegance will cost you a great deal more later in the season.

Lot No. Two—Suits Fit for the Most Fastidious Women and Rare Bargains at $19.75

Constructed of a very superior quality serges, panamas and fancy worsteds in a style range so varied that most every taste can be satisfied.

Enhanced with elegant strappings, buttons and folds.

Handsome, new, duo toned effects and navy, tan, grey and mulberry.

Make it a point to be here early for late comers may be disappointed.

New Dress Trimmings

First one line and then another is added to our big stock so that at the present time we have a fascinating assortment of the richest trimmings we could possibly procure.

For instance, you will find rich baby Irish bands in white and cream, elegant net bands from an inch and up in width in ash rose, white, cream, brown, tan, Copenhagen, dark blue, green, black and white, gilt and white, etc., and many new Persian bands in exquisite color combinations.

Nets of Pretty Lace for Waists and Dresses

The magnificent tucked and allover nets of lace which are on display have no equal for beauty of patterns and styles. Shirt waists and dresses made from these beautiful lace nets will have a grace of beauty in shade, makeup and style that has never been attained by you before. You will find it necessary when selecting the materials for your new spring costume to come here first and see this unrivaled display of elegant splendor.

Stimulating February business, is our sole reason for offering these two specials in

Women's Waists

They are just from the makers — fresh, new and dashingly stylish; correct in every detail.

We have slightly underpriced them and you will find them in every way representative values from a stock that knows no equal.

White and ecru net waists with long tucked and insertion-trimmed sleeves, pretty yoke effect finished with bias silk bands and insertion, tucked back. Monday only 2.98

All-over tucked waists of a very fine quality mull, Irish point lace yoke front and back, long tucked sleeves edged with lace. Monday only 2.19

We Mention These New Arrivals Because They Are Specially Attractive

Spring Dress Goods

This will indeed be a serge season—Paris says so. And, as usual, you will find the most comprehensive line at Kaufman's. All the new finishes that fashion demands received only this past week, so you know they are correct. Plain and self stripes in every wanted shade, and cream and black. Priced at 65c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 per yard.

Special attention is asked to our new line of light weight broadcloths for spring and summer wear. They are 54 inches wide and are pre-shrunk and sponged—no bother before you can send it to your dressmaker. Choose from electric blue, navy, pearl grey, champagne, taupe, ashes of rose and the new shades of wine and green. Prices are $2.00 and $3.00 per yard, according to quality.

Making Buttons is a specialty with us.

We Inaugurate the Spring Season this Week with a

Sale of New Spring Silks

Satin messalines have already established a wide popularity. Looking through the pages of a high class fashion magazine, showing the new Paris gowns for spring, we found in each instance the materials used were either satin messalines or satin directoires. Isn't that a striking tribute to its correctness? Now, those are the kind of goods we offer you in this opening sale—not old, shop-worn fabrics, but goods that are new and just from the makers, goods that you want and will need this season.

19-inch Satin Messalines in 20 new shades and cream and black, regularly 75c per yard; this week 55c

New figured and soft-striped messaline and soft finished taffeta silks, also plains and brocades in every new and staple shade, regularly $1.00 per yard. This week 85c

36-inch Satin Messalines in 12 new shades and cream and black, regularly $1.50 per yard; this week........ 1.10

Cheney Bros' striped and figured foulard silks in fashionable shades and colorings—the very best we ever offered regularly at 85c per yard. This week only 75c

Boys' Wash Suits

Mothers of little boys will be glad to know of these new arrivals in wash suits for spring and summer.

Several new ideas have entered into the making—both in style and colorings. They prove unusually attractive.

Tub tested galateas, linens, madras, chambrays, etc., afford an excellent range for choosing.

An extra choice number at $2.48.

A still better one may be had at $2.98.

subsequent Congress to remove the constitutional prohibition referred to. It is our belief also that this being a question of constitutional interpretation, that instead of this House passing this bill, the whole matter should be referred to the House committee on judiciary for its opinion.

"We do not believe that a provision of the constitution that is clear and emphatic should be sought to be annulled or suspended in the manner attempted by the passage of this bill.

"We believe the mischief undertaken to be provided against by this provision of the constitution clearly embraces the act of appointing one of the United States senators to the office of secretary of state.

"It might be said and truly, that this mischief is remote in any event. However this may be, it contains sufficient danger for the framers of the constitution to provide against. If the constitution prohibits it surely it cannot be argued that if this prohibition can be so easily overcome by the device of reducing the salary below what in the judgment of Congress it should be, with the hope, which in this case is almost a certainty, of the salary being restored to its present amount that that would not be clear evasion of the plain provision of the constitution.

"The office of secretary of state will probably be held for eight years by its next incumbent, and a designing senator could reasonably anticipate that although his salary would be temporarily reduced in the closing years of his senatorial term, that at the expiration of that term it would through his influence be restored."

WESTERN BALL MANAGERS MEET TO MAKE SCHEDULE

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 13.—Owners and managers of the clubs in the Western Baseball league began gathering here this evening for the schedule meeting, to be held tomorrow and Monday. Frank Isbell and John Holland, joint owners of the Wichita club, were the first to arrive, and were joined later by Gunthorp of Denver and Carlisle of Pueblo. President O'Neill and other members will arrive tomorrow, when work on the schedule will begin.

Nearly every owner has the draft of a schedule made out, but it is thought it will not be difficult to harmonize them.

CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Abe Attell, champion featherweight of the world, and Jem Driscoll, champion featherweight of England, will meet in a 10-round contest at the National Athletic club Friday night.

SPORTING NOTES

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 13.—Former British and National Champion Walter J. Travers won the president's, or first division cup, in the fifth annual St. Valentine's golf tournament today by defeating C. L. Becker of the Woodland Golf club, Massachusetts, 3 up and 2 to play, in a brilliant match. The consolation trophy went to E. L. Scofield of Weeburn, 3 up and 1 to play.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Harold F. McCormick of the University club, Chicago, easily defeated Erskine Hewitt of the Racquet tennis club, in the final round of the racquet championship for the gold racquet today, by three straight games. J. Gordon Douglas, the winner of last year's title, defaulted, which placed McCormick and Hewitt in the finals. McCormick's quickness in service and return of some seemingly impossible shots won him the victory.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Notre Dame defeated Cornell at basketball here tonight by the score of 32 to 12.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Miss Marie Wagner won her second holding of the Women's national indoor lawn tennis championship in the singles today on the board courts at the Seventh regiment armory. In the final of the tournament, Miss Wagner met her rival, Miss E. H. Moore, the four-times holder of the national outdoor title, and the first to hold the indoors honors. The match was most peculiar in that it finished with the score 6-0, 12-14, 6-0, a performance almost unheard of in the sport.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 13.—Sydney Hatch of Chicago and Joe Forshaw of the Missouri Athletic club, both members of the American Marathon team at London, were defeated in a 15-mile race at the Coliseum here tonight by J. Erxleben, a local runner. Forshaw, who finished third to Hayes in London, took second place tonight, but Hatch did not finish. The event was the principal contest of the annual indoor meet of St. Louis university. Athletes of the Indiana university took part in the program.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 13.—Dorando Pietro, the Marathon runner, was a mile and a quarter ahead tonight at the finish of a 12-mile race, in which three Ohio runners, G. W. Schaffer, W. W. Farley and Raymond Roberts, relayed against him. His time was one hour, 5 minutes, and 33 seconds.

never allowed minor considerations to interfere with his train of argument. As a statesman he was the embodiment of all other great Americans with the added distinction of his own great personality. Beyond all these considerations, it is for his great qualities of heart that Lincoln will be longest remembered. Unlike such great Americans as Webster and Clay, Lincoln lies close to the heart of every man and woman because of the simplicity, the courage, the sympathy, honesty and love of truth that brought him near to his people and saved him from being regarded as a being of superior clay who could not bend from his pinnacle of fame to the joys and sorrows of the ordinary man and woman. Where other great men have been respected and admired, Lincoln was and is respected, admired and loved.

An Inspiration to All.

"There is nothing new that one may say of Lincoln," said Mr. Thomas, "but every time he is discussed, whether it be by the President of the United States or by the humblest school teacher in the Union, the effect can not but be for the good of the rising generations, for from whatever aspect Lincoln is viewed he is an inspiration for all mankind."

The Tragic End.

After dwelling on the great qualities of heart and soul which sustained Lincoln through the terrible trials of the Civil war without losing the lovable characteristics that endeared him to the people, Mr. Thomas referred to his tragic death as in one sense a fitting end to his altogether unique career.

"It may have been a wise disposition of Providence," he said, "that ordained that Lincoln should be cut down at the zenith of his fame, for had he lived to contend, as he would have been forced to do, with the bickerings and dissensions of the period of reconstruction, it might have been that even his noble nature would have broken down under the strain and he might have done and said things that would have left a blemish on his hitherto unspotted character."

GREAT REJOICING ON KING'S RETURN

result of the sovereign's short stay in Berlin.

The visit certainly has had a wonderful effect upon the mind of the British public and the antagonism against Germany seems to have disappeared. Berlin's cordial reception of the king has paved the way for this and communications have been given out by the British and German officials in which mutual satisfaction is expressed relative to the aims and foreign policies of the two governments.

All this has been so sudden that the question is already being raised how long it will last. Diplomats who have been watching recent events closely are optimistic. They point out that British and German interests do not clash in any part of the world, and that the bitterness between the two nations really arose out of jealousy over affairs in the near east, the present cockpit of Europe. Their aims, however, have been declared identical and Germany having reached an agreement with France regarding Morocco, there appears nothing on the horizon over which they can quarrel.

The endurance of the Anglo-German rapprochement, it is recognized, largely depends on that between Germany and France, for in recent years the difference between Germany and Great Britain arose largely from Germany's supposed hostile attitude towards Great Britain's new-found French friends.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—Chancellor Von Buelow is hopeful of good results from the recent visit to Berlin of King Edward and in this connection he today expressed himself as follows:

"The conversations between English and German statesmen, held while the king was here, have evoked sincere satisfaction on the German side and they justify the firm expectation that because of the visit of the king, the confidence in the loyalty of both England and Germany and the understanding of the political aims of both countries will be strengthened. The discussion of the Balkan question revealed a far-reaching agreement both in regard to the endeavors of Great Britain and Germany for the preservation of peace and in the attitude of each government toward the new regime in Turkey."

The city is planning to name a new section of Berlin the English quarters, in commemoration of the visit of King Edward. The streets of this section, which are now being graded, will be given the names of leading English cities.

PASSAGE OF BUREAU OF MINES BILL IS URGED

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 13.—Answering an urgent call sent out by the American Mining congress for aid in inducing the United States Senate to consider the bureau of mines bill at this session of Congress, the Los Angeles chamber of commerce, representing interest of California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, today sent messages to Vice President Fairbanks, Senator Dick, the chairman of the committee of mines and mining and to Senator Frank Flint of California, urging them to use every endeavor to have the bill favorably considered by the present session. The importance of the establishment of a bureau of mines is set forth in the message.

MOUNTAIN TRAFFIC DELAYED BY BLIZZAAD

Worst Storm of Winter Is Raging in Colorado D. & R. G. Suffers the Most.

DENVER, Feb. 13.—The worst blizzard of the winter is raging in the mountains of Colorado tonight, and as a result railway lines that have been tied up nearly a week, and which the officials believed were about to be opened, will probably continue blockaded for several days more.

The Denver and Rio Grande has called in its snow plows from Marshall and Poncha passes on its narrow gauge lines, but has thus far managed to keep open to traffic the Tennessee pass on the main line between Denver and Salt Lake City.

The Rio Grande Southern is practically out of business. The Leadville-Gunnison line of the Colorado and Southern is still closed. The blizzard struck Denver about 1 o'clock this afternoon and continued until 9 o'clock. Street car traffic was greatly delayed.

It's surprising how many friends you have when they need you.

HELENA, Mont., Feb. 13.—That the proposed anti-Japanese legislation will be favorably acted upon by the lower branch of the state assembly was the prediction made by several members of that body tonight. The memorial congress, it is now asserted, will be modified in accordance with the recommendation of the committee on labor, to which it has been referred.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The students of Columbia university have taken steps to curb the practice of hazing and a decree has been issued which says that the only hazing in which sophomores will be allowed to participate is a tea party to the freshmen on the opening day of school. Action was taken by influential students on the ground that freshmen were being unduly annoyed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—When consideration of the Indian appropriation bill was resumed in the house today an agreement was reached whereby general debate shall conclude Tuesday afternoon next at 2 o'clock.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The state department is considering the question of despatching an American war vessel to Liberia, where alarm is felt for the safety of British and French citizens employed in the customs service of the republic. The present situation, according to official advices, may result in the passing of its 40,000 miles of territory into alien lands.

PLAUDITS PLEASE THE PRESIDENT

ROOSEVELT GLAD HE IS STILL POPULAR WITH PEOPLE.

Much Attention Shown Chief Executive on His Return Trip to Capital From Kentucky.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—After a railroad journey of 850 miles in each direction taken for the purpose of making a 30 minute speech on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of a memorial building on the site in Larue county, Kentucky, of the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, President Roosevelt and his wife and daughter returned to Washington at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The trip consumed just [illegible] hours.

The return trip was practically without incident. The most interesting event was a brief speech to railroad employes at Harrisburg, Pa. In this address, which was little more than a minute's duration, the President spoke of the railroad man as a model type of American citizenship and said that because of his alertness, self reliance and willingness to obey orders he was just the sort of man that would be most useful in case of another war, which however he hoped would never come.

The President passed the day largely in conversation with Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary Wright. At many places along the road there were crowds of people who waved their salutations as the train flew by. The President lost few opportunities to show his appreciation of the interest thus manifested. He went frequently waving his handkerchief or lifting his hat. In conversation he spoke feelingly of these indications of popular interest and expressed especial satisfaction over the fact that the people generally seemed to feel as much interest in him now that his term of office was about to close as they felt when it was beginning.

The President and the members of his party found in the cornerstone ceremonies an incident worthy of their warm admiration and he commented freely upon it as one of the interesting occasions in which he has participated as President. He did not fail to take notice of the decorous demeanor of the country people of Kentucky, who, like himself, went to the birthplace of the great Civil war President to do him honor and to note that in paying their homage to a departed President, they were also deferential in their treatment of his living successor in office.

Returning to Washington members of the party referred to the fact that the trip to Kentucky was the last of the many long tours made by Mr. Roosevelt since he became President, and it was generally agreed that no other chief executive had ever afforded the people of the whole country so many opportunities to become personally acquainted with him.

D. & R. G. TRAIN ROBBED

The mail clerks, W. H. Coulter of 1071 South [illegible] street and G. R. Taylor of 1124 [illegible] street, came to the door when called by [illegible]. They did not shoot, for both were unarmed. Once they appeared in the door they were covered by the hold-up and ordered to step from the car. The sight of the revolvers proved as convincing an argument in their case as it had been in the case of Gunn and Lessig. Both were told to take their places beside Lessig and Gunn. They were placed next to the car, with the smaller of the bandits covering them with his revolver, while the other filled a bag with the registered mail.

Asks for [illegible]

The leader, a red-haired fellow, jumped in the car first. He had been in the car but a few moments when he appeared and called to his confederate to send one of the mail clerks into the car. Both Coulter and Taylor started for the door. A revolver thrust into his face with the explanation that one man was enough caused Coulter to step back to where Gunn and Lessig were standing.

Once in the car with the bandit Taylor was commanded to show where the registered mail was kept. Thinking he might save the valuables, Taylor informed the man that he did not handle the mail, Coulter being the man in charge of the car. The alternative of being shot on the spot or giving up the registered packages soon brought the clerk to his senses. Once shown the pouches the robber busied himself examining them carefully. For some minutes he examined the various parcels, exhibiting delight when he found a large, square looking package consigned to Salt Lake City. Usually packages of this sort contain money, a fact which evidently was known to the fellow.

While Taylor and the leader of the bandits were in the car the other bandit kept up a constant volley of shots, sending the bullets along the row of Pullmans and day coaches. Evidently it was his desire to frighten the passengers and the rest of the train crew so they would not go to the assistance of the engine crew and the mail clerks. J. L. [illegible]arsen, the conductor, stepped off the train as soon as it had come to a stop and after sending W. S. Barnes, his brakeman, to the rear of the train to flag any train which might come up behind him, he walked toward the engine to investigate the cause of the shooting. When he realized what was taking place he started for a nearby house.

Passengers Stay in Coaches.

None of the passengers left the coaches. Most of them did not learn what had taken place until the train pulled into the union depot.

Once he had secured the registered mail, the leader of the bandits ordered Coulter and Taylor, the clerks, back into the car. Ordering Lessig and Gunn to walk ahead, he and his companion marched the engineer and fireman up the track, the leader carrying the sack containing the mail. They then fired a few parting shots and disappeared, presumably to the east, where companions were waiting with a rig or auto.

The train men at once notified Denver police and railroad officers and detectives were sent to the scene in autos. They with men under the Arapahoe sheriff at once formed posses to follow the robbers.

They are believed to have come to Denver.

Postmaster Alex J. Strachan of this city denies that any registered mail from this city was on the looted train as has been reported, and says that the number of the supposed missing package is the number of a registry sack, which was empty when it left this city on the train. Mr. Strachan points out that the registry division of the local postoffice closed last Friday in time to send all registered matter on a train leaving earlier than Rio Grande No. 4.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 13.—Ptomain poisoning, said to have resulted from the eating of peanuts, caused the death last night of Catherine Lydon, aged 7 years, after an illness of a few hours.

LAS ANIMAS, Colo., Feb. 13.—While Santa Fe passenger train No. 6, east bound, was proceeding slowly over a stretch of track where improvements are being made this morning several coaches left the rails. A tramp, who was riding beneath one of the derailed coaches, was fatally hurt and the engineer and fireman slightly injured. The passengers escaped injury.

HEPBURN MAY HAVE A PLACE ON COMMISSION

Bill Now Pending to Increase Membership of Interstate Commerce Body

Special to the Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—If the bill now pending in Congress to increase the membership of the Interstate Commerce commission from seven to nine becomes law, there is good reason to believe that "Uncle Pete" Hepburn of Iowa, for many years chairman of the House committee on Interstate and foreign commerce, will be named as one of the additional commissioners. Colonel Hepburn was defeated at the November election for re-election to Congress. As the official count gave a plurality of only 300 against him it has been understood he would contest the seat of his successful opponent. Word comes now from Iowa, however, that the Hepburn managers have practically abandoned the fight.

Colonel Hepburn as the author of the Hepburn anti-rebate act, and because of his long service at the head of the House committee is recognized as an authority on the subjects with which the Interstate commerce commission has to deal and should the size of the commission be increased either President Roosevelt or President-elect Taft would be glad to nominate him a member of that body.

It is understood however that Mr. Taft has no special anxiety to see the bill increasing the membership enacted into law. He would much prefer a law placing the whole business of regulating railroads under an executive department allowing the commission to become a quasi-judicial body. Mr. Taft doesn't believe a commission of even seven members is fitted to discharge executive duties, and in his opinion the situation would be rather harmed than helped by increasing the size of the commission.

In fact the entire matter of railroad regulation is at present in a very unsatisfactory state and a complete reorganization of the system is likely to follow from the text of one of Mr. Taft's early messages to Congress. While Mr. Taft is in thorough sympathy with the objects sought to be accomplished by [illegible] his judicial experience on [illegible] him that the methods by which [illegible] are sought are wrong [illegible] agree with him in this view.

It [illegible] said there is no longer [illegible] railroad men any serious opposition to government regulation. They have come to recognize that the railroads must submit to it and their only demand now is that the regulation shall be the most scientific and practical which can be had. Mr. Taft is in sympathy with this demand but it remains to be seen whether Congress will act favorably on the recommendations he will make.

A SQUARE-DEAL

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and these are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles in them, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or other organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

To find out more about the above mentioned diseases and all about the body in health and disease, get the Common Sense Medical Adviser—the People's Schoolmaster in Medicine—revised and up-to-date book of 1000 pages—which treats of diseased conditions and the practical, successful treatment of same. CLEARING HOUSE BANK CURE FOR MONEY ILLS

Should Be Owned by All the Banks: Not by One Bank, or Government, Declares Treat

BALTIMORE, Feb. 13.—"Give us a national clearing house bank to be owned by all the banks—not by the government or by one bank."

This is the plea made tonight by Charles H. Treat, treasurer of the United States, in an address before the Baltimore chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks.

"The bank," Mr. Treat declared, "should have [illegible] and be allowed to issue national bank currency and be a government depository and a reserve agent for all banks doing business with it. It should have the right to buy and sell foreign exchange and the privilege of rediscounting the bankable paper of its shareholders at a rate of interest not exceeding 4 per cent, of which 25 per cent would be left as a margin as is now done by the Clearing House Bank association in its loans.

"The clearing house bank would furnish a market for the balances of urban banks to be invested in commercial paper at convenient seasons during the year," said Mr. Treat. "It would also give an opportunity for the city banks to invest their money more in commercial paper and less on the stock exchange. This method would give elasticity to our credits as well as an ample supply of currency, and there would be no scarcity or famines in currency thereafter."

Mr. Treat declared the national banking system richly deserved credit instead of the persistent attacks made upon it. This system was not too expansive, nor inelastic. Rather it gave a fair return on investment and protected the government's credit. Mr. Treat said it would be a dangerous fallacy to permit national bank notes to be counted as reserve, and said that this would inaugurate such a wild expansion as would make the greenback craze seem infantile.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 13.—Sixty persons were compelled to flee half clad, early today from a fire that destroyed a large tenement house at McKees Rock, a suburb.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 13.—A petition bearing 10,000 signatures was received by Senator [illegible] today, asking for the submission to the voters of Iowa of the state constitutional amendment, providing for absolute prohibition. The signers are from practically every town and village in the state.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—All doubts as to the continuance of Frank Chance as captain-manager of the Chicago National league baseball club were set at rest today with the arrival of Mr. Chance from his California home. Chance said he was in excellent condition and ready to take up matters connected with the spring training trip.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 13.—John T. Morgan, former tax collector of McKees Rock, a suburb, who last week pleaded guilty to charges of forgery and embezzlement, was sentenced today to serve 15 years in the penitentiary and pay a fine of $5,000. Morgan told the court that he had been robbed of $20,000 on a street in New York City.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 13.—Burdette Bell, who murdered Cuvier Dury because he stole his wife from him and was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter by a jury two days ago, was today sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. The maximum penalty is eight years. Bell was from Cincinnati and Dury was formerly a resident of Dayton, Ohio.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 13.—Stanley [illegible] Taft, 26 years of age, son of Rev. George W. Taft and said to be a relative of the president-elect, is in a serious condition today as a result of being waylaid by a negro thug late last night at Wilkinsburg, a suburb. The young man was found unconscious lying near the railroad tracks.

PROTECTION ASKED FOR ELK IN MOUNTAINS

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 13.—Protection for elk in the shape of a winter refuge is the proposal contained in a memorial to Congress asking that a tract of land south of Yellowstone park be set aside. The suggestion comes from the Wyoming legislature and is the outcome of reports that 20,000 elk are starving in the mountains of western Wyoming. Communications have been received from lodges of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks all over the country asking that the government take steps to protect the great elk herd.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN WEDS

Marries Woman Who Was Born Sixteen Years After He Went Into Service

It isn't every Civil war veteran who is young enough to marry at this late date, but Joseph King, aged 62 years proved his youth yesterday by taking out a license to marry Mrs. Adeline Wilson. Both live in this city. The prospective bride is 32 years old and, therefore, was born 16 years after King entered the service of the Union in the Civil war. He was born in Mexico, and his real name is Rafael Cortinas but receives a pension from the United States under the name of Joseph King, which name he adopted after his arrival in this country.

GRAND RIVER VALLEY LAND A GOOD INVESTMENT

We are pleased to call attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Perkins, Morton and Noble on page 14 of this issue regarding the sale of orchard lands in the Grand River valley by The Antlers Orchard Development company of this city.

The gentlemen composing and managing this company are well known local business men. Messrs. Thomas F. Curtin, Horace K. Devereux and E. A. Sunderlin, who have during the past year secured title to some 2,000 acres of choice orchard lands, located at Antlers on the Rio Grande Junction railway, together with ample water rights.

These lands have been carefully surveyed and platted and a large expenditure been made in the construction of ditches and perfecting an irrigating system that enables the company to offer the same to purchasers under most attractive conditions.

From what we hear of the orchard business in the Grand River valley, and the prestige of its fruit for marketable qualities, it would seem that the ownership of a bearing orchard there should give content to any man.

PARK COMMISSION PLANS IMPROVEMENTS

MANY SUGGESTIONS MADE IN FIRST REPORT.

Playground, Gymnasium, Bath House and Bandstand Among New Features Proposed

Many improvements are suggested in the first report of the park commission which covers the 18 months the commission has been in operation. The report has been submitted to Mayor D. N. Heizer and the City Council will also be presented with a copy.

The report recommends that a playground including a gymnasium, tennis court, wading pool, etc., be installed in Monument Valley park just south of the lake near Willamette avenue and that a bandstand be erected in the park for future use. A public bathhouse in the southwestern part of Antlers park and an art museum near the public library are also suggested. A complete system of parkways from the boulevard south past the Union Printers home to Prospect lake, then west ward to connect with Cheyenne boulevard is another proposed improvement. The building of refreshment stands in the public parks is also advised.

General W. J. Palmer, who gave to this city most of its park system, is highly praised in the report. Another feature is the detailed report of E. C. van Diest, engineer of the commission.

There is still a large fund left for maintenance available until the year 1917. The fund was originally $45,000, of which $8,000 was available in 1908 and other amounts will be at hand in decreasing annual sums until a final payment of $1,700 is made in 1917.

Maintenance is given as the chief item of expense in the $28,136.23 comprising the total disbursements. Irrigation came next with more than $3,000. More than $3,000 was spent in permanent construction work. Removing debris cost more than $1,500. The largest amount, $10,392, was spent in Monument Valley park.

The chief item in the receipts are $12,618.05 appropriated by the city and the $8,000 given by General Palmer.

The park board comprises Horace G. Lunt, Irving Howbert, Frank F. Castello, J. F. Lilly, D. V. Donaldson and E. C. van Diest.

WILL USE OLD RAILROAD

Original C. and S. Line to Denver to Handle Through Freight After May 23

The original line of the Colorado and Southern between Denver and Colorado Springs, through Elizabeth, Elbert and Falcon, is to be reballasted and made a main line for through freight when the Burlington places its new train service in effect on May 23. It is probable that the present passenger service on that line may be increased. This report, emanating from an authentic source in Denver, reached Colorado Springs last evening.

It is stated that the improvement will be made to relieve the heavy traffic over the main line which will be increased by the new passenger trains which the Burlington will place in service.

ROBBINS ENLARGES STORE

Adds 2,500 Square Feet Floor Space to Present Store

With the acquisition of 2,500 square feet additional floor space Robbins, on the corner, now has one of the largest clothing stores in the west. The building at 28 South Tejon street, formerly occupied by M. Greenberg, has been leased by Mr. R. G. Robbins and an arch will be constructed joining the two buildings. The new store will be used exclusively for the shoe department and will be opened by March 1. It is the intention of the Robbins company to handle the best lines of men's, women's and children's shoes.

A complete stock of Sorosis shoes for women, the Churchill $5 shoes, Ralston Health and Douglas shoes for men, Budd's baby shoes, the Educator shoes for men, women and children, and other well-known lines.

The room now occupied by the shoe department will be remodeled and made into a department exclusively for boys and young men's clothing, hats and furnishings and will be called the boys' store. The space now occupied by the boys' department will be used for the hat, pant, clothing and furnishing departments.

The Robbins company are offering big price cuts on their entire stock to make room for the workmen and facilitate the changing of departments.

Gardner	left forward	Robbins
Satterlund	center	L. Gleason
Wilson	right guard	R. Gleason

VALENTINES INCREASE SIZE OF THE MAILS

An avalanche of mail descended upon the Colorado Springs postoffice yesterday, when many thousand of valentines were sent upon their sentimental mission. Many of the valentines are real art creations, costing from $5 to $10. The fearful penny valentines were sold by the thousands, catching the fancy of those who wish to anonymously convey to their friends what may perhaps be their true estimate of them.

MORE SPRINGS MEN BUY FLORIDA LAND

REPRESENTS INVESTMENT OF MORE THAN $300,000.

W. K. Jewett, F. Gilpin, H. Bryant and A. N. Hall Incorporate Big Everglade Company

Following closely on the heels of other Colorado Springs men who have invested heavily in land in the Everglades of Florida, W. K. Jewett, Francis Gilpin, Harold Bryant and A. N. Hall, all of this city, have incorporated the Florida Everglades Land company to take over 67,000 acres of land in that district which represents an expenditure of upwards of $300,000. The company is capitalized for $275,000 divided into 27,500 shares of a par value of $10 each. The officers have not been elected.

The land is in the Lake Okeechobee region about 100 miles northwest of Miami, Fla. It is what is known as muck land and is being reclaimed by a comprehensive drainage process. It will be entirely drained in about 18 months, according to indications, when the property will be platted into small tracts and sold. The land is said to be very fertile, and in addition to sugar cane is adapted to raising all kinds of vegetables and general farm produce.

MRS. BEERY, PIONEER, DIES

Sister of F. F. Castello Dies at Colorado City While on Visit to Daughter

After an illness of only a few days, Mrs. Julia Beery, wife of William H. Beery of Cripple Creek and a sister of F. F. Castello of this city and a resident of Colorado for 46 years, died from heart failure at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Conboy, 217 Jackson avenue, Colorado City, yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. She was 62 years old, and in addition to the relatives mentioned above, is survived by the following children: Leslie and Frank Beery and Mrs. George Allen, all of Cripple Creek. A sister, Mrs. William Barrett, also lives in Cripple Creek, and two brothers, Joseph Castello of Rico, Colo., and John Castello of Florissant, will arrive for the funeral, arrangements for which have not been completed.

F. F. Castello, a brother of Mrs. Beery, is one of the most prominent mining men in this state. He is president of the Colorado Springs Mining Stock association, and also of the Mary McKinney Mining company, and is treasurer of the Cripple Creek Drainage and Tunnel company, as well as a member of the executive committee of that organization.

Mrs. Beery came to Colorado with her husband in 1863, the couple first locating at Fairplay, in Park county. They removed to Cripple Creek about two years ago. Mrs. Beery's health began failing some time ago, but no serious trouble was feared. She arrived on a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Conboy, in Colorado City, last month, and a few days ago was attacked with heart trouble. Her condition took a decided change for the worse yesterday morning and she sank rapidly, passing away in the afternoon.

Postponed Again at the Request of Assistant District Attorney M. W. Purcell.

At the request of Assistant District Attorney M. W. Purcell, the preliminary examination of Robert E. Piper and Paul S. Essick, accused of the murder of the late Charles F. Eck on the morning of December 29, 1908, was continued indefinitely by Justice O. R. Dunnington yesterday morning. It is thought that the case will be called for hearing this week.

Attorney Purcell is in Denver looking up a decision of the state supreme court with regard to the legal age of a person between his sixteenth and seventeenth birthday. The prosecuting attorney's action follows that of J. A. Orr, attorney for the defendants, in moving that young Essick be placed directly before the juvenile court instead of having his examination in justice court. Attorney Orr holds that Essick, who was 16 years old last June, comes under the heading of persons "16 years old and under" who shall be arraigned for alleged offenses in the juvenile court. Purcell maintains that Essick is no longer 16 years old—that he was in his seventeenth year the day after his sixteenth birthday—and is trying to cite a precedent from a supreme court decision.

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE TO ARRANGE PRIMARIES

Chairman D. F. Law will call a meeting of the Republican city central committee for Tuesday, March 2, to arrange for the primaries to elect delegates to the city convention which in turn will nominate candidates for the municipal election April 6. It is understood that City Clerk E. C. F. Whittaker and City Treasurer F. A. Bartholomew are candidates for renomination.

The members of the committee are W. H. Spurgeon, ward 1; C. C. Hamlin, ward 2; vacant, ward 3; Joseph Strong, ward 4; E. C. Hammond, ward 5; William Banning, ward 6; W. H. Metz, ward 7; W. P. Kinney, ward 8; W. F. Proctor, colored, at large. A. C. Poinier is secretary of the committee.

ENJOYABLE VALENTINE PARTY

The theory class of Loretto academy gave an enjoyable valentine party yesterday afternoon at the convent. Musical games were played and dainty refreshments were served. Prizes were won by Miss Mary E. Neville and Miss Vivian A. Beebe. Among those present were the Misses Mary Neville, Sallie Brown, Adelaide Carr, Rosella O'Driscoll, Adell Bowman, Vivian Beebe, Ellen Kelly, Grace Fitzgerald, Marie Landmasser, Bertha Belque, Fay Driscoll, Katherine Casey, Mamie Schmidt, Anna Schlegel, Kathrine Fritz, Marie Monkhe, Dewey Bulger, Dorothy Wheaton and Gladys Hill.

Walk to Your Meals Like a Man

Eat What You Will and Learn to Enjoy Food and to Digest It.

HERE'S THE SECRET, FREE

Make up your mind after reading this that you will let the next meal hold no terrors for you.

You can enjoy it. You can digest it. All that is needed is to give nature the juices she lacks, to give the stomach a chance to remove the terrible irritating acids, alkalies and gases which turn food and nourishment into gas and decomposition.

When a system is run down and depleted it needs building up. Ashes won't rekindle a fire and wrong digestive fluids will not take proper juices from food no matter how good the food is.

Is this common sense? Men spend years and even life experimenting on the human system, what it lacks in disease and what it needs in perfection. This knowledge is known to every physician or should be. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are compressed natural vegetable and fruit essences which when mixed with the saliva of the mouth go into the stomach capable of digesting a full meal and they digest it to the uttermost shred. Then such a meal does a man good and it gives to him the means to overcome stomach troubles. Forty thousand physicians use these tablets and charge you for writing a testimonial of their merit which they call a prescription. Any druggist in America or Canada will sell you a box for 50c. Think of it. Every druggist carries them. Here's common sense again. Don't this tell you there is merit? Go to your druggist today, buy a package and walk up to your meals knowing that they will not cause you pain. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

AUTOMOBILIST IS FINED

F. P. Sinton Pays $20 and Costs for Running Down Boy Bicycle Rider.

One of the first instances of conviction under the recently-passed traffic ordinance occurred in police court yesterday afternoon, when F. P. Sinton was fined $20 and costs.

It appears that Sinton drove his automobile over a bicycle ridden by William Griffith, a young boy, near the corner of Platte and Cascade avenues, Friday afternoon. The bicycle was demolished and the bicyclist was slightly bruised. In addition to paying his fine, Sinton agreed to make good the loss of the bicycle.

A fine point of the traffic ordinance was raised during the trial. It was shown that Griffith and Sinton, while going south and passing around a southbound coal wagon, on Cascade avenue, each took a different course. Griffith passed to the left, as is provided in the ordinance, but Sinton passed the wagon to the right, colliding with the bicyclist after both had gone ahead of the coal wagon. It was this violation of the ordinance that placed the blame of the accident on the automobilist. The matter was not reported to the police, but Chief W. S. Reynolds heard of it and ordered all parties into court.

Tent Cottage Sanatorium

105 CHEYENNE ROAD

These are homes intended for two or three people. They are fully equipped for light housekeeping, have three rooms, with electric lights, water, the best of beds, a north and a south porch, altogether securing all the comforts of the home with all the advantages of a tent. The circulation of air is so controlled that it can be warmed to suit the patient, or be just as cool as the air outside. They are within one block of the street car line, so the patients reach town with only one fare. The [illegible] to the cottages, both forenoon and afternoon. The treatment that is used in the sanatorium has been found successful in controlling fever, night sweats, hemorrhages, and in getting rid of the bacilli in a short time, and in producing a natural appetite with perfect assimilation of food. All those interested in tuberculosis are cordially invited to visit this sanatorium and mingle with the patients and note their improvement. Correspondence invited.

FRED S. TUCKER

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous diarrhea), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections, it is often successful in effecting cures.

The "Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak, worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulae of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

What makes a woman proud of her children is to be able to tell the wonderful things they did, just as if they really did them.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATES

Engineers Are Measuring Horsepower of Colorado's Streams, Says W. B. Freeman.

That the federal government has 35 stations in Colorado devoted to the work of measuring the horsepower stored up in the streams of this state was the statement made last night at a meeting of the Colorado Polytechnic society in Coburn library by W. B. Freeman, an expert engineer employed in the geographical division of the United States survey. Another statement of interest was that the streams of Colorado are now furnishing 40,000 horsepower through power plants already in operation or in course of construction, and that this is only a small part of what the streams of the state are capable of producing. In the entire Union the streams are now furnishing 5,000,000 horsepower, as against 20,000,000 horsepower furnished by steam.

The work of the government in measuring the streams of this state is being carried on in harmony with that of numerous power companies who give the government engineers access to their measuring systems, so that with the 35 stations operated by the government a very fair estimate of the water power of the state is being obtained and a comprehensive report will be issued in the near future.

LAKE GEORGE ICE CROP LARGER THAN EVER BEFORE

C. M. Loughlin of this city, who returned last night from Lake George, states that the ice crop there is the largest in many years. More than 100,000 tons have been cut and the supply appears to be inexhaustible. The Rock Island, Santa Fe, Colorado Midland and Colorado and Southern have each been supplied with 25,000 tons and other contracts will keep the cutters busy until spring. The ice is of the very finest quality.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Auld has returned from a week's visit in Denver.

William Ward of Alamosa is registered at the Alta Vista.

Miss Bertha Lell of Detroit, Mich., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Johnson of 302 West Dale street.

Mrs. J. T. Adams and her daughter, Miss Emma Adams of 1002 North Wahsatch avenue, have returned from Chicago where they attended the funeral of Mrs. Adams' son, George, who died recently in New York and was buried in Chicago last Wednesday.

Word has been received in this city of the death of Mrs. T. J. Burns at Lafayette, Ind., last Sunday. Mrs. Burns was a sister of Miss Lida Owen Murray of 1112 East San Rafael street, this city, and was well known here. Death resulted from an operation.

Philip P. Stewart of this city, who is living temporarily in Santa Barbara, Cal., is in Colorado Springs on business. Mr. Stewart is well known here. He is a personal friend of President Roosevelt and entertained the latter here when he passed through this city on his bear-hunting trip a few years ago.

READY FOR "THE MASCOT"

Last Rehearsal Goes Well and Good Show Is Assured. Seat Sale Heavy.

The sale of seats at the box office now guarantees a crowded house tomorrow night to witness the opening production of "The Mascot" at the Opera House, for the benefit of Camp Vigil, the summer camp founded last year by the Rev. Henry Rutgers Remsen for the benefit of the less fortunate boys and girls of the city.

The last work of preparation for the production was put on last night when the company of 100, under direction of Otto L. Jeancon, with the orchestra of

REV. HENRY RUTGERS REMSEN,

Founder and Senior Master of Camp Vigil, Located Between [illegible] and Cripple Creek.

10 pieces under direction of Clarence D. Sears, went through a full dress rehearsal of the entire play. The rehearsal went splendidly and an excellent performance is assured for tomorrow night. The costumes are elaborate and make a striking effect in the scenes in which the chorus takes part. The music goes well and all the principals have their lines learned so well that there was not a single occasion for the prompter to do anything [illegible].

Special scenery for the last two acts came down from Denver yesterday, where it was chosen by J. W. Myers, stage manager of the Opera House. This scenery has never been used before and it adds greatly to the effect.

The opera will be put on [illegible] by the following cast of principals:

Bettina, the mascot, Miss Emma D. Bold.

Flametta, daughter of Lorenzo XVII, Miss Carolyn May.

Lorenzo XVII, prince of Piombino, Mr. Otto L. Jeancon.

Frederic, prince of Pisa, Mr. C. H. Carrington.

Rocco, a farmer, Mr. George E. Burdee.

Pippo, a shepherd, Mr. [illegible].

Paola, a peasant girl, Miss Ruth Thornton.

[illegible], Miss Edna Young.

Parafante, sergeant, Mr. Warren Sears.

First soldier, Mr. George Tyler.

[illegible], Mr. Robert Norgate.

Chorus of [illegible] and ladies of court, soldiers [illegible].

The executive staff of the play is composed of Clarence D. Sears, manager; [illegible] J. Johnson, [illegible]; Mr. Koppes, assistant manager; George Tyler, treasurer; E. [illegible], advertising manager; J. F. [illegible], press agent.

How I Took the Hair Off My Face

The Same, Sure Remedy Which Cured Me, Will Be Sent You FREE.
It Will Not Burn or Injure the Skin

Don't Use a Razor.

"Yes, there was a time when I could hardly bear to look at myself in the glass," said a well known society beauty. "I was hideous and I knew it and my friends knew it, even if they said nothing to me

I don't care whether it's just a few stray hairs or a full fledged mustache, hair on a woman's face will spoil her beauty. That's all there is to that. I know. Of course I tried the electric needle and all the other remedies I ever heard of. And, of course, the hair came back. It always will with such remedies. They don't really kill the hair. They just burn it off the surface and stimulate the roots. Sometimes I just couldn't bear to face anybody with that horrible growth on my face and arms. I was about to give up in despair, when some friend sent me a bottle of Elec-tro-la. I hadn't faith in the remedy before I used it, but it took just one treatment to convince me. The way that hair came off was a marvel and no matter how long I left the remedy on it would not burn or smart. That's the secret of its success. You can leave it on long enough to reach the roots and kill the hair and a cure with Elec-tro-la is a cure that lasts. See my face is as soft and smooth as a little child's and it's been months since I cured myself. If you don't believe this just try Elec-tro-la, and see"

We want every reader of this paper who is trouble with superfluous hair to prove this sure remedy just as thousands of others affected with objectionable hair have done. If you want a permanent, lasting cure, not merely temporary relief, Elec-tro-la is what you should use.

All that is necessary to get a free trial bottle is to just fill out the coupon and send to us with a two-cent stamp to help cover cost of mailing. The regular sized bottle is $1.00 and your money will be refunded if Elec-tro-la does not do all we claim. We don't ask you to take our word for what Elec-tro-la will do. Fill out the Trial Coupon and mail with a two-cent stamp today.

Free Treatment

Fill in your name and address on dotted lines below and send it to Ko Rec Tly Co' 5072 State St Chicago enclosing a two-cent stamp to help cover mailing, and we will send at once a free trial bottle that will show you what Elec-tro-la will do for you.

Pimples Cannot Live

When the Blood is Purified With Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Trial Package Sent Free.

Pimples, blotches, eruptions, etc., simply disappear like magic when you shut off the supply of impurities which cause them

Stuart's Calcium Wafers go into the blood through the same channel as food. They stimulate and nourish it. They destroy foreign and unnatural bodies found there and remove all impurities very quickly

In many cases pimples and eruptions disappear from the skin in five days

These little wafers are so strong that immediately after they go into the blood their beneficial effects make themselves known. The blood is cleansed rapidly and thoroughly, the impure is separated from the pure blood and the waste matter and poisons are carried from the system

The person who suffers the humiliation of pimples, blotches and eruptions should know and feel that the blood is in bad condition. Any delay is quite dangerous, and is liable to affect many organs quite seriously

Purify your blood and you give nature the means to successfully fight all manner of disease. Calcium Sulphide is one of the ingredients from which Stuart's Calcium Wafers are made, and it is the strongest and most powerful blood invigorator known to science. This wonderful purifier is indorsed by the entire medical profession and is generally used in all doctor's prescriptions for the blood and skin

Stuart's Calcium Wafers peculiarly preserve the strength of Calcium Sulphide better than other methods—thus giving the most rapid cures owing to the purity of the ingredients and their freedom from decay, evaporation and chemical weakness caused by many latter day modes of preparation. Stuart's Calcium Wafers are sold by every druggist. Price 50c, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F A Stuart, 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich

STRATTON ESTATE WINS IN FINNERTY CASE

A verdict for the defendant was returned by a jury in the district court yesterday in the case of Michael Finnerty vs. the Stratton estate to recover $32,500 alleged commission due for the sale of the Brown Palace hotel mortgage. This was the second trial of the case, a former jury having failed to agree. The plaintiff who is represented by Attorneys E C Stimson, T. J O'Donnell and Schuyler and Schuyler, all of Denver, will probably appeal the case. Attorney D. P Strickler of this city represented the Stratton estate

Thomson's "Glove Fitting" Corsets for Spring

Awarded Medals and Highest Honors at American and European Expositions

IN calling your attention to the new corset models for spring and summer of 1909, we wish to emphasize the advisability of purchasing the BEST; also the importance of procuring a corset that is especially designed for YOUR PARTICULAR FIGURE.

Thomson's "GLOVE-FITTING" Corsets have been tried and tested for over fifty years, each succeeding season bringing to light some new features and improvements over the previous one. The new models possess all the latest and most scientific improvements, imparting to the figure those long, slim, graceful lines that are so pronouncedly the vogue this season. Herewith are shown cuts of some of the new models. Let us show you the 1909 styles before having your new suit fitted, or before your spring dressmaking is done. It will please us immensely for an opportunity to demonstrate the advantages of our corsets. Remember that the corset is the "rock foundation" on which the appearance of the figure entirely depends.

"GRAND DUCHESS" MODEL D. This corset is especially made for the tall, well developed figure, having high bust and long back; made from finest imported coutil and having back and front boned throughout with double aluminized, rubber-coated, non-rustable steels, wrapped in linen. The patented feature of this new Grand Duchess model consists of a [illegible], transverse and horizontal section, by which the proper support is given where most needed, carrying all excess flesh from front to back, preserving the flat line at the abdomen, and permanently creating in the figure a rounded waist; trimmed at top with satin bands and wide lace; and finished [illegible] silk elastic hose supporters. Price $5.00

THOMSON'S NO. 413— This model is designed for medium and tall figures, having very straight lines with high bust, medium front, habit hip and long back; made from fine mercerized batiste, neatly trimmed with lace at top and finished with strong, improved hose supporters. Price $3.50

Ailments of Men Happily Overcome

SUCCESSFULLY TRIED BY MANY

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who through dissipation of their natural strength find themselves in their second childhood long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments are reached

It is presumed to be infallible, and highly efficient in quickly restoring in "nervous exhaustion" weak vitality melancholia and the functions

First get fifty cents worth of compound fluid balmwort in a one ounce package and three ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound take home mix and let stand two hours then get one ounce compound essence cardiol and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom) Mix all in a six or eight ounce bottle, shake well and take one teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring followed by a drink of water

By mixing it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's shortcomings and expensive fees are avoided

Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full bounding health and all the happiness accompanying it the above home treatment is given It contains no opiates or habit forming drugs whatever Mix it at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction

The reason a man thinks there's a lot of money to be made in a certain business is he isn't in it

SIMPLE WASH CURES ECZEMA

Why Salves Fail While a Simple Liquid Has Accomplished Thousands of Cures

It is now thoroughly established among the best medical authorities that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to a germ, and curable only through the skin It is not a blood disease at all, in fact, thousands of people suffer with skin disease and are perfectly healthy otherwise, and thereby prove they have no diseased blood

Smeary salves cannot reach the germs because they do not penetrate the skin The only way to reach the germs is by means of a penetrating liquid

Such a liquid can be obtained by simply mixing ordinary oil of wintergreen with thymol, glycerine and other healing agents This compound known as D D D Prescription stops the itch instantly and the cures all appear to be permanent In fact, it took thousands of cures case after case, before the best scientific authorities were convinced of the absolute merit of this remedy D D D Prescription kills the germs in the itching skin Its effect is seen within one minute after the first application We especially recommend D D D Soap in connection with the treatment

FIREMEN CRUSHED BY FALLING WALLS

FIVE LOSE LIVES; TWO MORE FATALLY HURT.

Men Die at Their Post, Fighting Big Blaze at Milwaukee. Several Persons Injured.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 13.—Five firemen were killed and about a dozen injured, two fatally, by the toppling of a brick wall while fighting a fire in the H. W. Johns-Manville manufacturing plant today. An employe of the concern suffered burns in his attempt to escape and died later at a hospital.

The damage is estimated at $250,000.

The dead:

JAMES GUNNING, assistant chief, aged 47.

LEONARD F. CURTIS, pipeman, aged 31.

JOHN F. CRAFT, pipeman, aged 32.

JOSEPH BELINSKI, pipeman, aged 22.

NATHANIEL J. WHALEY, lieutenant, aged 39.

THOMAS PETCHES, laborer.

Among the injured are:

Jack McGee, repair man, skull fractured; will die.

— — Nimmer, driver, back broken; will die.

Joseph J. Kulas, pipeman, burned.

Paul Lempke, burned.

Michael Keogh, pipeman.

J. F. Crowley.

D. A. Sullivan.

Michael Tighe.

George Kulas.

Henry Davenport.

Two companies of firemen were stationed on a wall and roof of the Waltham Piano building, south of the Johns-Manville plant, when suddenly the rear wall of the Johns-Manville plant crashed down. The firemen were caught under the mass of brick and timber, which smashed through the roof of the piano warehouse, carrying them to the floor below.

FIRST DIVORCE COURT IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

Domestic Differences Will Be Settled Before One Judge Distinction for California.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 13.—Los Angeles county is to have the first divorce court in California, if not in the country.

Arrangements were completed for it today at a conference of judges of the superior court in the chambers of the presiding judge, William P. James.

Judge James is to be the first judge of the divorce court and will take his seat in that capacity May 1. He will devote practically all of his time to the consideration of divorce matters.

His term in that work will continue for one year and thereafter the divorce court will fall to the lot of each of the judges in the year following his year as presiding judge.

Uniformity in the method of handling divorce cases and in the point of view of the judges hearing such cases are regarded as strong points in favor of the new system. Heretofore, there has been no fixed standard in judging questions brought out in divorce trials.

GRAND VALLEY DITCH TO BE CONSTRUCTED AT ONCE

Obstacles to Signing of Contract by Secretary Garfield Have Been Removed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—All obstacles to the signing by Secretary of the Interior Garfield, of the contract for the construction of the Grand valley irrigation project in Colorado, which has been withheld because of what he believed to be an objectionable clause, it is believed, now have been removed. It is believed the contract will be signed in a few days. The main canal as it was projected would parallel and cross the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad company's road at several points, and the attorneys for the company had inserted in the contract a provision obligating the government to assume responsibility for damage to the right of way of that line and for injuries to workmen employed during the progress of the work.

Garfield objected to this clause and declined to sign unless it was modified or eliminated. As the result of a conference with George Gould and President Jeffery of the Denver and Rio Grande by D. W. Aupperle of Grand Junction, Colo., who represents the interests of the farmers along the Denver and Rio Grande, Mr. Gould has given instructions for the changing of the clause to meet the government's contention.

VARIETY OF SUBJECTS UP FOR DISCUSSION IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A variety of subjects were discussed in the House today. The Indian appropriation bill technically was under consideration, but many members availed themselves of the opportunity for general debate. Mr. Lamar of Florida argued for the amendment of the railroad-rate law, claiming the law was insufficient to cover the cases included in its provisions. Mr. Madden of Illinois referred to increase the freight rates since the freight law went in effect. Mr. Murphy of Wisconsin delivered a eulogy on Lincoln. Mr. Washburn of Massachusetts favored a modification of the Sherman antitrust law in order that it might be less burdensome. Mr. Hayes of California attacked the rules of the House. Mr. Langley of Kentucky criticised the administration of the affairs of the Choctaw Indians. Mr. Sherman of New York explained the provisions of the Indian bill, while Mr. Foster of Vermont pleaded for an adjustment of postal rates as affecting merchandise sent through the mails.

The Indian bill was pending when the House adjourned until tomorrow, which was set apart for eulogies of deceased members.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Rapid work in building the battleship Michigan, at Camden, N. J., will result in the delivery of that vessel to the government six months earlier than the contract requires, and the ship probably will be ready for her trial trip in June. It is expected she will be delivered to the navy in May.

Newbro's Herpicide Delights the Ladies

Because they know from experience that the intelligent use of Herpicide means much to their personal appearance. It saves and beautifies the hair and in the vast majority of cases, adds greatly to its abundance.

The presence of the dandruff germ in the scalp destroys the gloss and beauty of the hair, even before the resulting disease becomes firmly established.

Each day that the use of Newbro's Herpicide is put off, makes the repair that much more difficult.

Save your hair while you have hair to save.

The intelligent use of Herpicide proves its actual worth

"I am delighted with Herpicide. I have never used a remedy that gives such marvelous results. The effect on my son's head is magical and he had a very persistent case of dandruff."
(Signed) MRS. J. L. MOORE,
Paulding, Ohio.

"I must tell you that your remedy for the hair is working like a charm and I am very much pleased with it. The itching has stopped and new hair is growing. I shall recommend it to all my friends."
(Signed) MRS. I. KINNEY,
New Haven, Conn.

"I can say from experience that Newbro's Herpicide is the most wonderful hair grower and dandruff eradicator that was ever made. I have used it for some time and can truthfully say that I am greatly pleased with it. I cheerfully recommend it as a splendid preparation."
(Signed) MRS. DR. BEST,
Cottage Grove, Oregon.

"It gives me great pleasure to add my commendation of Newbro's Herpicide. A member of our family has used your remedy with very satisfactory results."
(Signed) MISS A. E. CARUTHERS,
Tampa, Florida.

"Newbro's Herpicide is certainly the best remedy for dandruff and itching scalp I ever used. I have told several persons about your preparation and will tell every one I have an opportunity to. I can not praise Herpicide enough for what it has done for me."
(Signed) MRS. A. PFAENDER,
Fillmer, Texas.

A. O. BROWN MARRIES EDNA WALLACE HOPPER

Fact Kept Secret for Some Time "to Fool the Smart Reporters." Good Joke.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—That he and Edna Wallace Hopper were married nearly three months ago, was the announcement made here today by A. O. Brown, shortly after his arrival from New York. The wedding took place in Freehold, N. J., November 25, 1908. The witnesses were Miss Leona Anderson, Louis Ginter Young and Dennis O'Brien, the latter an attorney for Miss Hopper.

After her husband's announcement, Miss Hopper said:

"We did not announce the marriage at the time because both Mr. Brown and myself were getting more notoriety than we wanted out of the unfortunate failure of August and the resulting suits. We really made up our minds that we would keep the marriage a secret to fool the smart reporters and have a good joke on them. We consider the joke good enough now, however, and do not mind the announcement."

Miss Hopper figured in the failure of the Brown firm. She was summoned into the bankruptcy court by the receivers of the Brown company because of having a $7,500 automobile and a $25,000 insurance policy given her by Mr. Brown previous to the failure.

FRIENDS OF COLE YOUNGER ASK FOR A FULL PARDON

Former Bandit May Lose Chances of Freedom by Exhibiting Himself With Traveling Show.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 13.—Application for a full pardon for Cole Younger, former member of the Jesse James gang, captured in the Northfield bank raid and conditionally pardoned in 1902, has been made to Governor Johnson by James A. Reed, former mayor of Kansas City, Mo.

"Cole Younger is now engaged in the promotion of an interurban railroad to his home at Lees Summit, Mo.," writes Mr. Reed, "and because of the condition under which he enjoys freedom, finds himself constantly embarrassed."

There is some doubt as to the likelihood of the application receiving favorable consideration, Younger being accused of violating one of the conditions of his pardon by exhibiting himself in connection with a traveling show.

CHEYENNE, Feb. 13.—The widows of six men killed in the mine disaster at Hanna, Wyo., on March 28, today filed damage suits against the Union Pacific Coal company. The aggregate damages asked are $100,000.

BIG CORPORATIONS MAY ENGAGE IN BATTLE

Waters-Pierce Company Thinks Holding of Its Stock by Standard Oil Company Illegal.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 13.—That the Waters-Pierce Oil company of Missouri will on Monday ask the supreme court of this state for a further stay of execution on that portion of the recent decree against it requiring it to loose itself from the domination of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, was the intimation [illegible] the offices of the local concern today. The fine of $50,000, which was assessed against the Waters-Pierce company, probably will not be contested, the attorneys for the corporation saying that they see no recourse from this portion of the penalty.

The Waters-Pierce company did not join with the Standard Oil company of Indiana and the Republic Oil company of Ohio in the proposition which was made to the supreme court recently by which the state would gain a direct voice in the management of those corporations' interests in Missouri. Part of that proposition was that the 60 per cent of the Waters-Pierce stock held by the Standard company, should be placed in the hands of trustees to be appointed by the state and companies jointly. This the Waters-Pierce management assert, would result in preventing the Missouri corporation from severing itself from the foreign company's control and, they say, would only strengthen the position of the Standard in the state.

It is predicted unofficially that the Waters-Pierce company will ask the court to declare the holding of its stock by the Standard interests illegal, on the ground that such holding contravenes the principle laid down by the supreme court of the United States in the Northern Securities case. If this attitude is adopted, one of the greatest legal battles between corporations in the history of the country may follow.

Bad Breath and Sour Stomach

Stopped at Once With Pure Willow Charcoal, the Greatest Gas Absorber Known.

There is no necessity to suffer the humiliation, chagrin and discomfort of bad breath, biliousness, sour stomach, gastritis, sluggish liver, etc., when a little lozenge of charcoal will cleanse the stomach and make it pure and sweet.

Do not drug yourself when a simple little natural charcoal made from fragrant willow branches, sweetened with honey, will add tone to your stomach, liver and intestines; rapidly absorb gases and stop foul odors of all kinds.

Charcoal will absorb one hundred times its own volume of gas. A box full of charcoal placed in a bedroom will keep the air of such a room pure and sweet.

A little charcoal lozenge dissolved on the tongue after meals will also keep the stomach fresh and clean. Charcoal is justly called the scrubbing brush for the stomach. The old monks of medieval times cured bad cases of stomach trouble, cast out devils from the system of man by feeding such a man charcoal.

Scientific men of today believe in the great strength of charcoal for the cure of human ills. Too much of it cannot harm one. The system craves it just like an animal needs and craves salt every so often. Charcoal goes into the stomach gently and is welcome. It settles down through the action of the stomach, and filters through all the food, absorbing gas, aiding digestion and giving tone to the juices, so that when the food goes into the intestines, and there meets other digestive fluids, the charcoal holds the impurities and thus keeps them from the blood.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow. They are prepared fragrant by the use of honey and sweetened so they please the taste and are easily dissolved.

They have an enormous sale, thus stamping them with the approval of the public. Every druggist sells them, 25 cents per box. Go to your druggist today and buy a box; then after your next meal take two or three of them and judge for yourself of their merit.

Several taken at bed time will prove to you in the morning that they have been at work all night. For your bad breath will not be so bad after all.

Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Colorado City News

TO PASS NEW ORDINANCE

Office of City Electrician to Be Established—Sprinkling Question May Be Satisfactorily Settled.

The proposed ordinance establishing the office of city electrician will be placed upon its final passage at tomorrow night's meeting of the city council. It has been drawn by City Attorney J. P. Jackson and privides that all electrical work done in the city shall be inspected and passed on by the incumbent. A further provision is that the work shall be up to the requirements of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

As a result of the lack of an electrical inspector, fire insurance rates in Colorado City are much higher at the present time than in cities where the installation of wiring and other electrical work is inspected. It is expected that one of the good results of the establishment of this office will be a lowering of the rates. It will also prove a protection to the city against fire.

Impenetrable secrecy surrounds the question of whether or not the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway company will consent to sprinkle Colorado avenue. After a conference which Mayor I. A. Foote and City Attorney Jackson held with officers of the company about 10 days ago, it was announced that a proposition would be made at the next meeting of the council. Now it is hinted that the matter may not be brought up tomorrow night, or settled at all in open session. However, the city officials are hopeful that they will succeed in securing the re-establishment of the street sprinkling service here. Meanwhile, the water wagon which formerly was in use and which recently has been put in repair, is being used.

DOGS INFEST THE STREETS

Police Will Shoot Canines Unless They Are Kept Out of the Way.

From the number of complaints which recently have been made, Colorado City residents are beginning to think that the town is in need of a "pied piper," not to lead away the rats, as was the case in Hamelin, but in some miraculous way to thin the ranks of miscellaneous dogs which infest the streets. This canine nuisance is increasing to an alarming extent, according to many of the citizens, and the police declare that unless the animals are kept off of the streets, they will be shot.

"Colorado City is beginning to look like an Indian town," said Chief of Police E. N. Wolfe yesterday. "The dogs that are creating the trouble are merely curs that are constantly running about the streets and tripping up pedestrians. Unless these dogs are kept off the streets they will be shot."

In fact, a crusade against stray dogs already has been begun by the police, and several dogs which were a nuisance to the community recently have been shot by Patrolman J. A. Lowderman.

The dogs of the city are accused of offenses dating back a year ago, when Chief of Police Wolfe was bitten while killing a mad canine in the postoffice, and he was obliged to go east to be treated for hydrophobia. About this time the danger from dogs became so great that Mayor I. A. Foote issued a proclamation enjoining all residents of the city owning dogs to keep them off the street for a period of 30 days.

Only a week ago, a stray dog entered the house of W. M. Doke at 517 Robinson street, and without warning attacked his seven-months-old daughter, biting her in the cheek. The dog was shot by Chief of Police Wolfe.

Hymn No. 7, "America."
Benediction.

The ladies of the Christian church of this city are making plans to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of the movement to restore the unity and purity of the church with an entertainment to be given at the church next Friday evening. It will be called a "camp fire," and old-fashioned songs will be one of the features of the evening.

Word reached Colorado City yesterday of the death of H. F. Gourley, a member of Camp No. 5, W. O. W., Colorado Springs, at Reno, Nevada. A wife, son and daughter, who live at 2022 Armstrong avenue, survive him.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church will give an entertainment at the church next Tuesday night. A program will be rendered and refreshments will be served.

The firm of Endicott and Groves has just completed improvements on its greenhouses at 209 North Eighth street, at a cost of $1,500.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for a valentine social by the Twentieth Century club of the Christian church at the church tomorrow night. The public is invited to attend.

William Lushinsky, H. H. Wister, W. J. Sublette and Mr. Patterson of this city, attended the organization of the new Modern Woodman camp in Colorado Springs last Friday night.

Mrs. W. F. Kintner yesterday received word of the death of John Burt, a former resident of Colorado City, at Round Oak, Colo. Burt is survived by a widow and three sons, all of this city.

The best furniture in America looks like plunder on a dray; get a padded moving van of C. M. Sherman.

Walter Cheever of Burkings, S. D., is visiting O. O. Martin of 127 Lincoln avenue.

E. L. CANTRELL IS TO WED BONNIE WASSON

Relenting from his determination to prosecute E. L. Cantrell, who eloped with Bonnie Wasson, his 17-year-old daughter, several weeks ago, A. J. Wasson of this city yesterday secured a marriage license for the couple, who will be united this morning by Justice A. P. Toombs. The statutory charge against Cantrell now pending in Justice Toombs' court will be dismissed.

The young couple eloped to Denver recently, a few hours after Wasson had compelled his daughter to swear out a warrant against Cantrell. The pair were arrested in Denver and brought back to this city.

Miss Wasson will be 18 years old today, so that yesterday was the last day on which her father's consent to the marriage was required.

Electroliers of French renaissance design will be used to illuminate the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle. Hundreds of the beautiful standards have been built. On the top of each will be a large sphere of light containing 60 20-candle-power globes.

The way a girl entertains a man is to listen to the rot he talks to her as if it were sense.

END OF THE SEASON WIND UP

NEW SPRING HOSIERY.
NEW SPRING UNDERWEAR.
NEW EMBROIDERIES.
NEW WHITE GOODS.

PELTA'S DEPARTMENT STORE

Underbuyers and Undersellers

MERRITT'S STERILIZED WOOL HEALTH COMFORTS AND WOOL BALLS.
STILLER'S GERMAN TABLE LINENS.

Inventory is over in all departments, and now it's house cleaning, and the time to clear our decks for the New Spring Goods, which are arriving almost daily. Our object this week is to dispose of all odd lots, broken lines and surplus stock. Some staple items, you will notice, have been cut to half price, and besides lots described here there are many other items, limited in quantity, and in all instances prices have been cut to a fraction of their real worth. Each department has its store of good things for those who come first.

The Stout Woman's Corset

"The NEMO" Self Reducing

In these days when fashion demands unnatural slenderness, every woman, especially the stout woman, should be sure to see that the corset she selects to make her appearance more sylphlike shall not give her slenderness at the sacrifice of her health and comfort. Unless the abdomen is supported by the Nemo Self Reducing and Relief Strap, compression only drives the fat further down, puts more weight on the weaker abdominal muscles. The relief strap, which is a tape under the Self Reducing Strap, supports the weight of the abdomen and at the same time the Self Reducing Strap relieves it. The Nemo Corset is well stayed, as the top and bottom of each bone is reenforced with tripled layers of cloth. It will outwear any other corset. No corset but the Nemo gives abdominal support.

GILLETT IS CIVIL SERVICE REFORMER

MASSACHUSETTS REPRESENTATIVE WITH ROOSEVELT.

Census Bill Will Not Be Passed by Congress if He Can Prevent It. Will Make Hard Fight.

Special to The Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Representative Frederick H. Gillett, of Springfield, Mass., has his loins girded for the greatest fight of his life. Congress isn't going to pass the census bill over President Roosevelt's veto if Mr. Gillett can help it, and when the Springfield congressman starts in to make a fight the opposition knows it has been in a fracas.

Mr. Gillett is chairman of the House committee on reform in the civil service, and is one of the most ardent and best-known civil service reformers in Congress. He doesn't believe in the spoils system in any measure or degree, and when the census bill originally passed, he did his best to prevent the [illegible] odd jobs it provided from being placed at the disposal of senators and representatives. He wasn't able to prevent original passage of the bill, but he is confident the two-thirds majority necessary to pass it over the President's veto cannot be secured.

It was known for some time before the President sent in his message that the census bill would be vetoed, but advocates of the measure felt very confident of being able to make the measure law without the President's approval. They admitted that in the senate the vote on the civil service feature was very close, but they counted on enough senators being anxious to take a slap at the President to secure a two-thirds vote in that body. In the House, it was expected the Democrats would vote solidly to overrule the President and that there were enough Republicans who needed the patronage to make up the two-thirds. But now it develops that the Democrats are not a unit in demanding noncompetitive census appointments. Representative Underwood, of Alabama, disclosed the break when he declared, after a visit to the White House, that he would stand with the President in demanding that census appointments be made in accordance with the civil service regulations. He had always opposed the spoils system, he declared, and to change his attitude now merely for the sake of opposing the President would be to convict himself of inconsistency. Other Democrats have since expressed themselves in the same vein and there is now very serious doubt whether even the House can muster a two-thirds vote for the census bill in opposition to the President's veto.

If advocates of the noncompetitive plan of appointment decide it is impossible to pass the bill over the veto, they probably will let it die a natural death on March 4, and immediately upon the convening of the extra session will pass a new bill and send it to President Taft, hoping that his devotion to the civil service idea will not lead him to the extent of a veto.

LESSEES BUY CONTROL

Ward and Hill Purchase Big Share of Pharmacist Consolidated Mining Company's Holdings.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Feb. 13.—The controlling interest in the Pharmacist Consolidated Mining company, held by an eastern syndicate headed by A. J. Salter of Denver, was purchased by Thomas J. Ward and W. J. Hill, well-known mining men of this city, who have been operating the property under lease. The consideration has not been made public.

At a meeting of the directors held this afternoon Mr. Hill was made president, Mr. Ward vice president and H. L. Shephard, also of this city, treasurer and assistant secretary. E. R. Whitnaran of Colorado Springs, the present secretary, was retained.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN U. S. AND VENEZUELA SETTLED

Special American Commissioner Has Signed Protocol With That Government.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—William I. Buchanan, special American commissioner to Venezuela, has signed a protocol with that government for the adjudication of the disputed claims between the two countries, thus paving the way for a final settlement of the issues which led to a rupture of diplomatic relations last spring. Because of a lack of detail in the dispatches, officials of the state department prefer not to make any statement touching the results except to say that the Associated Press dispatches from Caracas accurately indicate what has been achieved.

As to the money consideration involved in the claim of the New York and Bermudez Asphalt company, the officials are not fully advised. Officials are greatly elated over Mr. Buchanan's success and express themselves as particularly pleased that the asphalt company's dispute is not to go to arbitration because of certain features involved.

Presumably Mr. Buchanan's work will be followed by a general arbitration treaty or compromise stating specifically the issues to be arbitrated, which requires ratification by the Senate before the cases may go to The Hague.

President Gomez is expected to promptly name a minister to Washington.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Dr. Charles M. Stuart, professor of sacred rhetoric at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill., was today elected to the editorship of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, a Methodist weekly, to succeed the late Dr. D. N. Thomson.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—"The construction of the Gatun dam, now being built by the United States government on the Panama canal, will result in the greatest disaster to any public work, probably, that has ever been built." This was the statement made today by P. Bunau-Varilla, the French engineer, who arrived here on the French line steamer La Provence from Havre.

THE PROPOSED NEW STREET RAILWAY FRANCHISE.

TOMORROW night the Council will probably act on the application of the Street Railway company for a new franchise to enable it to extend its lines past the Printers' Home and to the new golf club. Substantially the same franchise was asked for two years ago and refused by the Council because the Company would not agree to sprinkle the streets on the new line, as is done on its other lines. This time, however, there is a stronger public demand for the line than there was two years ago. The Company has repeatedly been solicited by the directors of the Printers' Home and of the new golf club to make the proposed extension, and more recently the matter has been urged by the Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' Association and other organizations. This being the case it is quite likely that the franchise will be granted.

When the matter came up two years ago The Gazette urged that the request be refused for the sole reason that we are opposed to free franchise grants. In the past Colorado Springs has suffered, and is still suffering, many inconveniences and no little expense because of the free and easy fashion in which our earlier city councils were wont to hand out franchise grants to whoever asked for them. The city ought, at this time, to be receiving a substantial cash return from the Street Railway company for the use of its streets, but instead of this being the case the company makes no compensation except the trivial one of running two sprinkling cars over its tracks and paying the crew of one of them. The city furnishes the water and pays the other crew.

CONDITIONS JUSTIFY FRANCHISE. The Stratton franchises, under which the Street Railway company operates most of its lines, were granted in 1901 for a period of twenty-five years, and have seventeen years yet to run. The company proposes that the franchise for which it now asks be made for the latter period, so that it will expire coincidently with the others. The new line, if constructed, will run through a part of the city where the patronage will be small and it is improbable that the earnings, at least for the first ten or twelve years, will more than pay interest on the investment. Under these circumstances it would hardly be fair to ask the company to pay for the franchise.

There is one condition, however, which the Council ought to impose before granting this or any other street railway franchise; that is, free transportation for mail carriers while in the discharge of their duties. Policemen and firemen in uniform are now given free transportation and there is equal reason why the same privilege should be extended to mail carriers. In San Jose and Pasadena, California; Little Rock, Arkansas, and several other towns which are of about the same size as Colorado Springs, a provision to this effect has been included in franchises recently granted to street railway companies.

This is not done solely to promote the comfort of the mail carriers, but to facilitate their service, for if they can ride on the cars in going to and from their routes they are able to make quicker deliveries to their patrons. It is a very small thing for the Street Railway company and would not deprive it of a cent of revenue which it now receives, for the Government makes no allowance for carfare and the carriers can not pay it out of their salaries. There are twenty-four mail carriers in Colorado Springs and the company can much better afford to give them passes than it can afford to keep every alderman or other political office holder supplied with free transportation.

WHEN TIME COMES FOR RENEWAL. The expiration of the Street Railway company's franchises is still a long time in the future, but unless the people of Colorado Springs are bereft of their commonsense when that time comes they will not renew the grant on any such easy terms as prevail now. A public service corporation's franchise for the use of the streets is generally its most valuable asset, and there is no more reason, under ordinary circumstances, why it should not pay a fair compensation for such franchises than there is why it should not pay for any of its other assets.

Toronto is an example of a wideawake city which knows how to deal with its public service corporations on a business basis. In the year 1907 the Toronto Street Railway company paid into the city treasury $419,806.91 as its percentage of the earnings. In addition it paid $80,294.32 for pavement charges. These payments were made in addition to the regular taxation. Of course, Toronto is several times larger than Colorado Springs, but a comparison based on population and earnings would easily show that if we had a like arrangement the city would receive each year several thousand dollars from the Street Railway company for the use of its streets.

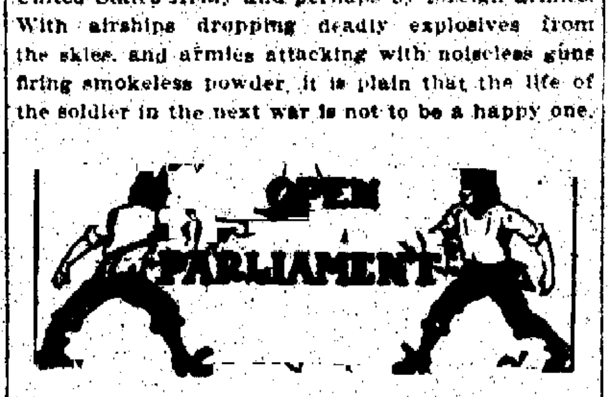
THE NOISELESS GUN.

A FEW months ago it was announced that Hiram Percy Maxim, son of the famous inventor, had devised an attachment for rifles which entirely muffled the noise of the explosion. No public demonstration of the new invention was given because Mr. Maxim did not care to exhibit it until after he had obtained his patents, but now that this has been done the new contrivance has been exhibited and is said to be quite as wonderful a thing as was promised.

According to reports of an exhibition given in a room in New York a few days ago, the only sound produced by the firing of a Winchester repeating rifle and a Springfield army rifle, to which the new "silencer" had been attached, was the click of the trigger and the "swish" of the bullet. There was no explosive sound whatever. Various other weapons were fired and in each case there was no sound that could have been heard more than a few feet away.

A great deal has been written about the supposed dangers of this new invention as an aid to assassins, and some nervous writers have urged that its manufacture and sale ought to be prohibited by law. And in fact it would seem that the murderous possibilities of such a weapon would be infinite. Equipped with it one man might shoot down another on the street on a dark night with perfect safety, and by the use of smokeless powder it could be used quite as effectively by daylight. But Mr. Maxim declares that the click of the trigger and the rushing sound of the bullet as it passes through the air would be loud enough to attract attention.

However this may be, there is no doubt that the invention of the noiseless gun will be one of the greatest factors in making war so terrible that no nation can afford to engage in it. Imagine an army equipped with noiseless guns firing smokeless powder—the mere idea is uncanny. It is the unseen foe that inspires fear, and when a foe can not only remain hidden but unheard and undetected by the presence of smoke, it becomes invincible. The Maxim silencer can be readily attached to any rifle, and it is likely to be adopted forthwith by the United States Army and perhaps by foreign armies. With airships dropping deadly explosives from the skies, and armies attacking with noiseless guns firing smokeless powder, it is plain that the life of the soldier in the next war is not to be a happy one.



CHILD BEGGARS.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

During the last two weeks reports have reached this office regarding children begging throughout the city. It is usually one or two boys who go around telling pitiful stories that the father has left the family or that the mother is sick and they must bring home a certain amount of money before night or they will receive a whipping. They give usually false addresses, and practically all of ones that have been reported to us directly we have been unable to find.

This method of begging money is a familiar and a contemptible one. There is no reason why anyone in want should be forced to send his children out to beg. In addition, that method makes it possible for the authorities to take the children away from the parents, as the courts will judge such parents unfit guardians of their children.

Residents of the city who are appealed to in this way or by children carrying around popcorn or other things to sell, are all urgently advised to report such applicants to this office. The moment a report reaches us, investigation is made of the condition and, wherever necessary, relief is sent. So far, all these stories, in the few cases where the office has been able to trace them, have proven to be untruthful and the families have not been in need of help, and it has been either ignorance on the part of the parents or a spirit of adventure on the part of the children. One parent says she has punished her boy several times for this sort of thing, and if reports of his begging continue, she will send him to the reform school. There is no indication of want in this particular instance.

RECALL PERCENTAGES.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Will you kindly publish in the Open Parliament, or elsewhere, the following letter which, I believe, will be of interest to the citizens of Colorado Springs at the present time?

KATHERINE C. MAYHEW.
Colorado Springs, Feb. 13.

Mrs. Katherine Mayhew,
725 Cascade Avenue,
Colorado Springs.

Dear Madam:

Your inquiries concerning the percentage for recall, initiative and referendum, as placed in the Berkeley charter, have been referred to me by the secretary of the Berkeley chamber of commerce.

In accordance with the terms of your note, I have interviewed members of the Berkeley board of freeholders and take pleasure in transmitting their conclusions, and the considerations that led them to set the figures as they did.

Professor William Carey Jones of the University of California chair of jurisprudence, who is chairman of the board of freeholders that framed the Berkeley charter, when asked for the reasons that moved the freeholders to take action in this matter, said:

The placing of the percentage for the recall at 20 per cent was the result of much discussion, and the decision was reached after a full consideration of the subject.

In regard to the initiative and referendum, there was not the slightest difference of opinion that the figure ought to be low, in order to encourage a free expression of public opinion concerning legislation that may be desired by the people. Therefore no controversy arose on that point.

Concerning the recall, we had more difficulty in reaching a conclusion. On one hand, it was argued that if the percentage be placed high, the recall would be useless, because inoperative, and that the relief promised would be a mockery, because practically beyond the reach of a reasonable number of dissatisfied citizens.

"We devoted more than a year to the consideration of the different sections of the charter, and this afforded time in which to correspond with persons in other places where the recall had been proposed and put in action. I wrote to Dr. Haines, the father of the recall on the Pacific coast, and to W. S. U'Ren of Oregon City, Ore., the latter being the leader of direct legislation in Oregon.

Dr. Haines reported on the status of the recall in Los Angeles, and gave it as his opinion that there should be a reasonably liberal limit. He thought that from 15 to 20 per cent would be fair.

Mr. U'Ren took a similar view, but would favor a lower percentage in a large community.

We considered the whole subject carefully and arrived at the conclusion that when 20 per cent of a city become dissatisfied with an official to such an extent that they are willing to sign a petition for recall, then conditions are such that the subject of recall ought to be submitted to the voters.

That is how we arrived at our decision, and it was accepted as reasonable and just.

R. A. Berry, a prominent member of the board of freeholders, and who has manifested his belief in the fairness of the proposition to such an extent that he will probably be a candidate for mayor under the new charter, said:

The freeholders did not agree on the question of percentage for the recall without a spirited debate, but I think there was unison of sentiment before we got through. There may have been some division of feeling on this point, but the provision was adopted by the freeholders, and no protest was made. All the members signed the instrument, and the people have indorsed the principle by a vote of more than 5 to 1.

In order to get at the facts, we made inquiry in different directions. In San Francisco, it was found that the 30 per cent demanded under that city's charter is there deemed too high for practical operation. So we rejected that figure.

We heard from Los Angeles and Oregon, and, after mature deliberation, gave the people the result of our best judgment. Personally, I think that the figure in the Berkeley charter is about right. I don't see how it can be attacked as too liberal, as it takes 20 per cent of the voters to make a move against any official. When a man gets so bad that 20 per cent of the people are desirous of ousting him, the situation is such that certainly the people should be given a chance to vote on it. I recognize that this is a subject that is open to debate, that it is a matter of experiment to a certain extent, but the Berkeley freeholders reached the decision as recorded in our charter, and the action in this instance has been ratified by the people.

E. E. Newton, a member of the board of freeholders, being asked for his views on the question of percentage that ought to be placed as a basis for the recall, said:

All the arguments obtainable were assembled before the board of freeholders attempted to arrive at a conclusion. On account of delays that occurred after the first election of freeholders, we had the better part of two years in which to frame the charter that has at last been adopted by the people of Berkeley. As will be remembered, the first draft of the charter was not submitted to a vote, owing to a flaw in the election clause. This gave us an opportunity to go over the entire instrument, as the same men were elected the second time as freeholders. No change in the provision concerning the recall was suggested or attempted. We thought what we did in that regard was right.

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, who is a member of the board of freeholders, is not in Berkeley, but during the charter campaign made many speeches in which he praised the recall provision, declaring that it is reasonable and proper, giving the people of this city control of their own affairs, and affording a method of correcting evils that otherwise might be without remedy.

Trusting this information may be of service to you, I remain, madam, your most obedient servant,

NEWTON DRURY.

TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

Sunday, February 14, 1909.
Stars favor now the hands that write,
On travelers shines a planet bright.

The moon is in sextile with Mercury and in benefic aspect. Uranus and Neptune are in parallel.

Beware of disputes.

Special virtue is promised at 2:50 p. m. for herbs under Saturn—amaranthus, barley, beet, Solomon's seal, sciaticawort, plantain, comfrey, quince, holly and flaxweed.

Write important letters on this day. Draft prospectuses, circulars, programs, reports or advertisements. The writing hand should be fortunately guided in this period.

Literary efforts or dealings with literary persons, printers, lawyers, orators and clergymen are under promising signs.

The 24 hours should benefit agents, demonstrators, artificers, craftsmen, ingenious persons of all kinds and teachers.

A good time for selecting schools, trades or professions for young persons.

Journeys undertaken this day should result well.

A fortunate year in both society and business is indicated for women with this birthdate. The young will probably meet new friends.

Men with this birthdate must keep their business well in hand and avoid risks.

Children born this day are under Saturn and Uranus. Girls should not be forced to drudgery or uncongenial tasks beyond need. Boys may develop great talent for large affairs in either science or commerce.

Anchovy Sandwiches—Scrape and bone 12 large anchovies, pound them with a heaping teaspoonful sweet butter, yolks of 3 hard-boiled eggs, 1 teaspoonful curry paste, and 2 tablespoonfuls grated cheese. Cut some round slices of bread, about 2 inches in diameter and an eighth of an inch in thickness; butter one side of them, spread the mixture over each, press the two cover slices together, trim into shape, and serve on a folded napkin. Garnish with parsley and small radishes.

Celery and Oyster Salad—Scald 1 pint of oysters in their own liquor until the edges curl. After draining, cut in half and mix with 1 pint chopped celery. Marinate with French dressing and put on ice for 30 minutes. Then drain, mix with boiled dressing and serve on lettuce leaves.

JUDICIAL OPINION.

From the Atchison Globe.

The swellest couple that has appeared before Judge Casey to be married were before him today. They were Warrie W. Walker, aged 26, of Oregon, Mo., and Miss Mabel E. Boyd, aged 19, of Forest City, Mo. Judge Casey says Miss Boyd was the prettiest girl he ever married. In his official capacity, mind you.

On Talking Too Much

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

IT WAS said of the great Prussia field marshal Von Moltke that he could be silent in seven languages. John Milton, the tercentenary of whose birth was celebrated December 9, refused to let his daughters learn any other than their mother tongue, on the ground that one tongue was enough for a woman. Perhaps had Milton realized that silence may be cultivated no less than speech, he might have been willing to let his daughters "study to be silent" in half a dozen languages besides their own.

Silence may be even more eloquent than speech. A rebuke delivered in righteous indignation may be made the more effective by one of those eloquent silences preceding speech, which are like the omnibus calm before the storm. It is a great mistake to say too much if you want some one to tremble before the rod of your authority. When Whittier's father wanted a path shoveled before the house, "snow-bound" by the rigors of a New England winter, there was no palavering about it:

> "A quick, decisive man, no breath
> Our father wasted: 'Boys, a path!'"

The language of command must not be confused with the language of courtly ceremonial. Orders, to be imperative, must be short and sharp, expressed in "winged words." Circumlocution often takes the pith out of the simpler, more forcible expression. The Sunday school superintendent who paraphrased the words "And the child grew" into "Passed, in short, through all the gradations of natural development" was as bad as the man who moved Doctor Johnson's indignation by calling "Jesus wept" into "Jesus, the Savior of the world, burst into a flood of tears." "Puppy!" exclaimed the lexicographer. And yet he was often guilty himself of similar offenses against simplicity.

But by talking too much we mean, more generally, the thinking aloud of the "hen-minded" order of person, whose brain (and consequently whose tongue) is wholly occupied with the most insignificant trifles. Some people can talk a great deal without talking too much, because their conversation is of interesting things; it is enlivened by flashes of wit and imagination; it distinguishes between matters of enduring importance and the mere chaff which the wind driveth away. The talk of other people may be, relatively, not so great in quantity, but is like the inconsequent chatter of apes, "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing"—the kind of talk that is first cousin to the buzzing of flies on a window pane. In a recent important trial a new expression was invented, "logorrhea," to signify the excessive desire to talk, amounting to a mania, in some people. It is really a serious affliction, as well as an infliction. The person who wants to talk all the time deserves commiseration, as well as the unfortunate victim of the loquaciousness. You instinctively avoid, if you can, the person who talks too much—very often because when you meet such a person you are inhibited from talking too much yourself. There are people—not to say women, for that would be ungallant—who talk for the sake of "letting off steam." They do not require a listener. They are not offended if you pay no attention to what they are saying. They talk, it seems, very largely for the mere physical relief it affords them, to get the surplusage of words out of their systems. The man who fell asleep during a Caudle-lecture and when he awoke said to his wife, "Are you talking yet, or again?" had learned that the best plan is not to try to interpose any let or hindrance in the conversation, not to try to dam the torrential eloquence, but to say with Robert Browning,

> "I will be patient and proud, and soberly acquiesce."

Half the reputation of Socrates for philosophic wisdom is due to the fact that his wife Xantippe talked too much. She talked so much that he got the chance to say very little, and as Lord Bacon has pointed out, a man who talks little is likely to acquire a reputation for profound wisdom. Socrates also won the admiration of his immediate neighborhood for the patience with which he endured the lingual assaults of the lady; perhaps, if we only knew the inside facts of the situation, our sympathies would be with Xantippe, who probably had to take in washing to support the philosopher's family. The father of Louisa M. Alcott, Bronson Alcott of Concord, was looking for somebody to endow him, like an institution, for the mere purpose of talking at any length on any topic. He was a brilliant conversationalist. But, somehow, he never found anyone willing to finance him as a speculative venture. Meanwhile, the real money-maker of the family was the admirable daughter with the prolific pen, who, year after year, wrote delightful stories, instinct with high ideals and productive of unalloyed pleasure to countless thousands of young people.

Somebody said the other day, "It's a dangerous thing for a man to start his mouth going and then go off and leave it." The danger is, if we talk too much, we shall in unguarded moments say something we would give much to be able to recall. We are not all of us capable of the prudent restraint of the Irishman at the political meeting, who bethought himself in time and said, "I beg leave to take back what I was about to observe." If we think before we speak, there is no grave danger of our talking too much, and whenever we do talk, there will be a greater likelihood of our really saying something.

THE BIRTH OF THE OPAL.

The Sunbeam loved the Moonbeam,
And followed her low and high,
But the Moonbeam fled and hid her head,
She was so shy—so shy.

The Sunbeam wooed with passion;
Ah, he was a lover bold!
And his heart was afire with mad desire
For the Moonbeam pale and cold.

She fled like a dream before him,
Her hair was a shining sheen,
And oh, that Fate would annihilate
The space that lay between!

Just as the day lay panting
In the arms of the twilight dim,
The Sunbeam caught the one he sought
And drew her close to him.

But out of his warm arms, startled
And stirred by Love's first shock,
She sprang afraid, like a trembling maid,
And hid in the niche of a rock.

And the Sunbeam followed and found her,
And led her to Love's own feast;
And they were wed on that rocky bed,
And the dying day was their priest.

And lo! the beautiful Opal—
That rare and wondrous gem—
Where the moon and sun blend into one,
Is the child that was born to them.

GOAT WAS GASOLINE TORCH.

Billy, Soaked by Angry Chauffeur, Butts Wheel and Strikes Fire.

From the New York Press.

Billy, an old goat who has become a familiar figure to automobilists who pass through Livingston, got himself on fire Sunday afternoon. Billy has been a chronic loafer about James Mendel's garage and repair shop and has acquired an ardent appetite for cast-off tires. This propensity has tempted him to nibble at tires on wheels, the result being that he has caused several explosions.

About 3 o'clock p. m. Sunday, an auto stopped at the garage and the chauffeur said he wanted gasoline. Billy began to snoop about the car. The driver kicked at the goat, when Billy tried to chew a piece out of the mudguard. Billy dodged the kick. A few minutes afterward the chauffeur, who was carrying gasoline from garage to auto in a pail, lost his temper and threw the contents of the bucket squarely into Billy's face. About a gallon of gasoline covered the goat.

Evidently the gasoline entered Billy's eyes and made him wild. He made a rush for the chauffeur, but that man cleverly sidestepped. Billy, carried blindly on by the force of his rush, struck full tilt against the brass hub of a wheel of the machine. There was a flash of fire, and the next moment the gasoline that covered Billy's coat was aflame. Alfred Schwartz, the repair man, says the smash of horn against brass struck fire, and that caused the blaze.

For ten minutes there was a hot time, Billy, a mass of fire, went dashing about. Schwartz feared the goat would dive into the garage and set fire to that place. A crowd of boys buried Billy under a hail of big snowballs, and these put out the fire.

NO ICE-CAKE FISH FOR HIM.

True Sportsman Returns Frozen Black Bass to Jersey Lake.

Newton (N. J.) Dispatch to New York Press.

Though the other members of his family were gloomy and grumpy at the supper table Saturday evening, when they thought of the fine black bass they might have had before them, Joseph S. Wilson, the father, still stubbornly congratulated himself on the strength of his good principles. He had caught ten black bass, the smallest weighing almost two pounds, and had thrown every one of them back into the water. What else could an honest and conscientious fisherman do? And Wilson prides himself on being an honest and conscientious fisherman.

It was the unusual way in which the Wilson hands caught the fish that troubled the Wilson conscience. The Wilson person was cutting ice for storage today and found the bass fast frozen in a large cake he brought to shore. He was puzzled at such a remarkably successful imitation by nature of the most approved methods of scientific cold storage until he remembered that a sudden thaw had followed the first formation of the ice where he was cutting. He realized that the fish swimming in the first layer of ice when it was formed by the thaw, must have been caught by the second frost.

Wilson at first threw the fish out while he was deciding what to do with them. Had he caught them with a rod and line, or even still fishing, he would have welcomed them as a prize. But his sportsmanlike soul revolted at the thought of taking advantage of such a mishap as catching frozen fish. So with a sigh, as one fish after the other showed signs of returning life, Wilson threw them back into the water.

"I useter fly in a pirat-ship," says the airfarin' tar, says he;
"She was manned by the bloodiest airynauts that ever a man did see.
She'd six wings on her starboard side, if I rightly recolleck,
And I was the cap'n of the craft and I walked the parachute deck.

"We boarded a solo a mile above the top of old Pikes Peak—
'Twere a Chinese crew, and they walked the plank too bloody scared to squeak;
We found six million taels aboard and I cached 'em then and there,
In the midst of a big black cloud that hung like an island in the air.

"The very next week our pirut ship hit the Flatiron building shoal,
And grabbin' a parachute saved me—but I was the only soul;
Since then I've been a driftin' round, a hopin' to strike that cloud,
Where I hid the gold in the strenuous days of the airship pirut crowd.

"But the cloud ain't near Pikes Peak no more, but it's driftin' round the earth,
And it's leadin' me a merry chase, and I'm losin' weight and girth;
So take the advice of an airship tar—when off on a freebootin' flight
Don't hide yer gold upon a cloud unless it is anchored tight."

MR. CARNEGIE'S DOUBLE.

Visitors and customs officials on the White Star pier were somewhat puzzled Thursday when the gang plank of the Oceanic was hoisted up and James Albert Shelton, of London, walked ashore.

Mr. Shelton bears a striking resemblance to the steel man, and rather enjoys the joke when persons refer to him as Mr. Carnegie. Several passengers on the Oceanic thought that the Laird of Skibo was traveling incognito when Mr. Shelton first appeared on deck.

WASHINGTONS' FIRST INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

MR. TAFT'S inauguration will cost about $80,000, reckoning on the basis of Mr. Roosevelt's, on which $83,000 was spent. Its expenses will be paid by the people who attend it and buy tickets to the parade stands and the inaugural ball. If there is a deficit it will be met out of a guarantee fund subscribed to by business men of Washington. The only direct expenditure by the government will be a small appropriation for the extra policing and lighting of Washington.

So far as the law of the land is concerned, it will be fully complied with if Mr. Taft and Mr. Sherman take a trolley car to the Capitol and, after being sworn in, stroll off into the country for a game of golf. The remainder of the ceremony, the parade, fireworks and inaugural ball, is the unofficial shindig of the people of Washington.

Washington Two Months Late.

General Washington was nearly two months late for the first set inauguration day, or at least the "first Wednesday in March, 1789, prescribed for commencing proceedings" under the new constitution. The officers of the first Congress tried to get its members together on that day, which happened to fall on March 4, but because its members were mostly farmers, loath to leave their plantations before the spring planting, there were continuous adjournments on account of "no quorum" for more than a month, or until April 6, when the electoral vote was counted. Committees were thereupon appointed to notify Washington and Adams, the victors, and the latter managed to coach it from Massachusetts to New York in time to be sworn in as vice president, on April 20.

WASHINGTON'S FIRST INAUGURAL OATH.

But the ship of state had to drift 10 days more without a skipper and with only the first mate in command. Meanwhile Washington was journeying to New York on horseback, passing through triumphal arches and over pathways of flowers strewn by pretty maidens in the towns traversed. At last he arrived at Governor Clinton's house, New York, and the morning of April 30 his carriage was thence escorted by a body of troops and a civic parade to Federal hall.

This set the precedent for an inaugural parade. With the general rode Colonel Humphreys, his aide-de-camp, and Tobias Lear, his private secretary. At Federal hall, they were formally received by special inaugural committees. Then Vice President Adams escorted Washington to the "outer gallery" or balcony of the hall, where, in full view of the numerous street crowds, Chancellor Livingston administered the oath. Next a crier proclaimed "Long live George Washington, President of the United States." The general then proceeded within to the Senate chamber, where he delivered an address which established the precedent for the inaugural addresses delivered ever since. Another precedent set at this time by Washington was the wearing of clothes of American wool, during the oath taking. From the Senate the whole assemblage, headed by Washington, proceeded direct to St. Paul's church, where prayers were read by Bishop Provost, and the day wound up with fireworks, as in our time.

First March 4 Inaugural.

The first administration expired by law four years from that first Wednesday in March when Washington should have been inaugurated, and therefore the second inauguration came around again March 4 instead of April 30. And March 4, with its inclement weather, has been a quadrennial crumb in the national bed ever since, although specialists have been often at work on the problem of how to shake it out without getting all of the other appurtenances of the national household in a snarl and a tangle.

So Washington's second swearing in at Philadelphia in 1793 was the first March 4 inaugural, and it so happened that the weather was extremely serene, "for Providence has always smiled on the day of this man," as it was expressed in a paper the next day. Washington was driven by coach and six to the Senate chamber, Philadelphia, where Judge William Cushing of the superior court administered the oath. The father of his country made an address of only a few words, and three hearty cheers were given as he left the hall. That night the Philadelphia Dancing assembly invited the Senate and the House of Representatives to a ball "in honor of the unanimous re-election of George Washington." This may be called the first inaugural ball.

Adams was inaugurated in the House of Representatives, Philadelphia, instead of the Senate, where Washington had been sworn in the last time. Adams occupied the speaker's chair, with Washington and Jefferson (the new vice president) at his right, the speaker at his left and the supreme court at a table in front. In the evening the merchants of Philadelphia gave Washington a luxurious farewell banquet, the remains of which were sent to the hospitals and jails.

Jefferson's was the first inauguration at Washington. The story that he rode alone to the capitol, hitched his horse to the fence and walked into the Senate unattended is a myth, for the newspapers of that time show that a battery of artillery and a procession of citizens escorted him from his tavern, whither he marched afoot to the old Senate, where a salute of artillery greeted him. From the Senate he did not go directly to the White House, for he and Adams had had a falling out over the latter's nomination near midnight of the night before of a number of federal officials whose four-year terms were thus made to cover Jefferson's administration. Adams and his family had left Washington at sunrise, taking no part in the inauguration, and leaving only servants to welcome Jefferson to the White House. Jefferson did not receive this cold welcome until the evening, when there was a general illumination of the city. At his second inauguration the employes of the navy yard paraded.

Madison's Voice Too Thin

Madison took the oath in the old House of Representatives rather than in the Senate, and it is said that he read his inaugural address in such a low voice that only a very few heard it. He passed out to his carriage between lines of militia. The first inaugural ball in Washington was held that evening in Long's hotel. The two houses of Congress having been at loggerheads over which should be the scene of Monroe's induction into office, the matter was compromised by swearing him upon an elevated portico immediately between the two, but his second oath was administered in the House, where the Marine band enlivened the scene. Quincy Adams was also sworn in in the House, but Jackson established the precedent of taking the oath upon the east portico of the Capitol, although he was sworn the second time in the House, on account of the intense cold. All succeeding Presidents, however, have followed Jackson's first example and kissed the Bible on the east portico.

A disgraceful scene followed his first inauguration, when a vast rabble followed him from the Capitol to the White House to partake of a generous spread to which all comers had been invited. Barrels of punch were upset on the carpets, men with muddy boots stood upon the upholstered furniture, draperies were torn down by the crush and Jackson himself had to be rescued when the hilarious throng squeezed him into a corner. But at last the crowd was coaxed outside by the removal of the punch barrels onto the lawn and, profiting by this orgy, Jackson was more exclusive in his hospitality at his second inauguration, which closed with a ball at the Central Masonic hall. He escorted his successor Van Buren, to the latter's oath-taking in a phaeton built of timbers from the Constitution, and they were preceded by an impressive escort of cavalry and infantry. In the evening of this inauguration day of Van Buren there were two balls given, but Van Buren attended only one, at Carusi's saloon.

The first big inaugural crowd was that which greeted William Henry Harrison. It was 75,000 strong, and "Old Tippecanoe" rode to the Capitol on his horse followed by floats, companies of veterans and numerous marching clubs. He held a public reception in the White House in the afternoon and attended three inaugural balls at night, but the severity of the weather, in which he stood bareheaded to deliver his inaugural address, cost him his life within a few weeks. Three inaugural balls were also given in Polk's honor. Taylor rode to the Capitol behind four spanking grays with an impressive military escort. He stopped en route for Polk, who had already left the White House and was at a hotel. In the evening three inaugural balls, one military, were again held. Pierce, bowing right and left, stood all the way from the White House to the Capitol in an open barouche presented by Boston friends. He joined with Buchanan, his successor, in the festivities of the latter's inaugural ball, held in a temporary building in Judiciary Square.

"Corsages Shockingly Decollete."

German sharpshooters were distributed upon the roofs of the houses lining the route of Lincoln's first inaugural procession to and from the Capitol. Buchanan and two senators rode in Lincoln's carriage, which was surrounded by a bodyguard of cavalry, infantry and riflemen. Lincoln read his first inaugural address on the east front of the Capitol upon a platform below which 60 armed guards faced the auditors. Stephen A. Douglas, his rival in the campaign, held Lincoln's hat during the ceremonies. The ball of this year was held again in a temporary structure in Judiciary square, but that of Lincoln's second inauguration was held in the model room of the patent office. "Every lady makes the most of her, or somebody else's, hair," wrote a reporter of this function who also took note of corsages shockingly decollete. The first negroes ever seen in an inaugural parade appeared in Lincoln's second.

Grant's first inaugural parade marched in eight grand divisions. Appreciating Grant's strained relations with Johnson, the inaugural committee proposed to drive the two to the Capitol in separate carriages abreast, but this angered Johnson. He absented himself from the entire ceremony and Grant rode to the Capitol with General Rawlins. This was the greatest inaugural parade yet seen, and the ball was held that night in the north wing of the treasury. Grant's second inauguration day was the coldest in history, the thermometer falling to four degrees. A [illegible] division composed of the high civil officials refused to brave the weather, and all of the troops were numb with cold.

Sneezes Drowned the Music

Sneezes drowned the music that night at the inaugural ball, held in a $10,000 structure in Judiciary square, and every other guest is said to have taken cold!

Hayes was inaugurated twice, although serving but one term, for March 4 fell that year on Sunday, and he thought it safest to take the oath then as well as on Monday, the day set for the public ceremony. Owing to the bitter contest of his election he had not been sure of the presidency until a few days before the inauguration, and there had been little time for preparing the ceremony. Kissing the Bible at the public ceremony, his lips chanced to touch this verse of a psalm: "They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the Lord I will destroy them." Some superstitious political adversaries feared this as an evil omen for their party. The [illegible] was a torchlight procession [illegible] reception to Hayes in the old Willard hotel.

The Garfield inaugural ball was held in the national museum, then unfinished, as is the new [illegible] museum [illegible]. Cleveland's first inauguration, the warmest of record, [illegible] all previous ceremonies, the crowds from outside numbering 16[illegible]. The holding of the ball that year in the pension office set a precedent followed ever since. Cleveland took both of his oaths on a little red Bible given him by his mother.

Although Benjamin Harrison's inauguration day was the wettest in history, 30,000 men paraded in the rain, and the ball broke all records with an attendance of 12,000, while the inaugural committee realized a surplus of $26,000.

Cleveland's Courteous Example.

Cleveland that year broke all previous records for courtesy to a successful rival by inviting Harrison to be his guest and to discuss inaugural plans with him previous to the inauguration, and four years later, when Cleveland in turn defeated Harrison, the latter returned the courtesy. A unique feature of McKinley's first inauguration was a mounted detachment of special guards composed of the sons of ex-Presidents. He reviewed his second parade within a large case of plate glass placed in the center of the reviewing stand to protect him from the inclement weather. While taking his oath four years ago Roosevelt wore a ring containing a lock of Lincoln's hair and given to him by John Hay. Roosevelt was escorted to the Capitol by veterans of his famous Rough Riders, and until 6:15 that night he stood reviewing a record-breaking parade, among whose novel features were a body of Indian chiefs, [illegible] a troop of cowboys [illegible] commanded by Seth Bullock, a phalanx of 600 of the "President's neighbors" from Oyster Bay and a body of anthracite miners bearing a banner inscribed "We [illegible] the man who settled our strike." The [illegible] crowd amounting to [illegible] more than the population of Indianapolis poured into Washington. Three noted officials died from exposure to the weather that day: The [illegible] Senator Bate, Ambassador Aspiroz of Mexico and Judge Lawrence Weldon.

That Theodore Roosevelt will not return up Pennsylvania avenue with President Taft when the latter heads the parade from the capitol to the White House has been announced by Secretary Loeb. Mr. Roosevelt will go from the capitol to the Union station, where he will take the train for Oyster Bay. Thus, when Mr. Taft makes his triumphal march to the White House there will be no grounds for doubt that the plaudits from the multitudes are all his own.

M. Paul Wolfskel, professor of mathematics at Darmstadt, has instituted a prize of $25,000 as an inducement to rediscover the famous theorem of Fermat, which has been lost for over two centuries.

FAMOUS BAD MEN OF THE PAST

W. B. (Bat) Masterson, Former Sheriff of Dodge City, Tells of the Strenuous Days on the Plains.

THERE is a generation approaching its zenith in this country today that has witnessed, yes, taken part in one of the greatest events in history. I refer to the settlement and civilization of the great west.

We who live today are not yet where we view the matter in perspective, the events in which we have taken part are dwarfed by familiarity. It is a fact, however, that never before in the world's history has a whole half continent been explored and civilized in so short space of time—scarcely half a century.

And how civilized? Crossed and recrossed with railroads, until its remote corners are accessible to the locomotive's whistle. Studded with great cities, that would be the wonder of any other age in the world's history. Burdened with crops of such abundance that the entire earth's population looks to it for some portion of its sustenance. Furnishing mineral for manufacturer, jeweler and scientist the world over. A more productive, more useful, more law-abiding and more comfortable piece of earth's surface cannot be found. And all in a short period of 50 years.

Occasionally I grow thoughtful and look back on the events in which I have taken a prominent part. The time seems short, scarcely 35 years. But when I review the results I feel as old as the world. I have seen half a continent settled and molded into the most important part of the greatest government on earth.

I can go into large cities in the middle west and tell of the time when its location was open prairie known only to the buffalo and Indian. Then of the first cowboy, and those who sought to entertain him, then the shopkeepers and eventually the railroad with all civilization at its heels.

Great days were those for the development of character. Never has there been a more perfect demonstration of the law of "the survival of the fittest."

The law of the constitution was generally the last thing to arrive in a new community. It trailed laggingly far behind the railroad's entrance. In the meantime there was property, and man's rights, to be maintained. So each man established himself as a separate government, maintaining a supreme court within himself that gave the quickest decisions the world has ever seen. These decisions were backed up with an army usually equipped with two rapid-fire weapons of the six-shooting variety which the army used with more or less skill in carrying out its supreme court's decisions.

According to their individual governments, or shall we say this man's ability to manipulate his artillery, just that far were his rights respected. Eventually he became known as a "bad man," contraction of "a bad man to fool with."

What more elemental argument could a stranger want for respecting a committee's dignity, its rights and shall we say eccentricities, than: "Do you see that fellow? That's Bat Masterson, the sheriff; he has 25 notches on his gun."

The life of a sheriff on the plains in the boom days of cowpunching wasn't as peaceful an occupation as is that of an eastern sheriff. However, a man wasn't compelled to run for the office of sheriff. If he did run and was elected, he knew the character of the work he had taken up. It was to be his six-shooter against the other fellow's six-shooter, and if he lost—well, they could get another sheriff easy enough. He took the job with such understanding.

Any methods less severe in the handling of plain questions would have bred failure, and the moral growth of the country would have been slow. When it became necessary for a sheriff to put an undesirable citizen out of town, it was thoroughly and generally understood that the return to that town of that undesirable citizen would, logically, be followed by the death of one or the other of the parties. If the man did return, it was customary for him to visit a saloon and the word would be passed to the sheriff. If the sheriff was to retain his authority in that country he had to go to that saloon and kill the outlaw, taking, at the same time, the chance of being killed himself.

In this manner was the majesty of the law preserved. It was the drunkard and the thief that gave us peace officers of the plains our troubles. The drunkard who lost his head and went on a piratical cruise down the main street trying to "shoot up" the town; the thief who annexed everything loose in a careless community. For the latter, the penalty was sufficiently severe to make his occupation exciting—death was the usual thing.

Now the gambler, the steel-nerved, gleamy-eyed desperado of the dime novel, well, he didn't exist at all; but the real gambler (the one we had to deal with, was the man that never gave the sheriff any trouble. I have had 35 years experience on the plains. I have been an adventurer, sheriff and owner of a Dodge City dance hall, where Eddie Foy, Bobby Gaylor and many other present day actors of note worked for the amusement of cowpunchers. I have witnessed death in all its forms, and disorder generally; but when I say that I have never seen a gambler who was a bad man, either in the literal sense or the contracted form, I believe I am stating an uncontrovertible fact.

The gambler is the first business man on the ground. From the very nature of things he must be a worker for law and order. His bank roll, if nothing else, must be protected. There are varying views as to the morality of gambling, but I am only dealing with the condition of the frontier.

The "bad man" did more toward implanting the law and making a soft couch for civilization in the western country than any other force in fact, than all other forces combined.

The west had its share of murderers, horse thieves and the like, about the same percentage as will be found in any gathering of men, but these were not the "bad men" of the west. It is here that one may appreciate the difference between the "bad men" of the east and the "bad men" of the west.

Consider the characteristics of some of these paradoxical "bad men." There is White Beaver, whose name is Dr. Frank Powell, a practicing physician today in a small Wisconsin town. He did his work on the plains, and did it well.

In the late sixties, when he was a surgeon in the Fifth United States cavalry, he was known as the surgeon scout, and was one of the most remarkable trailers that ever went into the west. He was a sure shot with the rifle or the revolver. Powell never sought trouble, but when once started in a fight, he was the last man to quit. He came into his title in an odd way, characteristic of his determination and courage. The late Colonel Prentiss Ingraham tells the story. Word reached the cavalry troop that smallpox had developed among the hostiles. Powell loaded himself with virus and boldly appeared in the Indian camp, a detachment of Winnebago Sioux, which had taken to the warpath. He said to the chief:

"Your medicine men are fools. They cannot cure your braves of the disease which is ravishing them. I have come to you unarmed, and I offer my life at the stake if I do not stop the spread of the disease."

The chief accepted the offer, and Powell vaccinated every man, woman and child in the tribe. Before he left the camp even the medicine men asked him to teach them the secret treatment. He was presented by the Indians with a robe made of 16 white beaver skins, the beaver being considered by the Sioux a sacred animal.

One of the most picturesque characters that ever enlivened the plains was James B. Hickock, called Wild Bill. He was a mail rider at 12 years of age, and killed a footpad who tried to hold him up. He had as many adventures as a historical novel hero. He met Jim Lane's band of Jayhawkers and Regulators, and was admitted as a member after he had proved his ability by whipping three of their number.

He was driver, boss wagoner and division manager for Russell, Waddels & Majors, government frieighters to the Rockies. Bill was also a scout, a stage driver and a marshal. He did the biggest thing in the way of individual achievement I know of. When he was driving stage, and had put up for the night in a cabin, he was attacked by Big Lanigan and his gang in Hays City, Kan., who had sworn to have his life. Bill was terribly hurt in the encounter, but he killed two and crippled another. Bill was murdered in a Deadwood saloon by a man whom he considered a friend.

Western Kansas, Nebraska, the Panhandle of Texas and the neighboring country has its "bad men" today, but instead of fighting for rights at revolver points they are reaping civilization's harvest on the largest cattle ranches that exist. The [illegible] [illegible]dians that fought for law and order 30 years ago. The same old energy is nearly diverted to other channels. The unconquerable will, indomitable courage that is the active principle, is the same that is making the American a "bad man to fool with" throughout the earth.

Perhaps the best example of the typical "bad man" to be found anywhere today is on the stage. In "The Squaw Man," in which Dustin Farnum is starring this season, there is Cash Hawkins, known and described to the rest as a "bad man and cattle rustler." In one scene he invites te cowpunchers in the Long Horn saloon to "drink with me." The invitation is emphasized by a drawn 44-caliber Colt. It is not used because Hawkins had "the drop" on every man present and each individual knew it. This is one of the few cases on record where a "bad man" pulled a gun and did not use it; and that failure later cost Hawkins his life.

Edwin Milton Royle took this incident from real life, and it actually occurred in the Rocky Mountain Sheep saloon, West Cliff, Colo.

"Young" Pete Rowley, one of the "bad men" of Colorado, dropped into the saloon, loaded with bad whisky. Some of the "Bar L" and "Broken T" outfit, most of whom were Englishmen, had come in from a roundup and were quietly drinking, when Rowley, with an oath, whipped out his gun, waved it toward the bar, and in a burst of profanity declared: "The house drinks with me. I'll kill the first coyote and short-horn who don't step lively."

When the glasses were filled the rustler proposed a toast as he lifted his glass on high and swept his gun in a semicircle: "Here's to the Brits." A young Englishman, Hunter, stepped up to the desperado, whipped out his revolver and placed it against Rowley's side, blowing a hole through his body. As he fell dead Rowley's finger closed convulsively. When the smoke cleared away it was seen that Hunter's left ear had been clipped off by the last shot of the "good bad man."

1909 SHIRTWAISTS HAVE LONG SLEEVES.

Most women make up the summer blouses before the Easter dressmaking demands all the resources of the sewing-room. This pretty model, one of this year's dainty styles, will offer suggestions for new linen blouses. The material is sheer handkerchief linen, into which are set insertions of two laces—one heavy and the other in more cobwebby effect. Maltese and torchon laces were chosen for the blouse shown and the arrangement with tucking in panel effect is very attractive. Into the neck of the waist is set one of the shaped chemisettes of Irish lace which may be purchased ready to apply at moderate cost.

A NEW HOUSE—NO GHOSTS.

Experiences of Man Who Rented a House that Was Really Haunted.

From the New York Times.

"I feel pretty good tonight," said Bascomb to his caller, as he put away some plans on which he had been working, "because this week I succeeded in exorcising another ghost and quieting a buyer who had been raising an awful rumpus. About three months ago I sold a two-family house out in Westchester to a man who wanted to live in it himself. His inspector looked the place over, pronounced it in first class shape, and the property was transferred all right. Two days after the man moved in he came into the office in a deuce of a stew and the dickens of a temper.

"'Look here!' he shouted, 'that place you sold me is haunted. All last night we couldn't sleep, and my wife swears she won't live there.'

"I quieted him and reasoned with him, and he went away, though he was still doubtful. I knew he would be back, and he was in less than a week. This time he was plainly shaken up.

"'It's at it again,' he said, 'and I hold you responsible. You knew when I bought the place I was putting all my money into it. You'd had it on your hands for nearly a year. Now I know it was because possible buyers were onto the fact that there was something queer about the place. I'll bet a workingman, a mason or a carpenter or something like that, was killed when it was being built, and it's he that is causing the trouble. My wife is sure of it and she's on the verge of breakdown.'

"'What does the ghost do?' I asked.

"'Well,' he said, uneasily, 'we haven't seen anything. It's just a groaning and moaning, and it seems to travel upstairs and then down and all around the place. It is the most awful thing I ever listened to.' He turned fiercely on me, 'and I'm not going to stand it much longer, either. You did me on this place, and I hold you responsible. If anything happens, well—'

"I questioned him and found the ghost was active only on stormy nights, and he gave me as well as he could the dates on which the trouble had happened. Then I looked over this file of weather reports, clipped from a daily paper, and found that the ghost got busy only when the wind was in a certain direction. Day before yesterday I started in right, and I headed for the place. The man and woman were both upset. The ghost had been at it already. We sat and talked for a few minutes, and suddenly I was brought to my feet by the most unearthly wailing groan I have ever heard. It started to shrill and quiver all through the place, rising and falling as it went along. The woman was half hysterical, and had grasped the man's arm. He was as frightened as she, and so wasn't much of a consolation to her.

"I was mystified, but I made a raid of the place, still listening to the [illegible]. [illegible]

The ghost was [illegible] by a little round hole in the frame of one of the windows and the inside cord of the window. When the wind was right it rushed through the hole, set the cord to vibrating and formed a most beautiful flute and harp effect. A plug of wood laid that ghost for good and all. The people in the house could have found it only they were too blamed frightened to search.

"Another customer accused me of having walled a live cat up in a building. The noise certainly did sound like a cat [illegible] awfully [illegible] [illegible] tric wires having got crossed in such a way that at times they produced the most dismal music ear ever listened to.

"The hardest to locate was the ghost of a departed basso profundo who at unseasonable hours would bellow forth one loud, deep chest note. It was really terrible to listen to. But we got him at last. He was a fire proof brick near a window ledge and cracked in such a way that the wind could produce in it a perfect bass note. So [illegible]

S.S.S.
CURES CATARRH

When we say S. S. S. cures Catarrh, we do not mean that it merely checks the symptoms for a short time. Some local applications will do that by simply clearing and soothing the irritated mucous membranes, but all the while the cause which produces Catarrh is left in the system, and at the first cold, or disagreeable spell of weather, the trouble returns with all its annoying symptoms.

Catarrh is a blood disease which causes a general inflammation of the inner linings or mucous membranes of the body. The diseasing of these delicate tissues and surfaces by the continual contact with impure blood causes irritation and an unhealthy discharge, producing all the well known symptoms of Catarrh, such as mucus dropping back into the throat, buzzing noises in the head and ears, stuffy feeling in the nose, watery eyes, headaches, slight fever, a general weakness of the body, impaired health, etc. Even the lungs become affected by the continual passage of impure blood through them if the trouble is allowed to remain in the system.

S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all the impure catarrhal matter, and at the same time building up the system by its unequaled tonic effects. It goes into the circulation and attacks the disease at its head and removes every trace of impurity that is causing the trouble. In plain language, S. S. S. purifies the blood so that the mucous linings and tissues are all supplied with healthy, life-giving properties, instead of being saturated with unhealthy catarrhal matter. Then the inflamed and irritated membranes and surfaces heal, every symptom disappears, the stomach is toned up and Catarrh thoroughly cured. The inflammation which produces the disease can never be permanently relieved until the cause has been removed from the blood. This S. S. S. will do, and then nature hastens the return of perfect health.

THE HASKIN LETTERS

¶ The attention of our readers is invited to the daily letter by Frederic J. Haskin now appearing in this newspaper. Written for busy people to read, these letters are brief, accurate, instructive and entertaining. They deal in facts, rather than opinions, and leave the reader to draw his own conclusions.

¶ Mr. Haskin's subjects embrace every phase of American national life, as well as foreign affairs in which the United States is interested. They are timely, and are designed to give wider information concerning current topics than can be given in the news dispatches.

¶ The boy or girl who will read these letters regularly, and who retains even a small portion of the information they contain, will soon have a fund of knowledge of general affairs which will prove a valuable addition to a scholastic education.

¶ The man or woman who will keep a scrap-book of these letters will soon have a most valuable addition to a reference library. Read these articles for a while and you will get the habit.

¶ If there is a subject which you would like to have treated, write to Mr. Haskin in care of this newspaper.

ALTRUISM.

WHEN cream is ninety cents a quart,
And new-laid eggs are soaring,
And butter—of the milder sort—
Necessitates ignoring,
We say, askance, "Just think of that!"
And eat our bread with bacon fat.

But when our neighbors come to dine
We don't consider prices,
But give them courses eight or nine,
From oysters up to ices.
You'd never dream the purse was limp
Or how we have to save and skimp.

For then we buy us cream galore
And mushrooms out of season
And fatted birds though prices soar
Beyond all rhyme or reason;
Champagne and festive fizz abound,
And hired waiters gallop 'round.

'Tis thus that we exemplify
The love we bear our brother,
And cheerfully ourselves deny
That we may feed each other,
Obeying both the Golden Rule,
And modern altruistic school.
—Smart Set.

LINCOLN centenary observances claimed precedence over valentine traditions this year and never were there fewer parties given at this season than during the week just over. The patriotism displayed all over the country does honor to American man and womanhood and it has been a worthy object lesson to the rising generation.

The leading society event of this week will be the annual ball of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club which is to be given at the club house in Broadmoor Thursday evening. The directors never count the expense of this much anticipated event and those favored with an invitation deem themselves most fortunate.

Some of the well known young society people are planning a subscription dinner of 30 or more covers to be given at the Antlers previous to the ball. Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilpin and several others contemplate entertaining dinner guests that evening.

Washington's birthday will be celebrated in society with a subscription "Bal Poudre" to be given on the night of February 22 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Castello, on North Nevada avenue. The Zelbulon Pike chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet with the regent, Mrs. Francis W. Goddard on Washington's birthday for a costume colonial meeting and the outlook for social activity is brighter than for some time.

Handsome Reception.

The largest social function of the week was on Wednesday when Mrs. George B. Tripp held a reception of elegant appointments at her residence on East Cache la Poudre street. Those receiving with Mrs. Tripp were Mrs. William Vernet Ingham of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and Mrs. Louis R. Skinner of Denver.

The ladies invited to assist were Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mrs. William F. Slocum, Mrs. Frank F. Castello, Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, Mrs. H. C. Harmon, Mrs. Edmund C. Van Diest, Mrs. James P. Shearer, Mrs. Eugene A. Sunderlin, Mrs. P. T. Hanscom.

In the drawing room and music room there were potted plants and a profusion of carnations. Asparagus plumosa formed an exquisite frieze effect. The dining room was enwreathed with holly in the frieze effect and illuminated with tiniest of electric lights. Upon the center of the refreshment table covered with a Cluny lace cloth, was a pretty basket ornamented with a huge tulle bow in the beauty tints and heaped with American Beauty roses.

Strachan Tea.

Mrs. William Strachan and Miss Strachan charmingly entertained several friends at a tea Friday afternoon at their residence, 1520 North Nevada avenue, from 4:30 until 6 o'clock. Those assisting were Mrs. James P. Shearer, Mrs. Thomas C. Strachan, Mrs. Willis L. Strachan, Mrs. Matthew Kennedy, Mrs. Edward W. Giddings, Mrs. Louis A. Giddings, the Misses Wilcox, Miss Scholz, Miss Estill and others. Pink predominated in the dainty decorations.

Mrs. Davis Gives Tea.

In compliment to her cousin, Miss Edith Gorham of Philadelphia, Pa., who is her house guest, Mrs. Henry E. Davis gave a charming informal tea Friday afternoon at her residence, 1117 North Nevada avenue. The guests invited included the prominent young society men and women of this city.

Valentine Luncheon.

An elaborate costume valentine luncheon was given Friday by Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, 1903 Wood avenue as a parting compliment to her sister, Mrs. William Vernet Ingham of Wilkesbarre, Pa. Covers were laid for 12.

Luncheon at Country Club.

Of very smart appointment was the luncheon given yesterday at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club by Mrs. William Whitridge Williams, a comparatively new acquisition to North End social circles. Great sheaves of American Beauties filled the cut-glass vases and the stately blossoms ensconced within their own luxurious foliage, were artistically scattered over the snow damask.

The guests of Mrs. Williams were Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, Mrs. Frederick H. Morley, Mrs. Frank Gilpin, Mrs. Clarence Edsall, Mrs. Wilfred M. Hager, Mrs. Charles T. Lowndes, Mrs. Francis Drexel Smith, Mrs. Meredith Bailey, Jr., Mrs. W. O. Randol, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Frank E. Kernochan, Mrs. H. Alexander Smith, Mrs. James T. Anderson, Mrs. Gerald B. Webb, Miss Thornton, Miss Hayes, Miss Lockhart, Miss Anderson.

Colonial Tea.

Mrs. Francis W. Goddard, regent of the Zebulon Pike chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain the members of the chapter at a colonial tea, Monday, February 22, at her residence, 808 North Cascade avenue. Mrs. Edward B. Field, Jr., of the Colorado Chapter, Denver, will be the guest of honor, and she will read a paper on "Southern Homes." The regent has requested that the members wear colonial costumes, if possible; if not, then a black gown with white cap and 'kerchief. Several of the members have signified their intention of appearing in heirloom articles of dress, and the regent herself will wear a gown over 200 years old.

College Picnic.

The faculty and students of Colorado College are arranging to hold a picnic in the Garden of the Gods on Washington's birthday, Monday, February 22. A committee on arrangements has been appointed and a novel program is being arranged for the occasion. A hare-and-hound race over the mesa will probably be run in the morning, and a pennant hunt and a senior-faculty baseball game are under consideration. The committee promises a good program of enthusiastic speeches, etc. Box lunches will be provided by the girls of the Y. W. C. A.

Patriotic Luncheon.

A "Lincoln" luncheon was given by Miss Jessie Curr, 426 North Tejon street, Friday noon, at which the guests were Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mrs. Hiram V. Wandell, Mrs. Henry W. Hoagland, Mrs. Louie Coffin, Miss Reizer, Miss Jackson and Miss Nichols. The name cards bore a portrait of Lincoln and the centerpiece formed a flag on which rested a large bouquet of deep red roses and ferns.

American Music Society.

The Colorado Springs Center of the American Music society will hold its February meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Seldomridge, 1015 North Nevada avenue, on Thursday evening, February 18, at 8:15 o'clock, when the following program will be presented:

Suite for Piano, Four Hands
Harvey Loomis
Miss Herzer and Miss Martin
Songs from a Child's Garden of Verses
Natalie Curtis
(Poems by Robert Louis Stevenson.)
Mrs. John Speed Tucker.
American Indian Music, Piano Solo.
Arthur Farwell
(a) Ceremony of Approach.
(b) Pawnee Horses.
(c) Navajo War Dance.
Miss Linney.
Israfel .... Edgar Stillman-Kelley
(Poem by Edgar Allan Poe.)
Mrs. Seldomridge.

"The Mascot."

The production of "The Mascot" will be made the prominent society event of the first of the week, as the advance bookings show conclusively. Citizens have appreciatively noted the fine philanthropy which led the Rev. Henry Rutgers Remsen to promote the establishment of Camp Vigil, an undenominational resort for the worthy young people in this vicinity, and by their patronage of the entertainments for its benefit will set upon it the seal of their approval.

The popular comic opera as interpreted by competent artists under the direction of Mr. Clarence D. Sears and Mr. Otto Jeancon will be thoroughly enjoyable and "standing room only" will rule each evening.

The patronesses and patrons of the opera are as follows:

Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Elizabeth Cass Goddard, Mrs. William Kenyon Jewett, Mrs. Horace G. Lunt, Mrs. Francis H. Weeks, Miss Sarah H. Dorsey, Mrs. Clarence P. Dodge, Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin, Mrs. Francis Gilpin, Mrs. Joseph Harrison, Mrs. Henry Hine, Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, Mrs. B. P. Anderson, Mrs. Gerald B. Webb, Mrs. James T. Anderson, Mrs. Horace E. Pastorius, Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, Mrs. J. Arthur Connell, Mrs. Lewis P. Eldridge, Mr. R. L. Holland, Mr. George B. Tripp, Mr. Frank A. Perkins, Dr. Henry W. Hoagland, Mr. George Rex Buckman, Mr. George T. Richards, Mr. Butler Williamson, Mr. Clarence Edsall, Mr. H. C. Harmon, Mr. Edmond C. van Diest, Dr. E. R. Neeper, Mr. George C. Lockhart, Mr. S. S. Pierce, Mr. Charles T. Fertig, Dr. William F. Slocum, Mr. Clarence C. Hamlin, Mr. Albert N. Hart, Mr. Henry T. Lowe, Mr. Fred L. Ballard, Dr. Frank L. Dennis, Dr. Daniel J. Scully, Dr. Peter O. Hanford, Mr. L. M. Hunt, Mr. A. Sutton.

Euterpean Society.

The inaugural meeting of the newly organized Colorado Springs branch of the Euterpean society exceeded the anticipations of its most sanguine promoters. Perkins hall was peopled last Thursday night with a majority of the nearly 200 members, accompanied by their guests, and all were well pleased with the admirably selected program.

Dean Edward S. Parsons of Colorado College, who was afterwards elected president of the society, made the introductory remarks regarding the Euterpean plans for the instruction and entertainment of busy people who had been attracted to its system for the study, correlatively of art, music and literature. Mr. Francis Eaton of Chicago, the representative of Mr. Wilbur M. Derthick, the founder, who has been in the city as an organizer for the last three months was then introduced.

Mr. Eaton spoke briefly of "Euterpean Aims and Ideals" before he began his exposition with a test in listening to music as a language. While a descriptive analysis by Edward Baxter Perry was given, Saint Saens' "Danse Macabre" was played by Mr. Wilhelm Schmidt, first piano, and Miss Marie Gashwiler, second piano.

Gounod's exquisite serenade "Sing, Smile, Slumber" was beautifully sung by Mrs. Edward E. Taliaferro, as the second number, with a violin obligato by Mrs. Mame Briscoe and Mrs. Edward C. Sharer at the piano. Mr. Eaton gave the literary interpretation of Francis Walker.

The masterly analysis of "Lohengrin," written by John S. Van Cleve, led up to the interpretation of Wagner's prelude to the famous opera, upon the organ by Mr. Bertram Taylor Wheatley.

Dean Edward D. Hale was the musician when the piano arrangement of Chopin's Nocturne in G minor, opus 37, No. 1, was used in illustrating the interpretive analysis prepared in regard to that composition by Edward Baxter Perry.

Next came the famous "Invocation to the Evening Star" from "Tannhauser" with the analysis by Francis Walker and the baritone solo was beautifully rendered by Mr. H. Howard Brown, Mrs. Burt Davis accompanying upon the organ. Throughout Mr. Eaton exemplified the Euterpean principle of analysis in a manner which gave life and beauty before undreamed of in familiar compositions even by those who have had exceptional advantages, educationally.

The evening's program was concluded with a union of poetry and music. Mr. Eaton recited Keats' "A May Morning," for which the musical setting was Mendelssohn's "Fruhlingslied," the lovely rhythmic "Spring Song." Mrs. Briscoe, violin, and Mr. Hale, piano, being the musical interpreters.

Mr. Eaton concluded his public duties by presenting the report of the nominating committee which was adopted and the officers of the society declared elected by acclamation. The officers of the society are: President, Dean Edward S. Parsons; vice president, Mrs. Edwin A. Sawyer; chairman of program committee, Mr. H. Howard Brown; chairman of picture exhibits, Mrs. Ida M. Hamilton; secretary, Miss Martha Lindley; treasurer, Mr. E. L. Whitney; executive committee, Dr. Alfred A. Blackman, Professor John H. Richards, Professor S. A. Sackett, Mrs. John Speed Tucker, Miss Fonetta Flansburg, Dean Edward D. Hale, Mrs. Benjamin F. Webster, Mr. Otto F. Dubach; press representative, Mrs. Ella Celeste Adams.

The first regular meeting of the society will be held on the evening of February 25 at a place to be announced hereafter. The program will be devoted to Millet, Burns and Grieg.

Bridge Luncheon.

The members of the Bridge club were entertained delightfully at luncheon last Tuesday by Mrs. J. B. Colt at her residence, 1516 North Tejon street. The centerpiece composed of daffodils and white carnations combined with ferns was greatly admired.

The afternoon was spent in playing bridge. The substitutes were Mrs. Ferd L. Gutmann, Mrs. J. C. Vining and Mrs. Charles J. Heath. The first prize, a hand-painted vase, fell to Mrs. Clarence E. Titus; the second, a hand-painted sugar and creamer, to Mrs. George S. Milone. Mrs. Frank G. Peck, 817 North Nevada avenue, will be the hostess Wednesday, February 17.

Bridge Party.

Mrs. Charles Dickinson, 1431 North Nevada avenue, charmingly entertained a little company of ladies at bridge last Monday afternoon. The prize, a Cauldon cup and saucer, was won by Mrs. Arthur Gay Brigham. Others participating were Mrs. A. C. Magruder, Mrs. Hiram V. Wandell, Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, Mrs. William V. Ingham, Mrs. Daniel J. Scully, Mrs. A. G. Hodgetts, Mrs. Beverley Tucker, Mrs. John Speed Tucker, Mrs. Mortimer E. Serat, Miss Kyle and Mrs. Dickinson.

Entertained at Cards.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Mason, 111 East Jefferson street, gave an enjoyable card party Tuesday evening. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Willis L. Strachan, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Crannell, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Slaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Crissey, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Baker and Mrs. Laura Reynolds.

Annual Masquerade Ball.

Of the almost innumerable successful social affairs given by the Colorado Springs B. P. O. E., No. 309, none have proven more enjoyable than their annual masquerade balls. This year's ball, given Wednesday evening in the beautiful club house, even surpassed those of former years, as the more than 200 in attendance will enthusiastically testify.

The Elks' orchestra was augmented considerably and special new dance music had been rehearsed in anticipation of the ball. At 11 o'clock, when unmasking was in order, there were any number of surprises. After partaking of an elaborate luncheon, dancing was resumed until the early morning.

The costumes were varied and ranged from kings and queens to clowns and negroes, Colonial to Highland. Gypsies and "Buster Browns" and "Mary Janes" hobnobbed genially. Mrs. William A. Snyder attracted much attention for her unique costume was made of the headings from 800 copies of the Colorado Springs Gazette.

The Evening Telegraph was represented, too, as Mrs. Willis C. Thomas appeared in a natty costume made from that publication.

Beta Sigma Phi.

The valentine masquerade dancing party given Thursday evening by the Bet Sigma Phi society of Cutler academy in the San Luis school building was one of the merriest happenings of the season. Valentine emblems predominated in the decorative scheme and the costumes were noticeably pretty and appropriate.

Among the specially invited guests were the Misses Janet and Louise Kampf, Miss Jennie Pinckney, Miss Florence Perkins, Miss Margaret Sells and Miss Margary Cassiday. The sorority members are Miss Ethyl Barbee, Miss Evelyn Lennox, Miss Alice Jacobs, Miss Alice Perkins, Miss Irene Waters, Miss Dorothy Holden, Miss Agnes Lennox, Miss Natalie Shettle, Miss Marguerite Glasser, Miss Mabel Schofield. Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kurie chaperoned and each young lady invited a young gentleman to be her guest at the dance.

George Washington Party.

The members and friends of chapter C, P. E. O., will participate in a "George Washington" party to be given Saturday evening, February 20, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Koehler, 522 West Cucharas street. Mrs. E. C. Whittlesey of Trinidad, state president of the P. E. O., who is the guest of friends in this city, will be among those in attendance.

Twenty-fifth Annual Ball.

The twenty-fifth annual ball of Pike's Peak company, No. 10, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, will be given in the ball room at the Acacia hotel next Thursday evening. The ball was postponed from last week on account of the death of Col. H. C. Cassel. A number of officers and sir knights from other cities have accepted invitations to attend, and the striking uniforms and the stylish evening gowns of the ladies will form a picturesque feature of the ball.

The committee on arrangements for the event is composed of Lieut. W. A. Day, chairman; Sergt. J. C. Wallace and Capt. John Grant. Col. W. A. Davis is chairman of the floor committee and will be assisted by six other members of the company.

For Miss Rowell.

Complimentary to Miss Rowell of Seattle, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Grafton entertained at dinner last Monday evening. Those invited to meet Miss Rowell were Miss Woodworth, Miss Taylor and Miss Carey.

Ohio Society of Colorado Springs.

The Ohio society of Colorado Springs was organized Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium amid much enthusiasm. Beginning with a membership of 200 and every assurance that this will be increased to fully 500 shortly, those promoting the organization predict many joyful reunions of former residents of the Buckeye state. A meeting is planned for next month at which there will be addresses, music and special social features.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Professor James W. Scott; secretary-treasurer, Mr. E. C. F. Whitaker.

The following committees were appointed:

Executive committee—Prof. Carlton Aylard, chairman; Prof. H. R. Chapman, Mrs. Thomas McCaffery, Mr. J. A. Barton and Mr. A. B. Conwell.

Membership committee—Mr. R. H. Ashworth, chairman; Prof. C. G. Collais, Mrs. L. M. Davis, Miss Frances Fickes and Mrs. A. B. Conwell.

Social committee—Miss Myra H. Moore, chairman; Miss Blanche Lytle, Mrs. H. L. McKinnie, Mrs. L. B. Grafton, Dr. C. W. Igo.

King High Five.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Davis, 1312 North Nevada avenue, entertained the members of the King High Five club Thursday evening. Mrs. James H. Gardner received the ladies' first prize, a cut-glass dish; Mrs. Edwin E. Baty, the second, a silver meat fork; Mr. Charles H. Barney, the gentlemen's first prize, a fancy stein; Mr. James H. Gardner, second, a picture. The next meeting will be with Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, 24 East Dale street, Thursday evening, February 25.

"Ye Music of Ye Olden Time."

The members of the Protestant Hospital guild are making preparations for an entertainment to be styled "Ye Music of Ye Olden Time," illustrated by tableaux, in the Opera House, Tuesday evening, March 2. Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, the chairman of the committee, is planning for the rendition of songs representative of early times, beginning with the Indians. The gay cavaliers and the Puritans, too, will have recognition. Pains will be taken to have the stage settings true to early times and the costumes will be carefully selected. The stately minuet will be paced ceremoniously by present day youths and maidens and the entertainment will be replete with novel numbers.

To Meet Mrs. Whittlesey.

Mrs. D. H. Hise, 1316 Washington avenue, gave an informal luncheon last Wednesday in compliment to Mrs. Whittlesey of Trinidad, president of the state P. E. O. Included were Mrs. Seth T. Hull, Mrs. Alex. Koehler, Miss Maud Koehler and Miss Fenstermaker.

WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

OF course we must have duty to make the chalkmarks for us, to build the walls and run the engines of the world. But she never sang our folk songs nor erected our beautiful temples, nor met us with a glow of tenderness when we were sick or sad. She never lighted for us the torches of enthusiasm, devotion and rapture that have made it possible for us to traverse the dark valleys of life. Cold water and a timepiece are her adjuncts, a severe brow and an asperity of voice. Though the paths she treads are often difficult enough, no generous ardor leads her there; she is still an egoist. To be sure she keeps us moving at times when our more glorious guides have flown or evaded us. A stuff, if not a guidon, we must not despise nor entirely overlook her. But let us beware of allowing her to rule our lives, or we shall never live at all. He who remains on the hillside with the sunset while dinner grows cold and you cross may be able to teach you a lesson far worthier of learning than any you can teach him. Occupied with the daily round, duty has no time to sit at the feet of Christ, to seize from the passing hour the precious, immortal moments it may contain, at whatever cost to material comfort or conventional usage. Yet leave these moments out of life and how vast is the loss. Time and tide wait for no man, we are told. Well, what of it? Let man take the gifts they bring as they pass, and he will rule them and not they him. Duty, narrow in heart and mind, speaks to him only in the language of mortality. And who that has indeed warmed himself before the fire of life but knows that language to be incapable of speaking even one of the great words that interpret the soul. Let Duty be his handmaid, by all means. But the princess of his heart must be of a diviner heritage, must come of an immortal strain."—From Hildegarde Hawthorne's "Women and Other Women."

SINCE the announcement of the visit of Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell to this city a fresh impulse has been given to the splendid work already inaugurated in behalf of those isolated deep sea fishermen of the icy northeast among whom he has by his self-sacrificing life well earned the title of "Patron Saint of Labrador."

Dr. Grenfell is expected here tomorrow and he will lecture in Perkins hall Tuesday evening, amply illustrating his subject by means of the stereopticon. While in the city, Dr. Grenfell will be the guest of Professor and Mrs. M. Clement Gile, 1121 North Tejon street.

The intrepid devotion to his life work of mariner-medical missionary has enlisted a large number of the foremost professional and business men of the country, who heartily enter into the far-reaching plans made by Dr. Grenfell, and interest is awakened as soon as it is understood. The story of Dr. Grenfell's philanthropic achievements the past 20 years in Labrador are stranger than fiction, and his account of "A Voyage on a Pan of Ice," except that he is alive to substantiate it, is beyond credence.

American-Labrador Branch of Needle Work Guild.

In answer to a need for new warm clothing in the hospital and orphans' home founded by Dr. Grenfell, the American-Labrador branch of the Needle Work Guild of America, was organized in Boston, Mass., last year. Directors were appointed in the different cities of the Union to whom the clothing can be sent and then forwarded to the general headquarters, Room 201, 14 Beacon street, Boston, Mass.

Miss A. R. Bell, 615 North Tejon street, is the director for Colorado Springs. Last year, Miss Bell was enabled to send 104 nice new garments to headquarters and the total number sent to Labrador was 2,675.

Contributions from any source will be most acceptable, either new garments or money. Miss Bell will receive the articles at her home, 615 North Tejon street, most thankfully, as well as give any further information. Warm under and outer garments for both sexes and all ages, will be available, especially hose, mittens, sweaters and mufflers are much needed. Miss Bell will be at home mornings until 10 o'clock and afternoons until 4 o'clock.

National Mothers' Congress.

The twelfth annual conference of the National Congress of Mothers will be held in New Orleans, La., February 18 to 21, 1909, immediately preceding the noted Mardi Gras festivities, in order that the delegates may secure special railroad rates (almost one fare for the round trip), and be able to remain for the festival and see the quaint city under most favorable circumstances.

The congress will open at 10 a. m., Thursday, February 18, and the subject throughout the sessions will be "The Child in the Home, the School and the State." Besides the morning and afternoon sessions devoted to business there will be a luncheon in the French quarter, an automobile ride and a boat ride. One evening will be given to showing what the United States government is doing for the benefit of the home and the country. The department of agriculture will send delegates to explain the pictures that will be exhibited. Any one wishing to attend the congress as a delegate from Colorado should secure credentials at once from Mrs. Henry J. Hersey, 1327 Gaylord street, Denver, the state president.

Willard Memorial Service.

A Frances Willard memorial service will be conduced this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the First Congregational church, under the auspices of the North End Woman's Christian Temperance union. The pastor, Rev. James B. Gregg, D. D., will deliver the address, and there will be music appropriate to the occasion. The program has been arranged by the superintendent of the department of memorials, Mrs. J. M. Whittenberger. It is requested that the members of the union meet in the parish house this evening at 7:00 o'clock and occupy seats reserved for them in the church.

Open Progress Club.

The Open Progress club will meet with Mrs. C. M. Dennison, 2015 North Tejon street, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. William C. Robinson will give a description of the work and worth of Henry Van Dyke. Miss Flansburg's subjects will be Hamilton Gibson and Olive Thorne Miller.

Woman's Literary Club.

Mrs. E. B. Simmons and Mrs. W. E. Fryhofer will be the hostesses Saturday, February 20, when a regular meeting of the Woman's Literary club takes place. "Art and Architecture" will be the subject of a paper by Mrs. Martin Slaughter. Mrs. Harriet Balcomb, who is absent from the city this winter, has sent her paper on "United States Lighthouses and Life Saving Stations," and it will be read by one of the club members.

Young Women's Christian Association.

Lincoln's birthday was observed at the headquarters of the Y. W. C. A., in the De Graff building, by an instructive lecture on Abraham Lincoln given by Mrs. William C. Robinson.

The Sunday afternoon Bible class will meet for the first time this afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the association rooms. The leader, Miss Dice, general secretary, will have as her subject, "Old Testament Characters."

The singing class will meet this week on Monday instead of Tuesday, to accommodate the instructor, Mr. H. Howard Brown, and this may be made a permanent arrangement.

The schedule for this week will be:

Monday—7 p. m., stenography; 7:30 p. m., German, choral, shirtwaist; 8 p. m., gymnasium.

Tuesday—7:30 p. m., skirt-making; cooking.

Wednesday—4 p. m., Bible; 7 p. m., stenography.

Thursday—7:30 p. m., English literature, English grammar, millinery; 8 p. m., gymnasium.

Friday—8 p. m., lecture on Abraham Lincoln; Mrs. W. C. Robinson.

Saturday—5:30-7:30, 10-cent supper.

Monday Progress Club.

The meeting of the Monday Progress club, styled "Mexican day," was one of the most enjoyable and unique in its history. The hostess, Mrs. George W. Dickey, spared no pains in arranging for the meeting, and the result was so perfect that nothing more could be desired.

Mrs. N. C. Crowley gave a paper on "The Mexican War," and Mrs. Aldina F. Smith told of "Mexican Domestic Life, Sports and Pastimes." Mexican flags formed the decorations, chiefly, and the music, too, included the national airs of that country.

The refreshments consisted of Mexican dishes prepared by Mexican cooks, and Mrs. Beckwith served them in Mexican costume. Even the favors were of Mexican design, and the club members and their guests had a most charming afternoon.

February 22, the hostess will be Mrs. W. H. Tucker, 317 East Cache la Poudre street. The papers will be "Diaz, the Man," Mrs. Mae G. Yates; "Mexican Literature," Mrs. Sophia M. Smith. Quotations patriotic.

Mr. Johnson's Lectures.

Mr. Frederick Ayres Johnson gave the closing lecture of an instructive series upon musical subjects yesterday morning at his studio, 1419 North Tejon street. Mr. Johnson gave a resume of the previous lectures, dwelling on modern compositions, particularly those written by Americans.

Parents' Meeting.

The postponed parents' meeting at the Bristol school building will be held Friday evening, February 19, at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. Henry J. Hersey of Denver, president of the Colorado Congress of Mothers, will deliver the principal address and there will be other attractive features. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

Woman's Club of Colorado Springs.

The February meeting of the Woman's club of Colorado Springs will be held next Saturday, February 20, at 3 o'clock, in the San Luis school building. The home and education department has charge of the program, and Dr. Sanford Bell of Denver has been engaged to lecture on "Woman's Place in the Home." Dr. Bell has often lectured before the club members, and he needs no introduction. As an eloquent and forceful speaker, he has few equals, and doubtless a large audience will greet him.

The monthly meeting of the membership committee will be held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, with the chairman, Mrs. W. K. Sinton, 1220 North Tejon street. The board of directors meets at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, at the Antlers.

The meeting of the art and literature department, Wednesday, February 17, at 3 o'clock, will be devoted to the study of "Middlemarch," by George Eliot, the paper being given by Miss Martha Lindley.

The parliamentary law class meets each Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the home of the president of the club, Mrs. Goddard, 808 North Cascade avenue. There is a good attendance and satisfactory progress has been made under the instruction of Professor Dubach.

The beginners' class in French meets Tuesdays and Fridays, and the advanced class, Tuesdays and Thursdays, at 4:30 o'clock, with Mrs. J. R. Pease, 220 North Cascade avenue. Madame M. Gelle is the instructor.

Mr. J. Allard Jeancon gave an interesting description of the prehistoric ruins at Pajarito, N. M., yesterday afternoon during a meeting of the home and education department. The talk was illustrated by rare relics loaned by Mrs. Goddard, Mr. Jeancon and others. Mrs. Otto Jeancon rendered vocal solos, and tea was served.

During a regular meeting of the social science department, held Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Robert Kerr gave the paper on "Progress in New Zealand."

The informal study class met with Mrs. John H. White, 16 South Wahsatch avenue, Friday afternoon. "Middlemarch" was studied.

Boys' Club Association.

The annual meeting of the Boys' Club association of Colorado Springs will be held Thursday afternoon, February 25, at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Lula Bernard, 520 North Weber street. Mrs. James F. Sanford, the president, will occupy the chair, and the annual reports will be given by the officers. After the business meeting there will be a social hour, with the serving of tea, and all interested in the work of the association are cordially invited to attend.

Twentieth Century Club.

A meeting of the Twentieth Century club will be held Friday afternoon, February 19, at 3 o'clock, with Mrs. J. W. Rush, 745 East Cimarron street. The study of the history of Rome will be continued.

Musical Conferences.

The Colorado College of Music conferences will be resumed on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Dean Edward D. Hale playing a program. He will have the assistance of Mrs. Edward E. Taliaferro, soprano, and Mrs. Mame Briscoe, violin, in the programs to follow. The public is always cordially invited.

The next student program will be rendered Friday, February 19. Miss Wharton is preparing for a pianoforte recital which may be ready this week. Other recitals are in preparation and they will be duly announced.

Woman's Society of First Presbyterian Church.

The Woman's society of the First Presbyterian church will hold an all-day missionary meeting and box luncheon in the church Friday, February 19. At 11 o'clock a. m. a reminiscence meeting will be held with Mrs. Matthew Kennedy as leader. Subject: "Auld Lang Syne." At 12:30 there will be a box luncheon, picnic style, in the parlors. The new members of the church are cordially invited to participate.

The continuation of the study of "The Call of the Waters," will include the following program: Devotional exercises, Mrs. Wm. C. Robinson, leader; Mrs. L. H. Gowdy, "The Great Migration;" Miss Roberts, "Presbyterian Pioneers;" Mrs. John Lennox, "Current Topics;" selected music.

Liller Improvement Society.

A successful meeting of the Liller Improvement society was held in the kindergarten room last Wednesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. William Wells Price, in the chair. Mrs. Charles W. Robertson gave an instructive paper on "The Banking System in the Public Schools." Miss Mabel Harlan rendered violin solos with Miss Ruth Law accompaning upon the piano. Miss Theresa Colburn contributed a piano solo. Afterwards there was a delightful social hour and the members of the society served tea and wafers.

Del Norte Twenty.

A meeting of the Del Norte Twenty will be held in the home of Mrs. Henry B. Hayden, 1434 Wood avenue, Friday, February 19. The members are requested to bring a box luncheon at 1 o'clock and spend the afternoon in sewing.

Twentieth Century Club.

The Twentieth Century club met last Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Frank Rhodes, 1237 North Royer street.

Daughters of Vermont.

A meeting of the Daughters of Vermont was held in the home of Mrs. Willard Hemenway, 212 East Madison street, last Wednesday afternoon. It was an informal social event and light refreshments were served. The meeting on Wednesday, March 10, will be held with Mrs. Roberts, 504 North Nevada avenue.

Minerva Alumnae.

Miss Bonnie Ginger, 535 East Platte avenue, will be the hostess next Tuesday afternoon, when a meeting of the Minerva Alumnae will be held at 4:15 o'clock.

Anemone Literary Club.

The Anemone Literary club will meet tomorrow afternoon in the home of Mrs. E. Sheldon, 321 West Kiowa street. Mrs. J. Nissley will give a paper on "Water Colorists," and Mrs. A. Koehler, one on "The Nude in Art."

Fortnightly Study Club.

The Fortnightly Study club met last Tuesday afternoon with Miss S. A. Lucas, 908 Colorado avenue. "The Philippines" was the subject of the paper by Mrs. E. L. Ellis. Tuesday, February 23, the hostess will be Mrs. E. L. Munson, 917 Colorado avenue. "The Race Problem" will be the subject of the paper by Mrs. James Russell. The roll call will be quotations from Tennyson.

In order to insure insertion, all contributions intended for the society, or woman's club department of the Sunday Gazette, must reach the editor, Mrs. Ella Celeste Adams, 226 Cheyenne avenue, telephone Main 1322, or The Gazette office, telephone Main 215, not later than noon of the preceding Friday.

THESE BOOKS OF MINE.

My garden aboundeth in pleasant nooks,
And fragrance is over it all;
For sweet is the smell of my old, old books,
In their places against the wall.

Here is a folio that's grim with age,
And yellow and green with mold;
There's the breath of the sea on every page,
And the hint of a stanch ship's hold.

And here is a treasure from France la belle Exhaleth a faint perfume
Of wedded lily and asphodel,
In a garden of song abloom.

And this wee little book of Puritan mien,
And rude, conspicuous print,
Hath the Yankee flavor of wintergreen,
Or, maybe, of peppermint.

In Walton the brooks a-babbling tell
Where the cheery daisy grows,
And where in meadow or woodland dwell
The buttercup and the rose.

But best beloved of books, I ween,
Are those which one perceives
Are hallowed by ashes dropped between
The yellow, well-thumbed leaves.

For it's here a laugh and it's there a tear,
Till the treasured book is read;
And the ashes between the pages here
Tell us of one long dead.

But the gracious presence reappears
As we read the book again,
And the fragrance of precious, distant years
Filleth the hearts of men.

Come, pluck with me in my garden nooks
The posies that bloom for all;
Oh, sweet is the smell of my old, old books,
In their places against the wall!

—Eugene Field.

TO THE END OF THE WAY.

I think that we'll get to the end o' the way,
In the light or the shadow some day, some day,
Where God and the world will have nothing to say;
In the light or the shadow some day, some day!

I think that we'll get to the end of the way,
Where the weariest winter'll have blooms o' the May,
And the blue skies'll gleam through the gloom of the gray,
In the light and the shadow some day, some day!

So the toil is not vain, and not fruitless the years,
Nor the lingering there in the River of Tears!
There's a voice that sings "Silence!"—so, welcome, the way
To the light or the shadow some day, some day!

given your nervous system by reason of a slight defect in your eyesight very likely causes your headache. You probably are unaware of the defect. It causes you no inconvenience as you can see better now than you will be able to with the proper glasses. Under such circumstances it seems foolish to wear glasses. It is more foolish to suffer from headaches when a pair of glasses will stop them permanently. If you are a headache sufferer come in and talk it over with our optician. AFTER FOURYEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md. — "For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health free of charge.

DEFYING CONVENTIONS.

There are women who think that it is a sign of great cleverness to disregard the minor conventions who feel that, somehow, they are cast in more wonderful mould than their sisters, and may safely do what the rank and file may not. How foolish they are, and how uncomfortable to live with! Their unconventionality is not a mark of any fine difference in their make-up, but merely means inflated egoism.

Oh, my dears, all you nice girls, who are just out of boarding school and college, if you could only realise how well the many little conventions protect and shelter you, and how when they are once established in your life, you have the backbone of the social skeleton, and you can proceed to cover it up with your various attractions and accomplishments—but it's there, and all the world knows it.

There is the woman who pays her calls at unconventional hours, who turns up at 10 o'clock in the morning when you are just settling down to some sewing that must be done, or writing long-delayed letters.

She says, sweetly, "I know this isn't the usual hour for calling, but I had the morning free so I just ran over." But your morning was not free, and you positively ache to tell her so.

Now, if she had come in the afternoon, she would have found you by your tea-table dressed in your lavender dimity and quite ready to receive guests.

As it is, you take the business of the morning and put it aside and try to be agreeable, but you wish in your heart that you had the courage to tell her that you never receive in the morning, and to send her away quite abruptly and heartlessly.

Then there is the woman with unconventional manners, who bounces into the middle of a tea of musicale with very much the manner of a football player, who may shake hands with her friends, or may not as the inclination seizes her, and not at all as they would expect, who reclines lazily on a divan at a formal function, and who may go home without saying goodbye to her hostess if the whim strikes her.

She it is who says all the queer odd things that put such a damper on general conversation. In short, she is a social pest. Mercifully, there are not many of her, because most women are not anxious to appear ridiculous.

Most foolish of all and most to be avoided is the woman who likes to do the things that are just a little bit risky—who goes to luncheon at the cafes which a well-bred woman avoids, who makes a point of knowing all the men her father and brothers would prefer that she did not know, who does the daring conspicuous thing at dinners and dances, who romps about the beach in her bathing suit—oh, you all know her.

Before very long she finds that the better sort of women do not include her in their invitations, and though she may be secretly hurt she puts a bold face on before the world, and declares that she does not want to go about with such a set of stiff old fogies.

She is thrown more than ever with spirits like herself and with those doubtful folk who are on the border line of respectability and—well, the end of the story is not pleasant reading.

There seem to be a lot of people in this world who think that freedom means license and that in order to be gay one must be loud. They consider it a sign of weakness to observe the conventions of society, but it is their own weakness they should see at ✓ remedy. The word "Bohemian" covers a multitude of petty foolish actions.

To be sure, one may at times be safely unconventional. It is not a social misdemeanor to succor an injured stranger, though there has been no formal introduction.

If a bewildered newcomer to the city asks a direction, stop and give it to him, by all means, though you do not know his name nor his pedigree.

Common sense is a standard by which one may safely measure one's conduct. A woman may be forgiven if she mixes her forks at dinner, but she may not be forgiven if she dines at cafes which she knows are not the proper place for her.

If there is no official to give her a direction, she may ask a strange man for it, but if she strikes up an acquaintance with a strange man on the train she is doing a very underbred and dangerous thing.

It is usually the very young person who defies the conventions. As we grow older we see the necessity of obeying them and we appreciate the safeguard that they are to us. They are one of the most powerful aids to morality and to the proper regulation of society. Defy them—nay, rather let us practice them punctiliously and teach our daughters to do likewise.—Sophie K. Underwood in Register and Leader.

Overfatness Conditions

Fat, or even fattish, women readers who want to be in the mode this year must understand that the demand is for lines, not curves, and govern themselves accordingly.

That means OFF with the fat. It has become a duty. Many are trying exercise or dieting; but it is certain they will find these methods too slow and unreliable. The cheapest and safest way to get in form for the Directoire mode is by means of Marmola Prescription Tablets. Any druggist (or the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich.) will give you a large-sized case of these elegant little fat reducers, containing a good, generous supply, for seventy-five cents, and even this quantity should be enough to make a decided impression on your excess fat. Many have lost as much as a pound a day.

These Marmola Prescription Tablets may be used with impunity and likewise perfect confidence, for being made strictly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, they are, of course, quite harmless. They are rather beneficial than otherwise, in fact, never disturbing the stomach or causing a wrinkling of the flesh.

Excessive Drinking

Excessive or continued use of alcoholic beverages always results in a diseased condition of the nervous system.

The drinking man is often heard to say, "I can stop of my own free will and when I wish," but the poor fellow is now devoid of the power to act at the proper time, and in the right way—it's too late, the craving has secured a firm hold and because of the diseased nervous system he has not the ability for sustained effort. The result we all know.

Drunkenness is no longer considered a crime; eminent scientists and physicians have agreed that it is a disease and must be treated as such.

The home treatment that has been used for a number of years and is highly successful, is Orrine. It is sold under a positive guarantee that if it does not effect a cure your money will be refunded.

Orrine is in two forms. When desiring to give secretly, purchase Orrine No. 1 and if the patient will voluntarily take the treatment, Orrine No. 2 should be given. The guarantee is the same in either case. Orrine costs but $1.00 per box. Mailed in plain sealed wrapper on receipt of price. Write for free booklet on "Drunkenness," mailed in sealed envelope by The Orrine Company, Washington, D. C. Sold in this city by The D. Y. Butcher Drug Co., 124 E. Pike's Peak Ave.

"SOMETIME, SOMEWHERE."

"Unanswered yet, the prayer your lips have pleaded
In agony of heart these many years?
Does faith begin to fail, is hope declining
And think you all in vain those falling tears?
Say not the Father has not heard your prayer,
You shall have your desire sometime, somewhere!

"Unanswered yet, though when you first presented
This one petition at the Father's throne
It seemed you could not wait the time of asking,
So anxious was your heart to have it done;
If years have passed since then, do not despair,
For God will answer you, sometime, somewhere.

"Unanswered yet? But you are not unheeded;
The promises of God forever stand:
To him our days and years alike are equal.
"Have faith in God!" It is your Lord's command.
Hold on to Jacob's angel, and your prayer
Shall bring a blessing down sometime, somewhere.

"Unanswered yet?" Nay do not say unanswered:
Perhaps your part is not yet wholly done.
The work began when first your prayer was uttered,
And God will finish what he has begun.
Keep incense burning at the shrine of prayer
And glory shall descend, sometime, somewhere.

"Unanswered yet? Faith can not be unanswered;
Her feet are firmly on the Rock,
Amid the wildest storms she stands undaunted;
Nor quails before the loudest thunder shock.
She knows Omnipotence has heard her prayer,
And cries, "It shall be done sometime, somewhere."

THE BRAVEST OF BATTLES.

The bravest of battles that ever were fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not;
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield.

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave;
But O, these battles! they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

—Joaquin Miller.

A NEW FASHION.

It no longer is the fashion in England and France for women to put chemicals to their gray hairs. A few years ago few women in society abroad permitted a gray hair to show, and as a result women were seen with coiffures as brown or black or golden as the tresses of their granddaughters. It is said the reform was wrought by King Edward, who always has been a foe to sham and avarice. The king a few months ago was surprised to see one gray head at a reception, and he singled out the honest owner for attention. He did not hesitate to make known openly his approval of her concession to nature, and the outcome was that other women discarded their peroxide and permitted their hair to return to its natural hue.

The new fashion has spread to France, and it is to be hoped it will be introduced here. It is a fact provocative of ridicule that many women in New York and elsewhere, close to three score years and ten, display hair as fresh and full of color as when they were 30. Of course, they deceive nobody, and inevitably they sacrifice the dignity, and also much of the respect, which should attach to old age.

CARUSO UNKNOWN.

The New York Times tells a new Caruso tale, and tells it with the joke on the tenor, so that the fine Italian hand of the press agent is at least forgiven in the matter presented:

Caruso was in Paris one or two days this week at the Grand hotel. One day he was sitting at a table with a friend in the Cafe de la Paix at the corner of the Place de l'Opera, perhaps the best known place in Paris.

"I don't believe any one in Paris knows me," said the tenor. "I've sung here so little."

The friend doubted it, but Caruso offered to make a wager that nobody would recognize him in one hour. The friend took the wager, but lost. Of all the people who passed, none took the slightest notice of the tenor, who sat with his hat off. When the hour was up the friend spoke to a waiter who was bringing their drinks.

"This is the famous Caruso," he said.

"Ah," exclaimed the waiter, with a bewildered air, "and the ... with the Italian accent?"

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Doctors Say There Is a Harmless, Safe and Sure Way to Remove It.

Dr. Starbuck Says: "I Feel Justified in Making the Assertion That It Is the Only Successful Method of Removing Hair."

Every woman who is afflicted with superfluous hair will undoubtedly be glad to know that there is but one proper and logical method of getting rid of this most annoying and embarrassing disfigurement.

The best authorities in the medical profession agree that De Miracle will destroy hair successfully, although there are many other unreliable things which claim to do it. The success which has attended this preparation as a means of removing hair is based upon the method by which it works. It is a purely scientific principle and totally different from the pastes and powders and other remedies which simply break off the hair in the same way that the razor does, making the hair when it grows out again heavier than before.

As far as the electric needle or X-ray is concerned, both are not only unsatisfactory, but dangerous as well. The scars and burns of the electric needle last for a lifetime and the dangers of the X-ray are indeed serious.

De Miracle may be used without any inconvenience or danger of any kind. The method by which it removes hair should not be classed or confused with that of the fake free treatments which are advertised so extensively in the newspapers.

Remember De Miracle is the only method for removing hair which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

We shall be pleased indeed to send you absolutely free in plain sealed envelope a 34-page booklet containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment as well as testimonials of prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and the principal magazines. You should read this booklet before you try anything. It treats the subject exhaustively. Write to the De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. 29, 1903 Park avenue, New York simply saying you want this booklet and it will be mailed sealed at once.

JOSEPH PULITZER ACCUSED BY UNCLE SAM

JOSEPH PULITZER

RALPH PULITZER

MRS. JOSEPH PULITZER

DELAVAN SMITH

THE United States versus the Press Publishing company is a case that is puzzling the public. It is before two federal grand juries; it has reached the United States senate; it is being discussed by the newspapers. The president of the United States started it. After Senator Rayner of Maryland, a lawyer of conceded ability, talked about the case on the floor of the senate and intimated that it was a good deal of a mystery to him the question was referred to the judiciary committee. Mr. Pulitzer's lawyers have asked the attorneys for the government to tell them who are in the case, what it is about and what the government's law for the proceedings is. The lawyers for the government have not seen fit to enlighten the lawyers of Mr. Pulitzer.

The Press Publishing company is the company under which the New York World is published and disseminated. Joseph Pulitzer is the editor of the World, its owner and publisher. Employees of the World are subpoenaed in John Doe fashion and appear before the federal grand jury for the District of Columbia and before the federal grand jury of the United States district court in New York. The president of the United States, who instituted the suit, said when he did so:

"The real offender is Joseph Pulitzer, editor and proprietor of the World. While the criminal offense of which Mr. Pulitzer has been guilty is in form a libel upon individuals, the great injury done is in blackening the good name of the American people. He should be prosecuted for libel by the government authorities."

In a letter to William Dudley Foulke, written in the early part of December, the president severely criticised Delavan Smith, editor of the Indianapolis News, and William M. Laffan, editor of the New York Sun, for their connection with the matter in publishing the World's articles. This letter brought out comment from the press of the country, but the man against whom the prosecution by the government is being made is Mr. Pulitzer.

The offending stories concerned an alleged syndicate of fifteen Americans, including Douglas Robinson, the president's brother-in-law; Charles P. Taft and William Nelson Cromwell. It was alleged that this syndicate purchased for $3,500,000 all the stocks, bonds and rights of the old French Panama Canal company and then used its influence to have the United States government take over the canal rights at a price of $40,000,000, making a profit of $36,500,000 for the syndicate.

Whatever may be the outcome of the litigation, Mr. Pulitzer is before the country with the unique distinction of being the one individual against whom the legal machinery of the government has been put in action. Mr. Pulitzer's life has been crowded with incidents decidedly out of the ordinary. He is a giant in his profession. Wherever he goes in the old world he is interviewed by reporters, written about by the leading writers and is a topic for the magazines.

Mr. Pulitzer's Foresight.

If Mr. Pulitzer were in possession of all his faculties he would not be quite so distinctive, although his executive genius, his aptitude in grasping the questions of the hour and his universal knowledge of men and affairs would mark him as one far beyond the limitations of the average man of in- [illegible] chief characteristics in this man's composite nature. A personal recollection will be pardoned. In 1872 I was sent to St. Louis by Mr. Storey, editor of the Chicago Times, on a mission which took me to the office of Mr. Stilson Hutchins, then one of the three big editors of St. Louis. Hutchins was a human dynamo. Between "editing," visiting his business office and running upstairs to the composing room he found time to give me some information. A young man came in to whom I was introduced. His name was Pulitzer. The name at that time had a limited circulation. Mr. Hutchins in his hurried and jerky manner said: "Pulitzer, this young man has come down here for the Chicago Times. You talk to him and tell him what he wants to know while I am downstairs."

Mr. Hutchins was away nearly an hour. In that time I had obtained no information from young Pulitzer. But he had found out, as far as my knowledge extended and as far as my relations with the Chicago Times would permit me to tell, all about the way in which Mr. Storey conducted his great newspaper, for it was a great journal at that time. He hurled questions at me until I grew dizzy. He inquired minutely about every department of the Times. He even asked how the papers were supplied to the newsboys. Not one of his questions was prompted by mere curiosity. He wanted to know for a purpose. The purpose was not known to his informant. But young Pulitzer knew. He was forecasting. Some years later I had an idea as to the meaning of the rapid fire questions which had been asked. Mr. Hutchins asked me after young Pulitzer had gone if Pulitzer had told me anything. I replied that he had not, but that he had found out everything I knew about the Chicago Times. Mr. Hutchins laughed. "Of course," he replied. "That's Pulitzer's game—to tell nothing, but to find out all the other fellow knows."

His First Step in Politics.

About the time of this incident or soon after Mr. Pulitzer was a reporter on the Westliche Post, an influential German daily newspaper. A little later there was a political meeting in the rotunda of the old courthouse of St. Louis. One of the spellbinders was Joseph Pulitzer. After that he was in demand. He was at that time part owner and managing editor of the German newspaper on which he had been a reporter. There were two afternoon English newspapers in the city that had small circulations and less influence. Mr. Pulitzer bought them. The Post-Dispatch was the result. The constitution of Missouri is a part of the work of Mr. Pulitzer. He was a member of the body that made it. He was associated with Carl Schurz in the Liberal Republican movement which subsequently resulted in the nomination of Horace Greeley for president. Mr. Pulitzer was a delegate to the convention that nominated Greeley and Brown. He has been an independent Democrat ever since. The party men of that faith will understand what "independent" signifies to Mr. Pulitzer.

Mr. Pulitzer was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1847. He was seventeen years old when he came to this country. His father was a man of some means and gave his son the benefit of a private tutor. Owing to the financial failure of his father young Pulitzer was dependent on his own exertions for success. He never waited for opportunity to knock at his door. He found opportunities.

He married in St. Louis. His wife, who came from a noted Kentucky family, was one of the beauties of the aristocratic old city. She is interested in many charities, and before her husband's affliction she was much more prominent in society than she has since been. She often accompanies him in his travels. She is devoted to him and to his interests. There are six children in the Pulitzer household. Before his marriage Mr. Pulitzer enlisted in the army for the defense of the Union and stayed until the conflict was over.

His Arrival in New York.

There are stories and stories about Mr. Pulitzer's coming to New York. One is that he was penniless. Another is that he slept in the parks. Some of these stories may have more color than foundation. It is a fact, however, that he was remote from affluence. His chief capital consisted of his foresight and determination. He foresaw, for example, the possibilities in the New York World. Nobody else had seen them. He determined to buy it. He carried out this determination. A second rate hotel building stood on the site of the present World building. Mr. Pulitzer foresaw that the site commanded two cities. He bought it. All "seeing New York" cars pass it. The story of the newspaper which is issued from the structure under the great bronze dome is known all round the globe.

In 1885 Mr. Pulitzer was elected to the lower house of congress from one of the districts of New York, but the field was too limited. He resigned after a few months to give his attention to the work for which he was born.

When his great affliction—he is practically blind—came upon him it seemed to quicken all his energies. He applied himself to his work with greater assiduity than ever and is even now quite active. No matter where he may be, he is editing the World. He has a summer home at Bar Harbor. He has a mansion in the fashionable section of New York. This mansion is a palace in its equipment. It is the home of a student, a maker of events, a musician, an artist—in all that is necessary to beautify and elevate. He has a place in the pines of New Jersey where he goes at certain seasons. He has a yacht that was constructed after his own designs. He knows Europe and its public men as well as he knows his adopted country and its public men. But wherever he may be, wherever he may go, he keeps his fingers on the World. In his incessant thirst for all that is transpiring he wears out secretaries and is still fresh in his work when others have given up from exhaustion.

How a Blind Man "Sees."

One day at Bar Harbor he had told his secretary to read to him the headlines of his afternoon paper. Away down in one corner was an item of a poor woman who had been run down by a car. The item had come in late, and it had to be minimized. The secretary had skipped the item. The blind man's intuition told him that all of the paper had not been read. He directed the weary secretary to go over the paper again. This time the secretary read the overlooked item. The great editor said to him, "You didn't read that before." Then he added: "That is the big item in the news. Telegraph the editor to raise a fund for that poor woman. Let the Evening World head the subscription."

And so it goes, day after day, wherever he may be. He knows before he goes to sleep, here or in the remotest parts of the world, wherever the telegraph can furnish him the information, exactly how many lines of advertising the next issue of his paper will contain.

A few years ago, soon after his son Ralph married Miss Webb, daughter of W. Seward Webb, millionaire of New York, Joseph Pulitzer announced that he would retire from the active management of his two newspapers in New York. Nobody in the World offices disputed this announcement, but there were many incredulous smiles. Mr. Ralph Pulitzer is a well trained newspaper man and has frequently astonished the older heads with his suggestions. He began, like his father, at the lowest rung of the ladder, but he knows who is editor of the World.

How deeply imbued Mr. Joseph Pulitzer is with his work was shown not a great while ago when he founded a school of journalism in Columbia university. He gave it a million dollars. He promised to give another million when the school reaches the stage that will warrant the donation. The founder of the new school of journalism thus proposes to perpetuate what he has created.

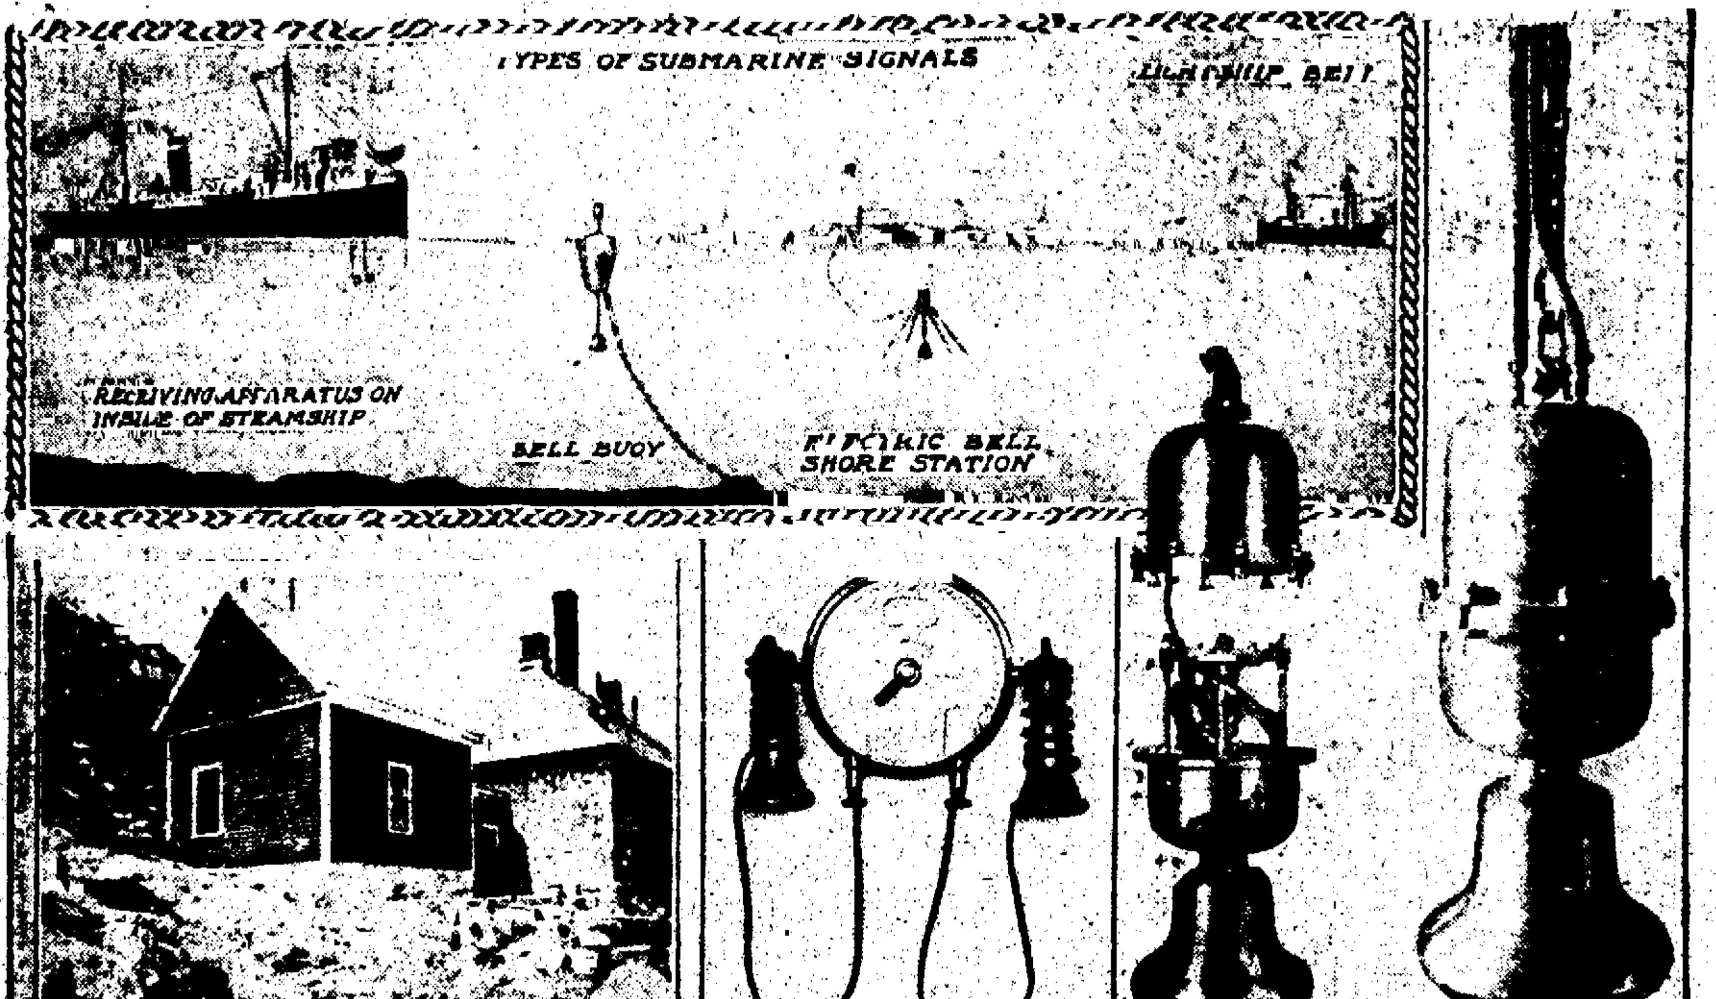
Bells That Ring Alarms Under the Sea



TYPES OF SUBMARINE SIGNALS

LIGHTSHIP BELL
RECEIVING APPARATUS ON INSIDE OF STEAMSHIP
BELL BUOY
ELECTRIC BELL SHORE STATION
INDICATOR BOX IN PILOT HOUSE

WIRELESS telegraphy and the submarine signal were potent factors in the rescue of human life from the White Star steamship Republic, that went down in forty fathoms of sea off Marthas Vineyard Sunday, Jan. 24, after she had been gashed on the port side by the Italian liner Florida in the early hours of the preceding day.

Although the submarine signal apparatus antedates wireless telegraphy, less is known, except by navigators, of the former than the latter.

The submarine system consists of two parts: one, sound signaling under water for coast protection; two, receiving apparatus for vessels. With the latter apparatus any ship approaching a lightship, bell buoy or electric shore station equipped with a submarine bell will receive a warning that will give it ample time to avoid danger or direct its course to a harbor of safety.

While the part played by wireless telegraphy in connection with the Republic's disaster has been told, as it deserved to be, the details of the work by the submarine system have not been fully explained.

The captain and navigators of the Baltic, sister ship of the ill fated Republic, report that the Republic was using her submarine apparatus at the time of the collision, and she continued to use it until she was found by the Baltic. By the use of the submarine the Republic was enabled to obtain her exact position from Nantucket light vessel. Having obtained her bearings, she sent information of her condition broadcast by wireless, and in this way the Baltic learned the location of the Republic. The second officer of the Baltic made this clear in his statement. "We picked up the bell," he said, "on Nantucket lightship and kept it all the time until we found the Republic. At all times we could tell the direction of the lightship accurately."

After the rescue and while the Baltic was still blanketed with a dense fog the Baltic found her way to the Fire island lightship and the Ambrose channel lightship by means of the submarine apparatus instead of waiting outside until the fog lifted. After the American liner, the New York, had received news by wireless of the Republic's disaster she [illegible] on her way to Nantucket light vessel by means of the submarine apparatus, and in this way the New York located the Baltic and the Republic. The message by wireless received by the New York was: "We are south-southeast of Nantucket light vessel ten or fifteen miles and can hear by submarine bell. Baltic's position two miles south of Republic." The New York was on her way to the Nantucket light vessel when this message was received.

The Lucania received the same wireless message. She located Nantucket light vessel ten miles distant, reached the lightship and then cruised about until the Republic and the Baltic were reached. The Lucania kept her relative positions all the time by means of the submarine signal apparatus. The New York, Baltic and the Lucania came through the fog into New York harbor, being guided by the submarine bell on Fire island and the bell on Ambrose channel lightship.

Mechanism of the Device.

The principle of the submarine signaling device is based on the fact, well known, that sound signals are transmitted under water with absolute accuracy, while in air the sounds are diverted by banks of fog or cloud or by wind and the varying densities of the atmosphere.

The apparatus has two modest parts. The "speaking" apparatus consists of a [illegible] bell of a design adapted to provide sounds in the water and the receiving paraphernalia on a vessel. The latter picks up the sounds of the bell and enables the pilot not only to determine its direction, but also the distance away of the ship, reef or light vessel to which the telltale bell is attached.

In order to send forth signals from a vessel in motion the bell or gong is located inside the hull of the ship far forward and snugly to the outer skin of the fabric. It can be rung by an automatic device or by hand. When fixed to a lightship the bell is suspended to a depth of about twenty-five feet, where it is tolled at regular intervals by steam or by electric mechanism.

On a ship that carries this apparatus there are always two transmitters, one installed on the starboard and the other on the port side. This arrangement is important, as all navigators will readily understand.

When the bell sending out its pulsations is on either side of the receiving vessel abaft the beam the gong on side, starboard or port, will be the only one to respond to the vibrations of the water medium, but should the ship shift her position so as to bring the distant bell beam on or bow on, or partially so, both starboard and port gongs will repeat the faraway sounds. If the bow is only partially pointing toward the unseen bell it is the varying degrees of distinctiveness of the installed gongs that decides the direction of the alarm. The captain of a ship does not have to go into the hold to listen to his monitors. Both transmitters are connected by wire to a single telephone receiver box in the pilothouse. A tiny switch enables the pilot to listen to the sound as received, either starboard or port. By means of a simple manipulation the bearings of the signal bell can be accurately located.

Contemplated Improvements.

While the mechanism of the submarine signal is not complicated, it requires some engineering skill to manipulate it. It consists of tanks, microphones, battery box, indicator box, receiving telephones, code ringer and compressed air tanks. All of these are simply helpers to the device itself, which is only a bell. The company owning the system has found that when a bell is placed in a tank inside of a ship the sound which it gives forth is smothered to a certain extent by the skin of the ship, and, although it would be of assistance in enabling ships to avoid collisions, it would not send out warnings to a sufficient distance to enable ships approaching each other at a high rate of speed to certainly avoid collision. The slinging of a bell overboard from a moving ship, it is claimed, has disadvantages.

To overcome these defects the company is now developing an apparatus which, it is claimed, will carry a sufficient distance to give vessels approaching each other time to maneuver and avoid each other.

Tests have shown that a bell with a lip or sound bowl several inches thick and having a high musical note is best adapted for the transmission of sound through water. Bells can be distinguished at five miles, and in some cases at a greater distance, even by a child. The volume of the tone is used to gauge distance. It is not denied that vessels hear these bells at a distance far beyond the range of aerial fog signals and that navigators get direction accurately. Reports received from the lakes show that the sounds of the submarine bells are heard at a distance of seven, ten and twelve miles.

Practically all ocean going passenger steamships plying the Atlantic are now equipped with the receiving apparatus for submarine signals, and bells are regularly rung below the surface of the water at ninety-eight stations already established in this and foreign countries and at the expense of the respective governments.

Canada was the first country to adopt submarine signaling. The four lightships in the St. Lawrence river and the one off Yarmouth are equipped with submarine bells. Steamers entering the English channel get the bells on the tender at Cherbourg and Boulogne. During the summer of 1907 submarine bells were installed on all the lightships on the Pacific coast and in the gulf of Mexico.

The apparatus is as applicable to warships as to merchant marine ships, and a special submarine signal apparatus has also been successfully tested by the fishermen of the Gloucester fleet.

After tests had been made by captains of several English ships, all of whom reported favorably, the London Shipping Gazette said, "The reports prove the absolute reliability of the submarine signaling system."

It is rather singular there are no reliable data from which the name of the inventor of this system is obtainable. Like the birthplace of Homer, the honor is still in doubt. Since its discovery it has been improved on in several respects, but the principle, so simple as to be understood by a child, remains the same. It contains enough glory for all.

Jules Verne in his "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" made Captain Nemo of the Nautilus dwell upon the superiority of submarine transmission. The system has been worked out successfully and put into practical form. PERCY WILLIAM.

ODDS AND ENDS OF INTEREST.

A German scientist has been investigating the obscure subject of the number of facets in the eyes of insects. He has examined the eyes of 150 species of beetles and finds the number is more numerous in large specimens, but that there is usually little difference in the sexes. In some cases, however, the male has many more than the female.

Apparatus weighing only six and a half pounds which renders oral communication possible between a diver under water and some one at the surface has been tested before a commission of the French marine department with satisfactory results.

In making the best Persian rug a weaver spends about twenty-three days over each square foot of surface.

Asbestus has been discovered in the Pilbarra district of Western Australia.

If cork is sunk to a depth of 200 feet in the sea it will not rise again to the surface owing to the great pressure of the water.

A United States naturalist says that perhaps the longest continuous flight made by birds in their emigrations is accomplished by some of the shore and water birds that nest in the islands of Bering sea and spend the winter at Hawaii and Fanning island, 2,200 miles away. As some of the birds live entirely on the shore and are probably unable to rest on the surface of water, they must accomplish the whole distance in a single flight.

Shrinkage of wood from loss of moisture has been found by the United States forest service to range from 7 to 26 per cent of the dry volume in different species.

There is one physician or surgeon to every sixty-six inhabitants of Great Britain.

Ergin is a liquid fuel which is much applied in Germany. It is obtained from tar by a secret process and is reported to have a heating power of 16,500 thermal units per pound.

Whales are unable to swim faster than twelve miles an hour.

A single firm of Tokyo has exported no fewer than 200,000 frogskins in one year for the manufacture of purses.

WHAT LOCAL THEATERS OFFER

THE return of Florence Roberts to the Opera house Saturday evening is the most interesting theatrical event in several months Miss Roberts is undoubtedly one of the foremost actresses on the American stage, and her work is always a great pleasure for she is a conscientious, careful and hard worker, and she presents plays of interest, if not always of worth. He career has been devoted almost entirely to the west, although her two invasions of New York city, when she was weighed down by plays of only ordinary merit, won for her the highest tributes of the metropolitan press To make her triumph complete and to be recognized as one of the foremost players on the American stage, which she is by right of experience ability and personality Miss Roberts must have a play which offers her the opportunities to display her gifts This play need not necessarily be written especially for her but it must ing companies of more than ordib- a good drama, one that has merit of theme, development and construction She will get this play some day and then New Yorkers will once more realise that the west is not only a great and glorious country but that it has fostered players as fine as any the east can boast of

In "The House of Bondage," which Miss Roberts is now presenting the English divorce law is dealt with This law will not allow a woman to get a divorce unless she can prove physical cruelty as well as unfaithfulness on the part of the husband The same problem was touched incidentally in Tim Murphy's vehicle Cupid and the Dollar but in Miss Roberts' play, it is the central theme The drama is by Seymour Obermer, an English author, and is said to be a strong one

Another interesting thing about Miss Roberts engagement this year is her company As is well known, players as a rule do not care to endanger their own position by having ability Of course there are exceptions Mrs Fiske is noted as having the best aggregation of players ever gathered into one company, and now Florence Roberts is supported by a cast, any one of whom is almost strong enough to be featured alone Arthur Forrest, the leading man is too well known to need introduction but his worth may be judged when it is said that in many a Mansfield production he almost took away the star's honors by his own fine acting, and that last year he supported Mrs. Fiske in "Rosmersholm" Thurlow Bergen is another splendid actor in the cast and Ann Warrington and Helen Bertrand complete the principals of a company which is one of the strongest yet seen in the west

In regard to her company—when asked whether she approved of such able players in her support—Miss Roberts recently said "I like to feel that I have to work to predominate a scene, and not that it is given me by mere right of my position When I have a fine support, I can forget the worry usually caused a star by inferior players, and put all my attention to my own part The rewards are sweeter when one has to contend for them"

The Zingarri Opera troupe at the Majestic theater last week presented one of the best vaudeville numbers the local stage has yet seen These singers gave in a most creditable manner selections from the various grand operas Their work was a positive delight The troupe can sing, and sing well The voices are all good, notably the tenor, bass and soprano There was an enthusiasm, a fiery zeal about the work of the Zingarris which added much to the performance In a country where grand opera is as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth such singers are a blessing for although they do not rank or pretend to rank with the great artists, in their own way they gave as much pleasure to the audience as more pretentious singers would. Anyone who is at all interested in the advancement of the musical taste of the country would do well to encourage the work of such people as the Zingarris The enthusiasm and pleasure that these singers stirred up in the audiences at the Majestic last week, and which was shown in a most decided manner, points well to the real enjoyment the ordinary man or woman takes in fine singing and speaks greatly of the growing desire for better and finer things in the amusement line

Archie Boyd, who appeared at the Opera House last week in "Shore Acres" is one of the few players now remaining on the stage who can play this type of character The stage as made great strides in this country during the last decade, and already the taste of the public is turned from the rural plays, once so popular Modern playwrights and players have developed in the theatergoer a desire for plays of an entirely different nature Ibsen and his followers have set a new standard for the stage, and the public, willingly or unwillingly, has grown to like it This may be a broad statement, but such plays as "Shore Acres," when revived after long years of idleness, prove the modern tendencies and show the trend of the modern theater to a remarkable degree The continued reference to the "palmy days" would soon be stopped if the people who make it would only wake up to the realization of the present condition of the stage. Inside of 10 years there will be as great plays and as great players as the American stage has ever produced, but they will be of a new school. This is a fact which everyone should ponder over, and instead of discouraging the modern stage, he should encourage it, for it is now in its transitional period, and is fast advancing to what will be the greatest epoch in theatrical history this country has yet known.

What Press Agents Say

FLORENCE ROBERTS IN "THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE."

Seymour Obermer a new figure in the ranks of dramatists uses the curious and unjust English divorce laws as the pivotal motive of a drama called "The House of Bondage the title applying to the condition of the English married woman tied to an unfaithful husband, from whom she cannot obtain full release until she proves physical cruelty in addition to the infidelity

The central conditions of "The House of Bondage," which Miss Florence Roberts and her company will present at the Opera House Saturday evening, have been ingeniously contrived to bring about the dramatist's illustration of his point There are presented not only the usual triangle of the husband wife and another man, but another woman as well The most refreshing frankness exists among the four regarding the situation the quadrangle is ingeniously bisected by making the other man a surgeon who must operate on the brain of the husband. The interest is skillfully suspended by the doubt as to whether his knife is going to slip or not and the play is finished by the other woman getting the husband a place in the English cabinet whereupon the wife leaves him forever, warning him that if he does not use his newly acquired political power to amend the divorce laws in six months she will ignore the laws and live openly with the man she loves.

John Cort has surrounded Miss Roberts this season with a supporting company of more than usual excellence. Miss Roberts of course plays the role of the wife, which affords her every opportunity for the display of those great emotional powers which have won for her an acknowledged eminence in roles of a certain sort. Arthur Forrest plays the husband the same Arthur Forrest who in many a Richard Mansfield production nearly wrested laurels from the lamented tragedian. Thurlow Bergen ever able and engaging, plays "the other man" and Ann Warrington, a refined and intelligent artist, is "the other woman" Mary Bertrand, Hallet Bosworth and Harry Gibbs are all well known players who contribute to an uncommonly fine performance

"THE RIGHT OF WAY"

The story of a great, pure holy love through which comes regeneration and happiness to one who has sinned and has repented, is a story as old as the eternal hills, but one that still holds its fascination and its compelling force and which will interest and awe all the generations to come, as it has the generations that have past. The story is as ancient as the human heart that it will not grow old until human hearts have ceased to beat.

In spite of all its beauty of language and its rare insight into character The Right of Way,' Sir Gilbert Parker's greatest novel, owed by far the greater part of its undying popularity to the beautiful, simple love story it tells The dramatic version of this great story is even more compelling and more satisfying for Eugene W Presbrey, who made the play, has eliminated the morbid tragedy of the story's ending and substituted therefor a hope of future happiness and peace for the regenerated Charley Steele and for the woman whose great love worked the miracle of his regeneration

Klaw & Erlanger's presentation of this powerful play, with the original New York cast headed by Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts, will be among the dramatic events of the season in this city The play is now in its second successful season, and comes to the west fresh from a successful tour of the southeast As Charley Steele Guy Standing than whom America boasts no better leading actor, has a part in which he has an opportunity to display great versatility and does work which has added immeasurable to his reputation As Joe Portugais the French-Canadian "habitant" Theodore Roberts America's foremost character actor has added another to the perfect characterizations for which he is famous

ROSABEL MORRISON IN "FAUST"

That Morrison's "Faust" has lost none of its power to attract and charm is evident by the large and enthusiastic audiences that have greeted the familiar play on tour the present season Miss Rosabel Morrison daughter of Lewis Morrison is sponsor for the revival and assuredly she has made good use of her heritage From a pictorial standpoint the production easily surpasses previous efforts in that line, and the skill of the electrician and mechanician are employed with telling effect The apotheosis is presented in rather startling form Marguerite slowly ascends heavenward, after her death in prison while unseen singers chant the impressive Gounod anthems This is on the order of the famous levitation act introduced by Hermann the Great The present "Faust" revival also boasts of a choir of singers who render vocal selections from the opera of the same name in fine style

"ARIZONA" COMING.

Arizona,' which is announced as an attraction at the Opera House next week, is one of the dramatic treats of the season It has scored heavily in New York and elsewhere and is generally conceded to be one of the strongest dramas written in the past decade It gives a picture of life at a frontier army post in the territory from which its name is taken The picture may be an impressionistic one rather than realistic, but the atmosphere is there, and the broad details sketched in with a sure hand and a large brush The result is more valuable for the reason that the picture corrects many of our preconceived notions of what some of us are pleased to term the "Wild and Woolly West"

THE CRYSTAL

Is keeping up with its well-earned reputation of giving the best entertainment in the city for 10 cents, because it always secures the highest class and latest pictures and music obtainable For Monday and Tuesday they have "Virginius," put into picture by James Sheridan Knowles, also a picture story of Edgar Allen Poe's wonderful career The incidents in his life that brought forth that wonderful masterpiece "The Raven" The ladies out shopping in the afternoon certainly do enjoy the matinees at the Crystal, because it's quiet and cozy and nothing but the best of pictures shown In fact, the only place one can go to see a good, long program of the kind

The full program will be found in the amusement column

7 BIG VAUDEVILLE NUMBERS AT MAJESTIC THIS WEEK

Vaudeville of the most satisfying kind is promised patrons by the Majestic management For the week beginning tomorrow, there will be seven big vaudeville specialties on the program, It includes musical acts, singing and dancing numbers, 'cello solos, soprano solos, juggling feats, wooden shoe dancing, a splendid war picture on the Majestiscope, and a legitimate one-act play.

The latter will be presented by that sterling actor from the legitimate stage, Joseph R. Kelter, and his company of players. The play is a pastoral comedy-drama, on the order of the "Old Homestead" and of the kind that the Majestic patrons have evinced fondness for Mr Kelter impersonates "Cyrus Bailey," a country miller, Mr Charles Gorham is the "Martin Dill" several times a widower postmaster and storekeeper and Miss Bessie Morton is the "Widow Gray" The scene is laid in Pine Grove, Pine Grove township New York The plot develops a coherent story and allows the most delightful charactering acting Special scenery is carried by the company

The big novelty act, which is also the principal headliner is that of the Four American Trumpeters, a military musical act, presented by a family of five, including Mr Dan Tourjee and the Misses May, Grace and Emma Tourjee Miss Grace is a most accomplished 'cello soloist, and the quartet are expert xylophone artists They are attractively costumed in military clothes, and carry a special setting for the act.

"Those Three Boys" Vardon, Perry and Wilbur, have a most unique combination act, consisting of singing, dancing and expert playing upon a variety of musical instruments

James Smith and Claudia Brown are billed as artistic delineators of refined singing and wooden shoe dancing The latter has seldom been seen here in its perfection, but these European artists promise us something lively in this line

The Pelots also come to us from Europe They are a young man and woman who have become adept in the most difficult juggling feats, which they enliven with a line of patter that is said to be both quaint and humorous

Under the spot light will appear that now established popular favorite, Miss Carrie McManus, whose pure soprano voice will be heard in three dainty selections

The Majestiscope will show a picture which bears the caption, "The War Is Ended Let Reconstruction Begin," words to the victorious army, delivered at Richmond in '65, by the Great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, America's martyred President.

MISS FLORENCE ROBERTS,

"THOSE THREE BOYS," VARDEN, PERRY AND WILBUR.
Unique Singing, Dancing and Musical Novelty Act at Majestic This Week.

AT FAIRYLAND.

It is a sure sign of a return of good times when an amusement enterprise can introduce so radical a new departure as that inaugurated by the ever-progressive Henry Lubelski at Fairyland theater Commencing Monday February 15, the price of admission to this cosy little theater will be reduced to 10 cents to any seat in the house To accommodate the crowds there will be four shows daily two in the afternoon and two in the evening. But the biggest surprise of all is the fact that the show will be strengthened—bigger and better acts will be presented and for 10 cents Colorado Springs people can see a dollar show

The bill for next week will include Wells G. De Vaux, the noted eccentric musical comedian. Mr. De Vaux plays on tin cans, trombones, barrels, saxaphones, brooms and xylophones. He gets music out of anything he picks up and it is real music, too. And in addition to his music he tells some stories that are new and he keeps his audience in good humor all the time

Florence Stanley and company will appear in a sketch, entitled "Perseverance" This is a comedy effort that is one long scream from start to finish.

These two celever people opened in New York city direct from England six weeks ago.

Francis Stol, the Coster girl, is another European novelty act that Colorado Springs people are exceedingly fortunate to be allowed an opportunity to witness Miss Stol sings two or three songs and she possesses a style similar to Vesta Victoria.

The illustrated song will be entitled "Are You Sincere," and after hearing it the audience will most emphatically be sincere in praising this artistic effort

About a mile of films from the Licensed Film exchange New York city, the only supply house who furnish new features every week.

Monday afternoon a beautiful set of dishes will be given away to the holder of the lucky ticket The usual souvenir matinees will be held on Tuesday and Friday afternoons and Wednesday night will be set apart for amateur night at which they all amateurs will be welcomed.

Plays and Players

Henry E Dixey, who has apparently at last made a success in "Mary Jane's Pa," will make a long tour of the country next season, going to the Pacific coast, where he has not been seen in a number of years.

Carlotta Nillson, who was first brought into prominence by her excellent work in "The Three of Us," is said to have made a complete success in her new play, "This Man and That Woman," by Avery Hopwood

Edward C. Carpenter, author of "The Barber of New Orleans," in which William Faversham is appearing, is writing a sequel to this play, in which the barber will be seen in more adventures Faversham will produce it.

Maurice Maeterlinck is said to be finally reconciled to the operatic productions of "Monna Vanna." He made a strong effort to prevent the text from being used as an opera, but was overruled by the French courts

William Gillette is to go to Australia at the end of his season in this country. He will present "Samson," "What Every Woman Knows," "Lady Frederick" and other plays, under the management of J. C. Williamson.

In addition to Henry E. Dixey, more than eighty people take part in the performance of Edith Ellis' comedy, "Mary Jane's Pa," which is now nearing its 100th performance at the Garden theater, New York City

E. H. Sothern made his first appearance in "Richelieu" at the Van Ness theater in San Francisco, on January 29 Other places in his present repertoire are "Hamlet," "Richard Lovelace" and "Our American Cousin"

James M Barrie has completed and delivered a one-act play to be used by Ethel Barrymore Miss Barrymore, who is now touring in "Lady Frederick" will appear in this piece when she plays a return engagement in New York.

William Faversham revived "The World and His Wife" last week at Daly's theater He closed his New York engagement last night and will begin his tour, playing "The World and His Wife" and "The Barber of New Orleans"

Henry W. Savage has decided to [illegible] the American production of "The [illegible]"

The Week's Offerings

Monday and Tuesday, "The MASCOT."

The two performances of this delightful old comic opera for the benefit of a boys' camp next summer, promises to be the most pretentious amateur production of the season The principals are all excellent, and the chorus is said to be fine Emma De Bold and Otto Jeancon, two well known professionals, head the cast.

Saturday, "THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE."

Of all the players who come to this city, Florence Roberts is the most welcome She is one of the finest actresses we have, and her work is always of the best. This year she presents a play of decided interest and is supported by an especially strong company, including Arthur Forrest, Thurlow Bergen and Ann Warrington

All Week, THE MAJESTIC.

At the Majestic all week. Every afternoon at 2 30, every night at 7 30 and 9 15 (except Sunday), "vaudeville of the satisfying kind." Four American trumpeters, military musical act, including cello solo, singing and dancing; Jos. R Kelter and Co., in the charming pastoral comedy-drama, "A Rural Substitute," Vardon, Perry and Wilbur, "Those Three Boys," in a singing, dancing and [illegible] novelty, the Pelots, European jugglers, James Smith and Claudia Brown, artistic delineators of refined singing and wooden shoe dancing; Carrie McManus, soprano soloist, Majestiscope.

This Viennese musical play has been adapted by the [illegible] from a libretto by [illegible] of "The Merry Widow" fame.

The first act of "[illegible]" the play in which Mrs. Fiske is appearing this season, presents one of the most realistic scenes yet put on the stage, according to reports. Mrs. Fiske has scored a [illegible] in this play and will be seen in all the principal cities. It is also probable that she will go to the coast late in the spring.

Madame Marietta Olly, a German actress who came over to this country to act in the Irving Place German theater in New York City, has been engaged by the Shuberts to appear in English next season. Mme. Olly has made a decided success in New York, and some papers consider her equal to any of the actresses now appearing on the American stage.

Mrs. Leslie Carter [illegible] distinct success in her new play, "Kassa," by John Luther Long, author of "Madame Butterfly." [illegible] itself has not scored very heavily, but between Mrs. Carter's acting and the wonderfully beautiful [illegible] settings, "Kassa" [illegible] the longest run of any play [illegible] in New York this season.

The Lombardi Grand Opera company, composed of Italian singers of considerable ability, is now touring the coast As Savage has no English Opera company out this season, and as the two New York organizations do not come west, this Italian troupe has the territory all to itself and is reaping golden rewards. The management expects to bring it into the middle west and will play in Denver in April.

"La Femme X," the sensational French drama now the rage in Paris, and which Henry W. Savage will produce in this country next season, is said to have a trial scene in the last act that contains all the [illegible] of fascination of a real murder trial. The leading role is said to be one of great opportunities for a fine emotional actress, and Olga Nethersole is reported to be quite anxious to originate it.

GIDDINGS BROS

A Pickup by Our Buyer Now in New York, 2,000 yds High Class Fancy Silks Worth $1.00 to $1.25, on sale... 68c

A splendid purchase by Mr. R. O. Giddings, now in New York city. It is a manufacturer's surplus and the accumulations of short ends. Some pieces are full, others are three quarters and half lengths, while there are several pieces with only 5 and 6 yards. In all, there about 2,000 yards, all high class silks in a range of neat patterns for shirt waists and shirt waist suits. You will find stripes, neat checks, dainty figures, pompadour effects, Persian patterns and a few plaids for children's dresses. The majority of these are the soft clinging weaves excellently adapted to the prevailing styles, and they would sell ordinarily at $1.00 and $1.25. Tomorrow and until they are gone, we place on sale the entire lot at 68c the yard. It is a budget of silks that will command admiration, and we look forward to unusual interest in the event.

Surplus of Embroideries Bought at About Half Their Worth
Go on Sale, Beginning Tomorrow, at the Same Ratio of Saving

Another fortunate buy by Mr. Giddings. These are beautiful St. Gaul embroideries, a small surplus of a leading importer, bought at a good round saving. It is not a cheap lot, but a variety of very high quality, including all-overs, flouncings, wide edges and insertions. Indeed the patterns are beautiful, and an important feature is they come in matched sets of fine Swiss. You will be delighted with them if you really admire beautiful, high class embroideries.

Lot 1 includes edges and insertions to match the wider flouncings. These are the wide embroideries and would sell ordinarily up to $1.00 the yard, sale price.................. 50c

Lot 2 Includes 18 and 24-inch flouncings in fine Swiss to match the all-overs, insertions, etc. These would sell ordinarily up to $1.25, sale price, yard 60c

Lot 3 includes beautiful all-over embroideries for shirt waists and shirt waist fronts, that would sell ordinarily up to $1.50, maybe some for more, sale price 75c

The New Spring Suits
Many New Lines Arrive Each Day

This week we are able to show a comprehensive display of new suits for spring. Many of our previous displays have been particularly noteworthy. In point of variety and excellence this spring's exhibit will take precedence over all. Each year the demand for the perfect "Giddings" garments increases wonderfully. Our ability to provide the women of this vicinity with high class apparel, a little cheaper than the same garments can be procured for elsewhere will be thoroughly demonstrated. Mark our word, when our display of suits, dresses and costumes is complete you will marvel at the exceptional values and exclusive styles represented.

Already we show a range of prices from $15 up, and you'll wonder how such excellent suits can be made to sell for the money. Always bear in mind the suits we show are made by the very best makers of women's clothes in America.

Expert Demonstrations of Omo Dress Shields

In a section near the home of dress findings we've a special demonstration this week of OMO DRESS SHIELDS, by an expert who is here for that purpose.

OMO DRESS SHIELDS are absolutely impervious to moisture, positively odorless, readily cleansed, hygienic, cool and very durable, did you know that?

This is the object of the demonstration—to explain thoroughly each feature of a really perfect dress shield. The OMO has its own peculiar points of excellence; it is interesting to know them all. Let the demonstrator explain them to you, showing the sizes and styles for all requirements.

OMO DRESS SHIELDS CONTAIN NO RUBBER, remember, they have instead the celebrated OMO ODORLESS interlining. Workmanship and finish the finest possible.

Ranging in price from 15c to 50c a pair.

Ask for our DRESS SHIELD BRIEFLET. This is a little booklet telling women what they should know about Dress Shields. It is something that every woman should read. Will be given without charge.

LOVE NEVER FAILETH

Copyright By ANNIE NETTLETON BOURNE

GROVE street had quieted down for the night. Far apart lamps flickered, and the moonlight sifting through arching elm boughs lent mystery and depth to the vista. It might have been a village asleep. Rattling carts and shouting teamsters and swift-moving men and women seemed further off than the day.

Half concealed by the shadow of a tree, half in the vivid moonlight, was the motionless figure of a man. He sat on the curb, with bent back and head, his clasped hands hanging down between his knees. At long intervals some one passed behind him on the sidewalk, but he did not stir. Suddenly he lifted his head, all attention; a quick step had sounded up the street. He slipped along into the shadow and was motionless again. The step came nearer, then it was not heard; a woman glided close to the fence and passed the motionless figure silently on the grass. She had turned the corner before the man moved. Then he walked swiftly until he caught up with her.

"Mag!" he said gently, laying a hand on her shoulder.

The woman uttered a sound of terror and drew away.

He caught her arm. "Don't you be afraid of me, Mag!" There was appeal in his voice.

The woman's manner changed at once, and she let him walk by her side.

"I've got work," he said, "an' there's three dollars comin' to me the night. An' I didn't taste a dhrop since, Mag. I'll be home to you be the sthroke o' nine." He gave her arm a rough pressure and tried to kiss her.

"Not here, Tom!" she begged. "I'll be waitin' fur you home."

The man turned away down a side street and the woman quickened her pace. Her thoughts came fast. Thank God, she had the home for him to come to! It had been hard to keep it by day's work. Should she wake up Patsy to see his father? No, he would see him in the morning. Tom would not leave her again. Twice he had come back since he went away in a fit of drunken rage, but only to take her earnings and leave her. Once he had struck her. "I had a right to tell him I'd shut the door on him," she said to herself. "Oh, I'm soft!" Her heart bounded. She would set the lamp in the window and have supper on the table.

As the city clocks were striking nine Maggie stood at her open door, peering up and down the street. When the chimes sounded the quarter and the half she was still there, though she had been inside a dozen times to set back the tea kettle or stir the fire or peep behind the curtain at Patsy, asleep on his cot. The room was warm and odorous of coffee and frying sausages. It looked pleasant to Maggie as she pictured Tom coming into it.

On Grove street, in the quite moonlight, a man sat on the curb. Several times he made a motion to rise, but sank back again. At last he got to his feet and tried to walk, but he staggered and almost fell. Stretching out his arms with beseeching gesture, he pressed forward a few steps. Then he stopped, his body swaying to right and left a moment before he sank down at the foot of a tree.

* * * * *

"Gee!"

This was Patsy's morning invocation as he bobbed up from his cot and sniffed noisly. Still sniffing, he slid to the floor and followed his nose to the stove. It was hot. On the back sausages were sizzling and coffee steamed. On the table he saw the customary half loaf and besides its usual accompaniment of a bottle of milk, there was butter.

Patsy was benumbed for a moment. Then, gradually, a relation between these objects and himself brightened his face. He broke off a corner of the loaf used the piece to shove a sausage onto a broken saucer, and then stood transferring it rapidly from the hot fat to his mouth, until the bread had become too diminished to absorb and render again the succulence of the frying pan. Black coffee, syrupy with sugar, and the cooled sausage formed the next course. Then Patsy noticed the butter again and rose to pay tribute to it by swallowing as large a lump as he could conveniently transfer to his mouth on the end of a knife.

A full stomach is not conducive to activity. Patsy stretched out in a chair, hands in pockets like the men he had seen in hotel office windows, almost forgot school time. He truly had meant to go, as was shown by his frantic use of a comb when he did think of it. But soon after 9 o'clock instead of being in his seat in school he was retracing his steps homeward. Matters of business, such as the exchange of a piece of chalk and a penny for two fried cakes, had detained him by the way until it was too late to go to school, unless one aspired to an interview with the principal.

His mother found him squatting in the middle of the kitchen floor when she came in. At the unexpected sight, she broke out:

"Home from school. Phwativer's the cause? It's not the first time, ayther. It'll be the last, or you'll get phwat you deserve, the contints of the rod. Come out o' that!" and she promptly raised him from the floor by a bit of his sleeve pinched between her thumb and fingers, and set him down hard on his feet.

Patsy leaned against a corner of his cot in a moment's sullenness, but by the time Maggie had peeled the potatoes for dinner and put them over to boil, he was on the floor again, snapping marbles at sundry bits of coal.

Maggie was not thinking of him as she sank into the rocker, arms relaxed and a far-away look in her eyes. The disappointment that had kept her awake or tossing in a light sleep all night had not bereft her of hope. She had not been able to go to work that morning. Instead she had gone instinctively to the scene of last night's meeting. There, where all had been quiet and peaceful, and the moonlight filtering through the branches had traced soft shadows on the pavement, she found herself in the midst of the noise and bustle of every day. She walked among men and women all seeking something as eagerly as herself, whose faces she scanned only to search for one that she did not find. When she came to where Tom had tried to kiss her, her heart throbbed. Then the light that illuminated her face for an instant suddenly died out and she returned home with a troubled look. "I'd a right to ketch holt o' his hand an' bring him wid me," she thought, as she roused herself to test the potatoes.

She stood close to the stove, her hands, with a fork in the right one, crossed before her. Now and then she thrust the fork critically into the pot, turning away from the steam. No one would have suspected from her fresh, round face, frank blue eyes, and general air of youthful vigor, as she stood waiting, that she had any burdens to carry. Poverty, anxiety over her husband, and sorrow at the loss of all her children but one, had not left the usual trace. As long as there was work to be done, Maggie Egan could throw into it all the vitality of her big, wholesome nature. She left herself no time for brooding, except at night, when she would say, "I do be too wore out wid the fatigue to fret." It was typical of her that she went to a lady for whom she sometimes worked, directly after the funeral of her first born, and begged to begin housecleaning at once, although it was a month too soon. "The way it would take up me mind," she explained.

When the potatoes were dished and Maggie had poured herself and Patsy each a bowl of long-steeped tea, which she cooled from the bottle of milk, they drew up to the table. The remaining sausage fat in the frying pan gave an extra relish to the potatoes, and both mother and child ate them with genuine enjoyment. Then Patsy yielded his head to a wet brush in his mother's firm grasp and his nose to a corner of her apron. "Mind I don't find you in it again phin school's kapin'!" was her only allusion to his shortcoming, as she gave him a resounding kiss on the mouth and pushed him out of the door.

When Patsy was gone, Maggie sought relief from anxiety, as was her way, in work. All the afternoon she stood plunging her smooth arms into the suds, straightening up to wring by hand, and shaking out each fresh garment with increasing satisfaction in her face. By the time her work was done, the hope of Tom's homecoming had revived as fresh and strong as ever in her heart.

The next morning was vital with spring, fit time for the revival of nature, ambition and hope.

Grove street had its windows open, its furniture on the piazzas and its clothes lines weighted with oriental rugs. In one of its houses Maggie Egan was on her knees. For years she had knelt there as regularly as at church, and I doubt if she applied herself more faithfully to her rosary than to her floor cloth. Whenever Mrs. Norton came to inspect the work that day she reveled in the spectacle of Maggie's broad, capable back, just as expressive of energy and stability of character as the woman's face.

At evening, when Maggie came for her pay, Mrs. Norton was suddenly struck with the pathos in her look. Relaxed, after a hard day's work, it revealed plainly the anxious heart. What could be the trouble? Mrs. Norton had always regarded Maggie's lot as comparatively comfortable and promising. Boundless health and joy in work kept her income sufficient; her home, if rather comfortless, was snug and clean; she so seldom referred to her husband, whom Mrs. Norton knew to be away most of the time, that she did not think of his playing any part in her life. The bringing up of Patsy was some cause for [illegible], [illegible] with the [illegible] of [illegible] such a father, that Maggie had but one child when other women had five or six. Moreover, not only did Maggie never complain, but she always struck a distinctly cheerful chord, in sharp contrast to the [illegible] tone of the others, whose lives Mrs. Norton tried to elevate.

But as Maggie waited in the spring twilight, with soft twittering of birds coming in at the window and fragrant air stirring the curtains, Mrs. Norton fumbled in her purse and wondered. To question Maggie required tenderness and tact. Not every one could have done it. But Mrs. Norton loved her and drew out her trouble.

So it was Tom. He was on her mind. She missed him. She counted loss what many a wife would have thought herself well rid of. A faint color stole into Maggie's cheeks as she dilated upon Tom's merits. "He's the smartest man you ever saw to work. He can earn his three dollars a day anny time. An' he never give me a blow or a cross word except he'd be dhrunk. Sure, Tom's the fine man altogether, you understhan'; it's the dhrink that has him desthroyed. An' even that wouldn't make him bad tempered if he didn't get too much of it." She recalled how many a time, when she had come home from work, she had found himself sated forinst the stove, wid Patsy on one side an' a pail o' beer on the other, an' 'How are you, Maggie, me darlint?'"

The mere talking about Tom, the revelation of her absolute devotion to him, brought back the cheer and determination to Maggie's face.

When she had gone, Mrs. Norton fell into a revery. Maggie's fidelity would have seemed incredible, had not her knowledge of the human heart long ago taught her that woman's love, like the pine tree which sprawls its roots over the bare rock and lifts its sturdy trunk unscathed, drinks deep from invisible wells and flourishes best where it has nothing to feed upon. Theoretically, she hoped that Tom had gone for good. Drunkenness and shiftlessness could never bring Maggie anything but sorrow, however deluded she might be. But when she roused herself from her thoughts, she was shocked to discover that as a matter of fact she had been wishing Tom at home, good-for-nothing as he was, and had been taking genuine satisfaction in the wife's joy in assuming any burdens that love for her husband might lay upon her.

Maggie's thoughts, as was usual when she turned her face homeward, were on Tom. With no very good reason, she felt strangely hopeful tonight. Now and then she would speak aloud, and frequent smiles came and went on her face. "I'm just a poor fool to be thinkin' it at all," she said to herself, "wid ne'er a word out o' his head this good phile, but wouldn't it be the odd thing now if I'd find him in it the night? I've a great notion to bring a bit o' bacon wid me against he'd be there. 'Twould make the fine supper wid this bowl o' sour milk that cook o' Norton's strongly intinded to cast if I didn't take it off her."

She bought the bacon from a butcher's counter that extended to the sidewalk. Pausing a moment on a bright street corner to adjust these supplies under her shawl, she caught a whiff, savory and warm, from a glass showcase on wheels. Inside a darting flame lighted a soft, snow-white pyramid and a row of bags. They were stuffed to bursting with their top corners twisted as erect and alert as a fox terrier's ears. Outside stood a slip of a boy, about the size of Patsy, his hands in his pockets, his round cap pushed well back, his nose, which barely reached high enough, flattened against the glass. The popcorn man surveyed the twilight scene over the top of the showcase. Maggie invested in two warm bags. "Here now, thin!" she said to the youngster, as she thrust one toward him. The pinched little face withdrew from the glass slowly, doubtfully. Then two short arms were held out eagerly. Grimy hands grasped the frail parcel and hugged it up tight to the receptive breast. The ears of the bag curved up on both sides of the small mouth. Perhaps they exerted a hypnotic influence, for the corners of the mouth began to curve upward, too; the eyes opened wide; the cheeks puffed out just a wee bit; the tiny nose wrinkled, and a soft light stole into all the shadowy places and [illegible] the little old face [illegible] as the last glow was [illegible] the evening sky. Not a word escaped the tightly closed lips. Maggie slipped the other bag under her shawl for Patsy and [illegible] on her way.

She did not find Tom "in it" when she got home, but the thought that the might was all the sustenance that her love needed to keep hope alive for a new day. And on the morrow her hope was [illegible] [illegible].

Having no work out that morning, Maggie was embracing the opportunity to sew. Seated in a low chair, knees well apart and a garment of Patsy's held at a good distance, she plied a coarse needle swiftly, drawing the long, unwieldy thread to arm's length. She gave her head an affirmative shake as she thought to herself that Tom couldn't be long coming now. He never had stayed away like this before. She had a few dollars put by. "If it'd be enough to get a bit o' ground in the country" maybe she could keep him. She could see him with his hoe and his pipe, and herself milkin' the ould cow, th' way it was before iver we left the ould counthry."

The thought of the boy was a sudden reminder that he would be wanting some dinner at noon. She bit off the thread, dumped her work on the lounge, dropped a woolen skirt over her calico and threw on a shawl, to go to the store. But Patsy found no dinner ready when he looked in for it after school. At that moment his mother was walking rapidly beside a messenger from the city hospital.

"Your man ain't kilt, I'm telling you, only terrible hurted," the messenger explained from time to time, in response to the moans that escaped from Maggie's lips.

Her genuine horror of the hospital was in abeyance as she ran ahead of him and up the broad stone steps. Scarcely heeding directions she made her way to the men's surgical ward. In the long row of white beds all alike, among the wan faces that all bore the same badge of the brotherhood of pain, she instantly detected Tom's. Pale faces were turned hastily aside and tears ran down rough cheeks as she threw herself on her knees beside her husband and covered him with kisses. "Tom, darlint! Tom, darlint," she sobbed.

Tom's eyes moved restlessly. "I didn't taste a dhrop since," he murmured. "Home b' the sthroke o' nine."

Maggie felt gentle, firm hands on her shoulders and saw a white cap bending over her. "He is out of his head now," said the nurse, "and we must not tire him. Tomorrow you shall come again."

The doctor met Maggie coming out of the ward and led her into his office. The eulogy that she poured forth in answer to his few questions about Tom was oddly in contrast to the estimate of the man which from long experience he had made.

When she had done speaking, he remained silent for a moment. "I am sorry for you, my poor woman," he began at last.

Maggie's eyes overflowed at once, for his manner seemed to foretell the worst. But when he added, "Your husband will not be able to support you now," she [illegible] [illegible] the tears. "Sure he didn't do that [illegible] a good phile," she said, with [illegible] cheer. "An' he won't die on me?"

"He will get well," said the doctor, "but you will have to do everything for him."

"Glory be!" [illegible] Maggie.

The doctor hesitated. Accustomed as he was to the [illegible] of [illegible], and to the variety of ways in which it could be received, he was [illegible] taken aback by the [illegible] in Maggie's face.

"He'll [illegible]! I can [illegible] he [illegible]."

"Yes, yes," [illegible] he'll be a [illegible] to wait on [illegible]"

"Glory be to God!" [illegible]

"It was [illegible] his [illegible]"

"[illegible] An' he [illegible] at all?" [illegible]

"No, [illegible] for [illegible]."

"Oh! Glory be to God!" Maggie broke out again, with such genuine [illegible] in her face that the doctor [illegible].

"Are you [illegible]?" he [illegible].

"Indade, sir, an' I do. Oh, glory be! An' th' dhrink'll niver have him desthroyed any more!"

"Well, I hope not," said the doctor, mystified again at this burst of optimism, "but it's hard for a man to break up that habit."

"But how would he get it?" cried Maggie excitedly. "Hi'self can't ketch a holt o' it, an' who'd give it to him? It [illegible] be me, thin. An' I'll never leave him out o' me sight again the longest day he lives."

Grove street was blooming a new day. [illegible] were sweeping the sidewalks; hyacinths and tulips shone brilliant in the [illegible] came to windows to look out upon the new world of spring.

Mrs. Norton was roused from a late nap by the sound of singing.

"[illegible] this morning," she thought, "[illegible] is [illegible] quiet."

Down stairs she found her on her knees, the [illegible] following the rhythm of her broad back as she scrubbed and sang.

"Good morning!" said Mrs. Norton.

Maggie turned a bright face over her shoulder.

"Tom's home," she said.

And the song went on singing in Maggie Egan's heart.

"THEN TWO SHORT ARMS WERE HELD OUT EAGERLY."

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

THE United States is now about the only civilized country in the world that has not yet established a system of postal savings depositories. England, France, Austria, Russia, Italy, Belgium, Holland, The Netherlands, Sweden, Japan, New South Wales, Cape Colony, New Zealand, Hawaii, Bulgaria, Egypt, Canada, and other countries have such systems in successful operation. Germany has no government service of this kind, but instead, the municipalities conduct postal savings banks.

In England and Wales there are 9,673,[illegible] depositors in postal savings banks (over a quarter of the whole population), and their balances average $70.72 each.

In Japan there are over eight million depositors with balances amounting to over forty-six million dollars, or $5.77 each.

Since 1871 our various postmasters general have uniformly recommended the adoption of a similar system in the United States. Our present efficient postmaster general, George von L. Meyer, is with exceptional enthusiasm and vigor, urging the passage of senate bill 6,484. Quoting its exact language, this bill provides for the establishment of "postal savings depositories for depositing savings at interest with the security of the government for payment thereof and for other purposes."

Its provisions, in brief, are as follows:

1. Each United States postoffice which is authorized to issue money orders becomes a postal savings depository.

2. The postmaster general may, at first, establish these depositories only in the money order offices of the first, second and third classes, and extend the system from time to time.

3. Accounts may be opened for any person over ten years of age by depositing at least one dollar, after which amounts as small as ten cents will be accepted. The limit of deposits accepted on any account in any one month is $100.

4. Not over $500 in all will be accepted on any one account, and interest at two per cent a year will be paid.

5. The postmaster general deposits this funds in national banks nearest the point of their receipt, at the rate of not less than two and one-quarter per cent interest.

There are over 65,000 postoffices in this country; 40,000 of these have the authority to issue money orders and are, therefore, embraced in provisions of bill S 6,484. There are 6,821 presidential postoffices to which the postmaster general may at first restrict the savings feature. Even this number is five times as great as the number of savings banks in the United States, which is 1,415. The postoffices have the advantage of being distributed fairly well throughout the country, whereas, on the contrary, about three-quarters of the savings banks of the United States [illegible] in the [illegible] New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and California), whereas in the remaining thirty-two states and all territories there are only one and six-tenths per cent of the deposits of all the savings banks of the country.

This is conclusive evidence that the highly prosperous western and southern states have, at present, comparatively little opportunity to reach savings banks and thus they lose an incentive to economy which the proposed postal savings system would supply. The experience of all other countries has proven that it is beneficial to the people to have postal savings depositories within easy access so that their savings may earn interest and be absolutely secure. In times of prosperity this plan, by encouraging saving, helps to make better men and more substantial citizens, the stimulus to habits of economy and thrift, reducing the tendency to dissipation and vice. Again, in times of business depression, the faith of the people in their government tends to prevent panic which would be more likely to seize them if their money were deposited elsewhere; for many have an undefined feeling of distrust in banks, which they view in the light of private enterprises, liable to be mismanaged or to fail.

The report of the postmaster general for 1907 says:

"More than seven millions of immigrants landed in this country during the past ten years, and it has been demonstrated that in the aggregate immense sums of money have been hoarded or sent away by these people."

The easy reach of government savings depositories will empty the proverbial "stocking," where, for lack of such banks, money is hidden at a loss of interest and at the risk of theft or fire. Taking another view of postal depositories, there is no easier, safer or more independent provision for old age, sickness or the ever threatening "rainy day" than the gradual accumulation of savings.

The opposition to the postal savings measure comes principally from the officials of savings banks on the ground that they should not be hampered by the competition of the United States government. Let us consider whether this is a fair argument. In the first place, these savings banks officials do not deny that the great mass of our people will receive a substantial benefit by having the proposed additional facility for saving small sums placed within their easy reach. How can they then reconcile their opposition with the benevolent character of their own institutions? These savings banks are conducted, in most part, by directors who serve without pay and entirely for the benefit of the public. How can there then be a logical objection on their part on the ground of government competition, to greater extension of facilities bound to bring further benefits to the [illegible] public [illegible] his savings in the postal depository becomes substantial, the depositor will no longer be satisfied with the two per cent interest rate and will, quite naturally, transfer his account to the savings banks that pay three and one-half and four per cent. Thus the postal depository will really be the feeder and not the competitor of the bank. By bringing to government safe-keeping small sums, now kept in the house or on the person, the postal savings depository will increase the total of savings materially and thus benefit not only the national banks in which the government will deposit the money, but also the savings banks to which the deposits will flow for the reason above stated. Regarding the further argument that the proposed postal savings measure will put our government in the banking business, Senator Carter of Montana made the following statement on May 7, 1908:

"By no rational construction can the postal depository system provided by the pending bill be regarded as a banking business. Deposits are limited as to aggregate amount and calendar months. No payments are made on check, but only on the application of the depositor under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the postmaster general. Exchange is neither bought nor sold, bills are not discounted and money is not loaned."

We may add that this postal savings plan would not be a new departure in our government policy, for the postoffices are already handling money orders and other business of the people.

Summing up briefly:

1. The postal savings depositories would bring within easy access of our people in all parts of the country the opportunity to deposit their small savings with absolute safety and thus encourage thrift, prudence and economy. No private enterprise has ever attempted to, nor possibly could undertake such a vast plan.

2. Through the absolute confidence of the people in the government, panics may be prevented, savings increased and the amount of money sent abroad by our immigrants reduced by the establishment of postal savings depositories.

3. It would be a simple development of the money order system now in use in our postoffices and could not fairly be construed as a new departure in principle, on the part of the government.

4. There would be little expense connected with the plan because the existing machinery of the postoffices would be used.

5. The government would keep the monies in the districts in which they are saved, thus causing no disturbance in balances nor the much feared concentration of funds at a central point.

6. On account of the smaller interest rate the postal depository will be a feeder rather than a competitor of the savings bank.

7. The experience of nearly all other civilized countries proves that the plan is a [illegible] success where [illegible]

EVENING HOOD OF SATIN AND SWANSDOWN.

Coiffures are so perishable this season, with their loose waves, airy puffs and fillets of soft ribbon, that heavy headgear is out of the question for the theater, where nobody now thinks of sitting through the evening with the hat on. The loose theater hoods of silk and satin are very easy to make, for the shape will not matter much so long as the hood sets out well from the hair. This hood is of pale pink satin cut with a little round crown at the back, and the sides are held out by "reeds" or strong milliners' wire running into the lining. The hood [illegible] over the shoulders, as well as the head, is edged with white [illegible] just now as a [illegible] and there is a [illegible] hood [illegible]

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY

By Madame Lina Cavalieri

No. 1 Of a Remarkable Series of Articles By the "World's Most Famous Beauty."

MME. LINA CAVALIERI, the famous beauty and the well-known grand opera soprano, has made a life-long study of beauty culture and has studied, herself worked out many recipes [illegible] are [illegible]. Madame Cavalieri has studied the writer of [illegible] [illegible] and has had the benefit of the best experience of the great [illegible] of Europe.

On this page to-day is printed the first of a series of extremely interesting articles on the Secrets of Beauty by one to whom Beauty [illegible] so much. The Article printed here may be considered as an introductory to the other articles, which are to follow from week to week and will be full of detailed instruction, with prescriptions and advice never before published, covering the widest range.

Every woman wants to read, study and have the Beauty Secrets of a woman who has been called THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN THE WORLD.

By MADAME CAVALIERI.

TO be beautiful, hold to your youth. To be youthful, stop short of fatigue in whatever you do. The Germans have a rude, strong proverb, "Whatever you do, do it without haste." Shorn of its last clause "without rest," I approve of the German proverb. [illegible], much rest, less sloth, is the corner stone of beauty.

A woman cannot afford to be tired any more than she can afford to be ill. [illegible] beauty. Beauty must be delicately maintained as [illegible] nurtured. It is not [illegible] to work or study [illegible]. It is [illegible] all [illegible] on his [illegible] for him, golf or [illegible] or [illegible] car. [illegible] of beauty [illegible] [illegible] that of [illegible] beauty [illegible] out the [illegible] in at the day.

American Women [illegible] Beauty.

American women are [illegible] intelligent. Some of them are beautiful, but their beauty is [illegible] that of the [illegible] or the Italian. They are stronger, but less poetic; handsome, but not so artistic. It is the difference between the pine tree that grows on top of the hill and the flower that grows in the valley.

A woman should go to the flower for her model of beauty. She should get her beauty hints from it. The finest, most exquisite compliment that can be paid to a woman is to say that her beauty is flowerlike.

The American woman, on the contrary, akin to the wind-swept tree on the hilltop for her [illegible]. She believes as the English [illegible] in air, always air, air, air. Fresh air is good for beauty, but there are times when it is too harsh.

The well ventilated boudoir is better for beauty than the storm outside. The American woman believes her physician who says that [illegible] deplete the strength and [illegible] from her sleeping room. When delicate perfume of the best kind, used daintily, that is, not too much, soothe the nerves. And whatever soothes the nerves without the action of the narcotic is an aid to rest, and rest is the high road to beauty.

The advanced American woman plays tennis and golf until she is tired to exhaustion. Every time a woman is exhausted from any reason she adds five years to her age and makes an overdraft on the bank of her beauty. A woman should exercise just enough to keep herself from growing fat and dull eyed. If the lines of her figure are youthful and her eyes are brilliant she needs but little exercise to keep them so.

My Ten Commands of Beauty.

The flower is at its best when it has [illegible] moisture. This is another lesson to be learned from the flower. The complexion must have moisture, plenty of it. When it has the dry, withered look of the complexions of young women I know in this country, it is because it has not enough of the moisture from within and without. The moisture from within is in the form of perspiration, the moisture from without can be secured by steaming, by laving in rosewater or other distilled water, and by cold cream. The best way to induce moisture is by the use of a pure cold cream.

Out of my [illegible] in preserving youth and beauty I have [illegible] this decalogue. I call it Cavalieri's Ten Commands of Beauty:

1—When your mirror tells you you are not looking well, rest.

2 To keep the hair beautiful wash it once a week.

3 To keep the mouth young, massage with the little fingers the lines of petulance from nostril to lips.

4 To have always a youthful contour, keep the line of the jaw as thin as a knife edge.

5 To keep the nose shapely, give it frequent massage.

6 To take away the ugly, middle-aged [illegible] of the neck, use hot compresses on it.

7—To keep the tired lines away from the eyes, bathe the lids and skin about the eyes with water as warm as you can endure it.

8 To make the eyes always brilliant, bathe them as often as you do your face. Use an eyecup filled with rosewater.

9 To avoid the multiplied chin, sleep with the head low, the lower the better.

10 To refresh the dry, withered skin bathe it often in water as warm as you can endure.

[illegible] with "rest." In practice they end with that. I might drop half of [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible]

[illegible] beautiful [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in [illegible] [illegible] fat. A [illegible] that is [illegible] by fascinating [illegible]. But to make it interesting it must have what? Features that are well proportioned, let us say regular. They must seem to belong to one's own face and no other. The nose must not be too large nor too small, but just large enough for the face in which it is set.

How to keep the lines of that face as good as they were at the beginning or better? It is most important. The nose should be massaged—intelligently massaged. The owner of the nose herself can do it quite as well as if not better than any other.

The Mouth's One Permissible Curve.

If the nose is too broad, she should massage it delicately toward the point. If it is too sharp, she should massage it away from the point to the flare of the nostrils, always with the merest points of the cushions of her fingers. To keep its normal whiteness it should have often, at least once a day, a hot compress of cotton dipped in rosewater or other distilled water, spread upon it. And after that there should be a dash of cold water upon it to close the pores.

To be beautiful a woman must have a mouth well shaped, red, but not too red; moist, but not too moist, and it must part prettily over even and dainty teeth. The beautiful mouth turns neither up nor down. Its only permissible curve is at the middle, not the ends. I believe in allowing the mouth to take care of itself. It is its surroundings, its environment, so to speak, that is important. Look to the lines from nostrils to lips. See that they are removed by massage. Massage restores circulation. Massage is like an irrigation by system for waste land. Creases are caused by lack of circulation. The muscles that hold the mouth in a firm line are thread-like, one just above and at the sides of the lips. It is most important to keep these taut by massage.

The teeth are the most important of the appointments, the furnishings, so to speak, of the mouth. They must be kept perfect at all costs of care and forethought. But they, like all portions of a woman's body, must be delicately treated. Tooth powder should not be used more than once a day. And that in the morning. For the rest a delicate liquid dentrifice after each meal and before retiring, applied with a soft brush.

The hair should glow with health and be lustrous as satin. To make it so? Ah! Eternal vigilance is the price of beauty. We will suppose that one discovers that there is much dandruff in her hair. At once she must begin washing it once a day for six or seven days, until no dandruff remains. After that once a week is enough, but it is not too often. And it should be brushed carefully and tenderly twice a day. And after each brushing there must be the tonic massage by the points of the finger tips, like the quick patter of raindrops.

That is the wonderful waking up—massage, like the needle spray in the Turkish bath.

Massage Like Patter of Raindrops.

Now, I shall give you some facts which I call, because they are favorites of mine, "Cavalierisms."

I believe in soap, but let it be pure soap. There are soaps made from spermaceti, which is the oil taken from the head of the whale. It is the only soap I use. It is very expensive, but one may not economise as to the complexion. This is my recipe for the care of the complexion every day:

On rising, massage the face eight or ten minutes. Massage it with the two middle, that is, the second and third fingers, and with a round, not lengthwise, motion. The round motion removes lines. The lengthwise motion makes them. Remove what is left of the cold cream with a linen towel or an old handkerchief. Then apply a little more cold cream, then powder.

In the evening I take ten to twenty minutes for cleansing my face. First, I wash it in tepid water. Never cold water, except in emergencies of great fatigue. Then I massage for eight or ten minutes. Remove the cream. Then more cream—very little more and so to sleep.

Never use vaseline on the hair, never, never. It is not harmful. It is merely useless. It no more makes the hair grow than would sprinkling flour over the face make it grow. It is derived from a mineral, and nothing of mineral origin causes the hair to grow.

I never use grease on the hair. After the shampoo, once a week, I use camomile lotion, rubbing it in carefully with the points of the fingers, and on no account permitting it to touch the face, because it will make the face yellow.

This camomile lotion, which cleanses the hair and tones the scalp, promoting circulation, is made thus:

Two large handsful of camomile.
Two quarts of water.

Boil for fifteen minutes, or until it is as dark as black coffee. Then shake, and add two quarts of cold water.

Put in a stone jar and keep in a cold place. Shake well before using.

Hair to be really beautiful should not lie in heavy, sticky bands, but should stand out hair by hair, as separate as the down of a little chicken. To acquire this use ten drops of ammonia sprinkled in the camomile. It must be added after the mixture has boiled and cooled, otherwise the ammonia will evaporate.

This is the favorite preparation now used in France. No beauty nor fashionable woman ever uses oil upon her hair. By keeping it frequently washed and thoroughly brushed she permits it to develop its own oil.

The Egyptian women have the most beautiful hair in the world. This they owe to henna.

Sprinkle enough henna in the water to make it the color of coffee. Part the hair in little strands and, with a small hand-brush, [illegible] into it, rub the scalp.

The hands should be kept smooth and white. To keep them so I wash them a la Cavalieri. First in soapy water, through many waters until they are spotless as my linen. Then I dry them, but only partly, by the heat of the hands themselves, not with a towel. Then I bathe them again in this mixture:

One ounce glycerine.
Three ounces rosewater.
Ten drops lemon juice.

This should be well shaken before being mixed, and also every time it is used.

Sometimes, when I wish to cleanse and whiten my face, I use this mixture:

One wine glass rosewater.
Fifteen drops peroxide.

But I leave it on the face not more than fifteen minutes. Then I remove it by a face bath of rose water or of cold cream to remove the sting.

If I use a cold cream I have not myself prepared, I always send it to a chemist's to have it analyzed. Hundreds of times the report has come back: "This preparation contains lead." The person who prepares cold cream that contains lead in any form should go to prison. For lead makes pimples that may become cancers. It causes paralysis. In time it makes the teeth fall out. It is murderous!

A cold cream should contain pure almond oil. Some women use the almond oil without any combination and think they are at last hygienic. Unhappy women! They buy almond oil at 30 cents a pound and think it is pure. Pure almond oil costs 80 cents a pound.

For food a woman must be her own lawgiver. She can watch the effect of different foods and know what is best for her. One thing that is good for all complexions is much fruit, fruit of all kinds, especially in the morning.

Sleep, but not too much sleep, is one of the first aids to beauty. One requires a little more, another less. For me, if I have less than eight hours, I am tired. If more, I am tired also—heavy, stupid. In time, I should become anemic. The reason for this your physician will tell you. While lying down the lungs do not work freely. The air does not circulate through the body so well as in action. With too much sleep comes to all anemia.

For sunburn or windburn I use this preventive:

Anoint the face with cold cream.
Dust it with rice powder.

Then go forth in your motor car or for your walk unafraid, for you are protected from the sun and wind.

But if you have got sunburn or windburn, then use

One part glycerine.
Three parts rose water.

Apply to the skin a dozen times a day, varying it with a pure cold cream or with rose water alone.

This is another Cavalierism. In this I am almost particular. Always brush the hair straight back from the forehead. It makes the hair grow low on the temples and forehead.

So, for the scraggy neck and the hollow chest and the thin arms take the tonic massage; that quick, light, yet stinging, tapping of the muscles by the cushion points of the fingers.

If I were asked what is the best friend of woman's beauty I should say, not fresh air, nor exercise, but a wineglass-full of the best rose water, with a half dozen drops of glycerine sprinkled and shaken in it. This refreshes the skin, and with a fresh skin no woman can be ugly, no woman need be even plain.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, WASHINGTON.

SCHOOLHOUSE ON LONG ISLAND.

CIRCUMSTANCES and conditions in the story of Ethel Roosevelt make it different from that of any girl who ever lived in the White House Nellie Grant had only one ball given in her honor When she married and went away to another land the whole country missed her and was sorry Nellie Arthur was not at the White House much while her father was president Before the end of his administration a small dance—it was called at the time an informal function—was had in her honor It was her first and last recollection of the social side of the old mansion. Alice Roosevelt had just emerged from girlhood when her father went to the White House through a shadow A part of her courtship occurred there, and it was there that she was married. The event was all that any ambitious young woman could wish, but she was never in the romp as her brothers and her sister have been.

When Ethel Roosevelt went to the mansion as the daughter of the president of the United States she was at the age when all the surroundings of her life were in a formative state, but it must have impressed her that she had come into a different atmosphere from that in which her companions were living Until her sister was married Ethel was screened to same extent from the public eye, but she was in the [illegible] of it all. She saw the great throngs that came and went on state occasions. She heard the music in the spacious halls and "the laugh on the lawn."

After the marriage of her sister the scene b[illegible] unfolding to the eyes of Ethel Roosevelt. She took her place as the belle of the White House. When her father went to Washington as vice president [illegible] was ten years old. Back of that event were Sagamore Hill [illegible] was born, and an unpretentious schoolhouse near by, where she received some of her first instructions not all, of course for she got m[illegible] of her instruction at home When the family went to Washington she was placed for a time under the care of a governess. A little later she went to the National Cathedral school and there finished her academic education The wedding of Alice Roosevelt and [illegible] worth took place The social [illegible] was before Ethel. She declined a collegiate education. Then began her devotion to the accomplishments necessary for a belle in the complex society of Washington.

Field Daisy at Sagamore Hill.

In the summer of 1906 Ethel was at the home on Sagamore Hill She was still a child There was a flower party on the grounds, given strictly in her honor. It was the first party since the wedding at the White House. Her kins people and some specially invited guests from New York and Newport were there Every guest represented a flower. Ethel was a field daisy The game was the battle of the flowers. If there is anything in the first party of a girl that indicates what her life is to be this event at Sagamore Hill portended sunny days for Ethel Roosevelt.

At a party later in Washington there was a n[illegible] approach to the life upon which the young lady was to enter A fancy dress ball was given in Ethel Roosevelt's honor by Mrs. Richard Clover, wife of the American naval attache in London. One hundred playmates and companions of the little hostess and Beatrice Clover were present. Ethel took the part of Little Red Riding Hood Her brother Kermit was the rough rider of the party

The Romp of the Households.

Ethel was called the "romp" of the White House before her sister was married Sometimes her father alluded to her as the "imp." A little incident at the White House one New Year's night shows that she was entitled to both playful appellations During the d[illegible] she had stood at the head of the [illegible] stairway which leads up from [illegible] room and watching [illegible] father and mother and their social company receive callers It is an old Washington idea—this New Year reception to the public When all was over, when the lights were [illegible] out in the big room, and long after the president and Mrs Roosevelt had retired, the "romp" stole out from her room in a long white gown. She was accompanied by her brothers. How it was arranged nobody but those in the [illegible] know, but several guests of Ethel and her brothers had been admitted The reception of the day was repeated in a miniature way. Kermit and [illegible] took their places as the president and Mrs Roosevelt had done a few hours before They bowed as their father and mother had done, and Kermit imitated his father by saying as he extended his hand, "Dee lighted, I'm sure." The "romp" had even arranged the music. Of course the Marine band was not there, but back of a bower there [illegible] like the "Suwanee River." The [illegible] an old [illegible] The [illegible] was a negro who [illegible] been inveigled into the mansion. It was a miniature of the day's proceedings, but before it was over it more nearly resembled a juvenile circus

Dawn of the Coming Out.

In the [illegible] of 1908 Ethel Roosevelt was [illegible] recognized as the suc[illegible] [illegible] as the belle of the presidential manson. One evening in October a theater party was given It was in no sense to mark the coming out of Ethel but it was a step in the direction of that event She was in the presidential box with her father and mother and a few guests It was her first appearance in public in full dress Two things in the life of every man and woman never die In the case of a man he never forgets when he first put on trousers No girl lives enough years to forget the night she wore a long dress to a social function.

Ethel Roosevelt's fondness for outdoor sport and her playful nature ha[illegible] not interfered with her desire for more practical affairs It is not known when she was obsessed with the idea of getting books. Her library in the White House is a credit to her intelligence It is filled with many volumes which one would scarcely expect to find in a young woman's collection Whatever the cabinet contains, except the books that were given to her, she bought. Her preferable presents are books

For one of her age and for one whose time has been taken up with so many other affairs she is a skilled musician She talks fluently and without affectation To use a coinage of the day, she is "well read." She speaks correctly English, German and French With brush and pen she is very clever Her needlework has received favorable commendation wherever it has been exhibited. Some of it has been on sale at church fairs and at other places.

Debut in the White House

When Ethel first went to the White House she occupied the nook in the northwest corner which Mrs. Cleveland had for her boudoir. After the marriage of Alice Roosevelt [illegible] fell heir to the blue room, which [illegible] known as "Alice's room." Ethel [illegible] to New York and purchased the fu[illegible]ings of the rooms. They stand there today The bookcase in the room, which is of unique design, was planned by Ethel.

When the time came to talk about the formal coming out of Ethel Roosevelt, to the surprise of her family and her friends, she demurred. She [illegible] from the event because she [illegible] to fear that it would interfere with her freedom In the age where it is [illegible] tendency of girls to long for the time when they may be fancy free it is a pretty compliment to the [illegible] sense of one brought up in the [illegible] light of conventionality that Ethel clung to the days when she [illegible] a girl

Finally the day came, [illegible] of the whole land [illegible] It occurred in the [illegible] of the White House on the [illegible] of last December [illegible] of the younger set at [illegible] A party [illegible] New York A [illegible] came on [illegible] figure in statecraft [illegible] were present. The atm[illegible] the old [illegible] was laden with [illegible] of the choicest growth of [illegible] of the mansion. [illegible] in profusion from other [illegible] It was laughingly [illegible] that [illegible] for the first time [illegible] in the White House [illegible] fiddle' The [illegible] at 9 in the evening [illegible] bells [illegible] ringing midnight when it ended The only daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt had been given to society at the age of seventeen years and three months

FRANK H BROOKS

The New President of Harvard University

FOR the first time in forty years Harvard university will have a new president May 19 of the current year—Abbott Lawrence Lowell, fifty-two years old Dec. 13, 1908.

He will succeed President Charles William Eliot, who tendered his resignation Nov 4, 1908, effective on the first mentioned date The corporation and overseers of the institution selected Mr. Lowell Jan 13 of the present year. The selection will be ratified by the board of overseers.

For the benefit of busy people the following outline of the career of the coming president is inserted:

Born in Boston, Dec 13, 1856

Graduated from Harvard college in 1877

Married Miss Anna Parker Lowell of Boston, June 19, 1879

Graduated from Harvard Law school in 1880

Formed law partnership with Judge Lowell, his cousin, in 1880.

Hon Frederic J Stimson a partner in 1891

Published, with Judge Francis C Lowell, "Transfers of Stock" in 1884

Published Essays on Government" in 1889

Wrote "Governments and Parties in Continental Europe" in 1896.

Member of the Boston school board 1896-9

Retired from practice of law in 1897

Appointed a lecturer on government at Harvard in 1897

Collaborated with Professor H. Morse Stevens of Cornell on "Colonial Civil Service" in 1900

Became a trustee of the Institute of Technology and trustee of the Lowell Institute in 1900

Elected permanent professor in science of government at Harvard in 1900

Published "Influence of Party Legislation in England and America" in 1901

As a member of the executive committee of the Institute of Technology he favored the consolidation with Harvard in 1904

Published "The Government of England" in 1908

Selected president of Harvard university Jan 13, 1909

Following the act of Jan 13 President Eliot made this statement: "At a meeting of the president and fellows of Harvard university Professor Abbott Lawrence Lowell was elected a member of the corporation and president of the university The name was then presented to a meeting of the overseers, but was laid over under the rules for one week The rules cannot be altered, but the action of the board at the next meeting is not doubtful."

The board of overseers of Harvard is a body of thirty members elected by graduates. Besides Professor Lowell's name, the following were mentioned in connection with the honor: Wallace Clement Sabine, professor of physics, dean of the Lawrence Scientific school and dean of the Graduate School of Science, and Charles Homer Haskins, professor of history Professor Lowell is the oldest and the only Harvard graduate in the list

A Man of Double Prestige.

Professor Lowell has the prestige of both achievement and inheritance. On the paternal side he is a lineal descendant of the first John Lowell, who was a prominent figure in the seventeenth century, of Boston He belongs to a line which includes the late James Russell Lowell and Judge Francis C Lowell of the United States district court.

The grandfather of the president elect was John Amory Lowell, founder of the Lowell mills. He brought the Lowell Institute into being The father of the president elect was Augustus Lowell, who continued the industry begun by the elder Lowell. He was a man of cultivated tastes and a patron of the liberal arts

On his mother's side Professor Lowell is a great-grandson of Abbott Lawrence, who, with his brother, pioneered the cotton industry in the city of Lowell and shared with the Lowells in the distinction of making Massachusetts the first textile state in the Union. Amos, son of Lawrence Lowell, was minister to Great Britain in 1840 His son, Bigelow, was consul to Florence in Lincoln's administration. Augustus Lowell married Katherine [illegible]low Lawrence, a daughter of Amos Lawrence Their eldest son is Professor Percival Lowell, the astronomer The second son is the president elect of Harvard college

His Early Education.

[illegible] Abbott Lawrence Lowell was placed under the care of a private tutor when he was quite young He was then sent to Paris for two years On his return he was prepared for college at Noble's school He entered Harvard with the class of 1877. He took the highest honors in mathematics and received the distinction of cum laude At the graduation exercises he was assigned to deliver a "disquisition" and was made a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

As a student in athletics he won first place in the mile race in 1877 at Beacon park He was the champion splinter of the institution. After his graduation from the Harvard Law school he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1880 He was in active law practice in Boston for seventeen years He was particularly efficient in handling large estates He visited eastern Europe in 1884 and in 1890 he went to Greece Turkey and Russia. He began his lectures at Harvard in 1897 In 1900 upon the foundation of the Eaton professorship of the science of government, he became the first occupant of the chair and assisted 4,000 students in laying the foundation of their knowledge of political science. As member of the Boston school board he was the author of the merit system now in force in the public schools of his native city When his father died Professor Lowell became trustee of the Lowell Institute and important reforms followed his work there

Last year Harvard rewarded him with the honorary degree of master of arts As a lecturer he is popular and always interesting

Personality of Professor Lowell.

The students of Professor Lowell's classes have been drawn to him by his engaging personality Though of serious mien he is never austere His manner invites confidences He is sympathetic and frank He appeals to those who are in need of counsel He has been a student all his life His social relations have naturally been with scholars. He entertains at dinner frequently at his home For one of his means and position he lives modestly Distinguished men of both continents sit down at his table Although he is a member of several clubs, he rarely visits any. He was brought up in the Episcopal church and for some years he has been a constant attendant at the services in King's chapel where he is junior warden.

Unstudied courtesy and instinctive deference are marked characteristics in him His intimate friends credit him with even temper, a gentle humor He does not play golf or tennis, but he is an ardent pedestrian His summer home is at Cotuit, Mass There, in summer, he may be found in his boat on the bay

There are no children in the Lowell home The members of his family are Percival Lowell, the astronomer his brother, and Mrs James L. Parker, Mrs William L. Putnam and Miss Amy Lowell, his sisters

Harvard's Grand Old Man.

The resignation of the president of the United States would have created not much more comment than did the resignation of Charles William Eliot, head of Harvard He was elected president of the [illegible] May 19, 1869 He was [illegible] thirty-five years old. Criticism was loud in Cambridge. The spirit of that time is illustrated in an anecdote by Oliver Wendell Holmes In a letter to his friend Motley, the historian Dr. Holmes wrote "It is curious to see a young man like Eliot, with an organizing brain a firm will, a grave, calm, dignified presence, taking the ribbons of our classical coach-and-six, feeling the horses' mouths putting a check on this one's capers and touching that one with a lash turning up everywhere in every faculty (I belong to three) on every public occasion and taking it all as naturally as if he had been born [illegible]. 'How is it, I should like to ask,' said one of our number the other evening 'that this faculty has gone on for eighty years managing its own affairs, and doing it well—how is it that we have been going on so well in the same orderly path for eighty years, and now, within three or four months, it is proposed to change all our modes of carrying on the school It seems very extraordinary, and I should like to know how it happens'"

"'I can answer Dr [illegible] question very easily,' said a bland, grave young man 'There is a new president.'"

The bland young man described by Dr Holmes was the young president himself

Eliot's Victory.

THE MAN MITE

By EDMUND VANCE COOKE

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY C. F. EMERSON, JR.

ONE Summer the Man Mite went out to visit his grandmother who lived on a farm. Every little boy ought to have at least one grandfather, or one grandmother, who lives on a farm. The Man Mite's grandmother thought a great deal of him and he thought a great deal of his grandmother—and of his grandmother's farm.

He liked the horses and the cows and the meadows and the barn and the pond and the woods and the orchard and the spring-house. He was especially fond of the spring-house, for it was cool and restful on hot Summer days and his grandmother used to let him take his fairy-book and sit there as long as he liked.

One day he heard his grandmother say that she wished she had some "herbs and simples" to make some medicine. Without saying anything to her about it and without knowing very clearly what "herbs and simples" were, he started out to get some for her. On the way he passed the spring-house and stopped in just for a minute to look at the pictures of the gnomes and pixies in his book. He didn't quite remember how far he had got in the book when he put it down and went to the woods, but presently he found himself gathering the "herbs and simples." He had no idea before how many things grew in the fields and woods. He found a great many curious little flowers and shrubs and grasses and berries, but very few hart-leaves and he remembered that his grandmother had mentioned hart-leaves particularly.

As you know, hart-leaves love to grow around old logs and stumps, so the Man Mite kept a sharp lookout for these. He was sure he had walked a long, long way and was beginning to feel tired. Indeed, he remembered now that he had felt tired even when he went into the spring-house. He had a good mind to turn back when, right ahead of him, he saw a rotten stump with hart-leaves and hart-leaves and hart-leaves growing at the bottom.

The Man Mite gave a shout of joy and ran towards it as fast as he could. He ran so fast that he took a jump into the stump to stop himself, but, much to his surprise, he didn't stop. Instead of stopping, he fell right through down, down, down, until bump! he found himself in the fireplace of an underground room. Luckily it was Summer and there was no fire in the fire-place, but before he had time to pick himself up, a little old man came running towards him. Though old, he wasn't so tall as the Man Mite himself, but on the forefinger of his right hand there grew a nail fully a foot long and with its edge sharpened so that it was almost like a sword. On the other hand grew an equally long nail hollowed at the end like a spoon.

"What do you mean by jumping down the chimney of the King's kitchen?" screamed the dwarf, pointing his finger at the Man Mite.

"Oh, I didn't mean to. Please don't stab me!" cried the Man Mite.

"Stab you!" answered the dwarf. "I am the chief cook of the King. I do not pollute the King's bread-knife."

The Man Mite scrambled out of the fire-place and started to brush himself off. "Stop that! stop that!" screamed another little old man, with a long, stiff beard, so long that it dragged on the floor. Not only did it drag on the floor, but he dragged it on the floor, using it as a sort of a broom with which to sweep.

"Couldn't you brush me off, too?" asked the Man Mite.

"Brush you off!" said the old man, scornfully. "I am the keeper of the King's floors. I do not pollute the King's broom."

"Hurry, Wierdbeard," said the first dwarf; "it is almost time for the King's dinner."

"Yes, Slimjim," answered the other, "let us light up and summon the King's table."

It was all very curious to the Man Mite and just at this juncture he heard somebody outside crying. "I don't want to be washed! I don't want to be washed!"

"The King! the King!" cried Slimjim and Wierdbeard, bowing their heads to the ground as a little boy entered, just about the size of the Man Mite. Backing in before him came a dwarf with enormous hands, in which he held water. After him followed another dwarf with long, white hair which hung down his back in a wavy mass.

"Will his majesty deign to dip his beneficent face into his majesty's basin, Wholebowl, and dry his imperial features on his servant, Bigwig?"

"Oh, bother!" said the little boy. "Why, who is this? My name is Rex; what's yours?"

Before the Man Mite could answer, Wierdbeard spoke. "This, your majesty, is a prisoner guilty of housebreaking, burglary, obtaining entrance to the King's palace under false pretences and impersonating Santy Claus."

"I never did!" denied the Man Mite.

"Didn't you break the King' chimney?" demanded Wierdbeard, "and isn't a chimney part of a house, so aren't you a house-breaker? Isn't house-breaking burglary? Didn't you come down the chimney as if you were Santy Claus and are you Santy Claus? Isn't that fully impersonating Santy Claus, and if you pretended you were Santy Claus, isn't that obtaining entrance under false pretences?"

"Oh, bother," said the King. "Say, do you like people to [illegible]? I don't."

"Will your majesty deign to occupy your majesty's cushion?" asked Rolypoly.

"Yes, thank you, I'll deign," answered the King, as another dwarf bobbed up from somewhere, having a left hand as large as a platter, while his right hand was very small. "Hello, Platewait," said the King.

"OH, OH, OH!" CRIED PLATEWAIT, "BEFORE YOUR MAJESTY RECEIVES HIS DESSERT, I PRAY YOU LET THE PRISONER RECEIVE HIS DESERTS"

"Good appetite to your majesty. Will your majesty have bivalves, shellfish or mollusks?"

"I'll have some oysters," answered the King.

Platewait went over and whispered to Slimjim, returning immediately with the announcement. "Very sorry, your majesty, but we are out of lemons, and it is impossible to serve the oysters without them."

"I've got some sour-grass I found in the meadow," said the Man Mite.

"Oh, do you like sour-grass? So do I," said the King.

"It will not do at all," said Platewait hastily. "Will your gracious highness have the goodness to choose his second course, eau de consommé, or bouillon aqua pura?"

"Say, is your name Gracious Goodness?" asked the Man Mite. "You said it was Rex."

"I'll take some soup," said the King.

Platewait went over to Slimjim and presently returned, saying, "Very sorry, your majesty, but the soup is spoiled, because the cook has no savory."

"I've got some catnip I picked in the field," said the Man Mite.

"Oh, do you like catnip?" asked the king. "Have you ever tried to smoke it? I did once."

"Impossible," said Slimjim, shaking his long knife-finger at the Man Mite behind the King's back.

"Will your majesty condescend to choose his third course, pollywog au naturel, or wigglers à la rain-barrel, or shredded shad?"

"I'll take some fish," said the King.

Platewait went over to Slimjim and returned. "Very sorry, your majesty, but the chef says the fish cannot be served without drawn butter sauce, and we have no butter."

"I've got a cup of butter; I mean a butter-cup," said the Man Mite.

"Just the thing," said the King.

"Your majesty's chef is too much of an artist to use substitutes," said Wierdbeard.

"If he's an artist, why doesn't he draw the butter?" asked the Man Mite.

"Will your majesty be kind enough to order his fourth course?" interrupted Platewait. "We have Spring lamb, Mary's lamb, Bo-peep's sheep and [illegible] mutton."

"I'll take some meat," said the King.

Again Platewait went over to Slimjim and returned. "Very sorry, my liege, but the meat cannot be served without mint sauce and ——"

"I've got some mint," interrupted the Man Mite. "I picked it by the brook."

"And," continued Platewait, while Wierdbeard and Slimjim threatened the Man Mite behind the King's back, "your majesty's mint has ceased coining for the present. Will your majesty have fowl à la barnyard, or chicken comme il hencoop?"

"Chicken!" shouted his majesty.

Platewait and Slimjim consulted as usual. "Very sorry, your majesty, but we have no dressing for the chicken."

"I've got some chick-weed," said the Man Mite.

The King started to say something, but Platewait put in, "Will your majesty partake of the vegetable salad?"

"Yes, indeed," said the King.

Platewait came back with his usual excuse. "Very sorry, your majesty, but the pepper is out and the salad is not fit to eat without pepper."

"I've got some pepper-grass," said the Man Mite.

"Your Majesty," shrieked Slimjim, "this prisoner is too smart. He——"

"I've got some smart-weed," faltered the Man Mite.

Wierdbeard now ran up and brushed imaginary crumbs off the King's table, while Platewait asked, "Will your majesty order his dessert?"

"But I'm hungry," said the King. "I've had nothing to eat. At least, bring me some bread and milk."

"Very sorry," began Platewait, "but the milk ——"

"I've got some milk-weed," interrupted the Man Mite.

"Give it to me," said the King. "I'm so hungry I could eat a lion."

"I've got a dandy lion," answered the Man Mite.

"Oh!" cried Platewait, "before your majesty receives his dessert, I pray you let the prisoner receive his deserts."

"Put him in the cooler," commanded the King, and then asked, "Do you like cookies?"

"Your majesty!" cried the dwarfs who composed the King's table, "we regret to leave you before dessert but we are also your majesty's patrol wagon."

"Oh, bother!" said the King.

Then the Man Mite was placed on the backs of the dwarfs and they darted away through caverns and corridors, until they came at last to a strange circular thing which looked like a tower.

"Open, Floordoor!" cried the patrol, and a little old man stepped out of a niche at the bottom of the tower, into which he fitted like a brick in a wall. Out of the hole thus made, a stream of water gushed, but the dwarfs seized the Man Mite and thrust him in head first, after which Floordoor wedged into place again.

Though he fully expected to drown, the Man Mite struck out bravely and presently he felt himself going up, up, up.

Then he came bump against something hard and where do you think he found himself? In the spring-house by the side of the very bench where his fairy-book lay!

"Dear me," said the Man Mite, "to think that the King's underground palace reaches all the way from the woods to the spring-house!"

He ran to the house and told his grandmother, who was very much interested. When he had finished, she felt of his jacket, and remarked that it wasn't even damp.

THE RAG DOLL

—By Hannah G. Fernald

IT was not really a doll, and it was not really Elizabeth's, but "Elizabeth's doll" is what Dr Andrew Kent calls it to this day.

It happened one Spring morning that Elizabeth was summoned hastily from the schoolroom and driven across the city to her Uncle Andrew's; her own little trunk was on the back of the carriage, and as they rode Elizabeth's mother explained that she was called out of town for a few days, and that Elizabeth was to stay with Uncle Andrew and be very, very good.

Then Elizabeth and the little trunk were left at Dr Kent's, with a hurried good-by, and mother rode away to catch her train.

Elizabeth felt quite dazed as she sat watching Uncle Andrew's housekeeper unpack her trunk—it was all so sudden! Then, as the last little garment was lifted out, Elizabeth made a discovery.

"Mrs. Lane," she cried, with quavering voice, "mother didn't pack one single doll!"

Mrs. Lane did not seem to feel the full horror of the situation.

"You're only going to stay with us a few days, you know, my dear," she said, comfortably, "and your mother was called off in such a hurry, it's a wonder to me she remembered your clothes! I'll find some old magazines and you can cut out and dress some pretty paper dollies."

Elizabeth played with paper dolls for two whole days. She could not go to school, for the distance was too great; Mrs. Lane was kind, but busy; and Dr. Kent, though the jolliest uncle in the world, was not much comfort, because he was at home so little. Elizabeth tried to be contented, but she did long for a real doll to talk to.

On the third morning of her stay at the big house, Elizabeth was standing at the hitching-post, feeding lumps of sugar to Uncle Andrew's black horse, when an idea struck her—an idea so bright that it brought smiles out all over her face.

"Uncle! oh, Uncle!" she cried, as Dr. Kent ran down the steps and sprang into the carriage; "may I play with the hitching-post?"

Jerry, the black horse, started off at a run, but Dr. Kent leaned back to wave a hand at his little niece. "Yes! yes!" he called, and to himself he added: "Is it as forlorn as that for the poor baby?" and made a note in his little red book.

Elizabeth skipped up-stairs to Mrs. Lane.

"Please, Mrs. Lane," she said, "may I have a big, big piece of old white cloth? And may I go to the corner store and buy some colored crayons?"

Mrs. Lane found a big bundle of white cloth and, gently patting Elizabeth's head, handed it to her.

"You're the best child to amuse yourself!" the kindly housekeeper said, admiringly; and then Elizabeth ran out to the hitching-post and set to work to make herself a doll.

It took her a long time to carry out her plan, but she finished at last, and then hurried into the house, brimful of laughter, to call Mrs. Lane. That lady, in a state of great excitement, met her in the hall.

"Elizabeth," she exclaimed, "I have something important to tell you, your mother's come home! She's telephoned, and she wants me to bring you home this minute, and I'm going to spend the day with you. Put on your other jacket, quick! I've sent word to the doctor—and we will go out the back way; it's nearer the car."

And so they hurried off, and Elizabeth in her rejoicing never gave another thought to the new and unusual doll that she had left standing at the curbstone before the door.

As Dr. Kent drove toward home that afternoon, he wondered why so many acquaintances smiled broadly as they nodded to him.

As he neared his door he saw a curious figure in a fluttering blue frock standing motionless at the curbstone. Jerry tossed his head nervously, but the doctor urged him closer still—and then, on beholding the unique figure, leaned back in the carriage to laugh and laugh, while the passers-by smiled sympathetically.

Surely such a hitching-post never was seen before; it had been transformed into a rag doll of giant proportions. The iron framework was swathed in the white cloth received from Mrs Lane, and then attired in a blue dimity dress of Elizabeth's, with empty sleeves dangling helplessly; the round white head had brilliantly colored cheeks, lips and eyes, shaded by an enormous sunbonnet of Mrs. Lane's.

When the doctor could draw a long breath, he called a little boy to hold Jerry while he divested the hitching-post of its strange apparel. Then he went into the house and telephoned to Elizabeth's mother.

Elizabeth herself, with all her dolls gathered about her, wondered what her mother found so amusing at the telephone.

When the conversation was over, her mother, still smiling, said, "Elizabeth, Uncle Andrew wants me to tell you that he has adopted a doll—a very superior, well-dressed doll, he says, and that the next time you come to see him you won't be reduced to playing with the hitching-post!"

"Oh!" exclaimed Elizabeth, "I had forgotten the hitching-post! It was rather a pity," she added, seriously, "to take it to pieces!"

Perhaps You've Met Him

By E. L. Sylvester

There's a little boy I know
Who never seems to go
Downstairs in just the regulation way;
He will roll, or slide, or crawl,
Go backward, jump, or fall
But walk? oh, no! not once the livelong day.

The Probation Officer and the Child

THE MODERN WAY OF GETTING AT THE ROOTS OF JUVENILE CRIME AND CHECKING IT—A DAY'S WORK WITH A CHICAGO PROBATION OFFICER

By Henry W Thurston

(Exclusive Service Charities and The Commons Press Bureau)

Mr. Thurston is Chief Probation Officer of the Chicago Juvenile Court, One of the First Organized and Generally Best Equipped Juvenile Courts in the Country He is Author of Numerous Books on Schools, Juvenile Courts and Probation Work, and an Experience of Nineteen Years as a Teacher Makes Him Particularly Fitted to Write on any Subject Dealing with Children

"SAY Mister, is this the Jubiline Court?" asked a 13-year-old boy of me one morning the first week of our occupation of our new Juvenile Court building

"Yes son, what can I do for you?"

"I want to see my probation officer and have him send an officer to arrest my father to make him stop hitting me"

"But why does he hit you?"

"He says if I take off these pants he'll hit me"

"But why do you want to take off the pants?" I asked, "Aren't they all right?"

"No they're too short and the boys at school and on the street laugh at me,—and I don't want to wear 'em"

I looked at him His mother had indeed made a mistake in the adjustment of a pair of men's trousers to a boy and had cut them off so short that his red socks showed over the tops of his shoes No wonder he wanted to take them off I said all right Mr M will be here in a few minutes

The next day I asked the officer what he did about the trousers He said that at first nothing would do but to arrest the father, but as he talked over with the boy the number of children, how much a new pair of trousers meant to them how hard his father and mother worked the possibility of soon getting work himself, and the bravery that many a poor boy has shown in laughing down and outliving the jeers of thoughtless playmates, he changed his mind and said "All right, I'll wear em It'll be worse for mother and all the children if I have him arrested I guess he ain't so mean as I thought he was"

Among the foreign born children who know American ways better than their parents, and among all court boys and girls who are just growing out of childhood toward manhood and womanhood, the probation officer has a great work in thus interpreting the child and his parents to one another

Many children under probation are of working age and should be looked after The following report illustrates a picturesque side of a probation officer's work

A boy was returned from the John Worthy School January 1 1907 He was released on parole to me and I secured a position for him soon after his release. He worked every day, and last winter when the firm was laying off most of its help, and in my anxiety for his welfare, I telephoned to his employer, asking him to retain the boy if possible, and he pleased me much by saying. "fire him, I guess not, I keep him if I keep him as a watchman. There is good stuff in that boy." He was earning $8.75 a week and his mother allowed him 15 cents a week spending money Rain or shine; he walked to work, lived in a poor house, had but little encouragement from his home, but reported to me regularly and although he is now released from probation, he comes to see me Saturday nights, tells me his joys and his sorrows, and I know that he will be a first class citizen

Each day's work of a probation officer is a cross-section of many lives It is not enough for him merely to call on children under his care He should have a different purpose to carry out in the case of each child Each time he sees the child his parents, friend, teacher or pastor, he should push in the direction of one of these purposes In Chicago dependent as well as delinquent children are put under probation in order that their parents may be stimulated to care properly for them A typical day's work might be as follows

"Left home at 8 30 and after an hour's ride found J R at home instead of in school, taking care of the baby, because his mother was washing Made a few remarks that, it is hoped, will carry conviction to both Joe and his mother Called at the school, to inquire about the N's and V W, Gratified to see all so clean, which is not always the case Found T P at home because she is out of work She prefers work in a hotel Pointed out the dangers of hotel work. Wrote a note for her to take the South End Center.

"Next called on J D Saw his mother. J has just returned to work, been sick a long time Then went over to the South Chicago steel mills Secured promise of work for S M

Had some coffee and rolls in a restaurant Am entitled to an hour, but seldom take more than half that time A long trip to L's to find that they have moved that morning No neighbors knew where I was confident that I could trace them Have done so Now in a slightly better place Called on Father F to secure his influence on the K family so that they will allow little W to go to the hospital for treatment Stopped at police station to leave a message for Officer M A long walk to see the K's Left a pair of shoes for C Urged his mother to keep him at home nights He favors the cheap theaters

Took Mrs G with me to talk to Mrs P about A as Mrs P is not only quite deaf but speaks only Swedish Also a talk with A about some girls Advised her to keep away from them

My last call was on Mrs H the deaconess as I was sure she would help about A We shall probably be obliged to send A to Geneva"

So far as any child is concerned the care of the probation officer should be continuously directed along any or all of these lines, as the child's needs directs So far as any day's work is concerned, the probation officer makes a series of visits giving one kind of impulse in this case and another in that, as the welfare of each individual directs

FIND PREHISTORIC GIANT.

Skeleton 15 Feet High Unearthed in Mexico.

From the New York Tribune

News was received here Monday from Mexico that at Ixtapalapa, a town 16 miles southeast of Mexico City, there had been discovered what was believed to be the skeleton of a prehistoric giant of extraordinary size

A peon while excavating for the foundation of a house on the estate of Augustin Jaurez found the skeleton of a human being that is estimated to have been about 15 feet high and who must have lived ages ago, judging from the ossified state of the bones

Romulo Luna, judge of the district, has taken possession of the skeleton, which is complete with the exception of the skull Judge Luna says that as soon as the search for the skull is finished the skeleton will be forwarded to the national museum of Mexico, which has an almost priceless collection of Aztec antiquities The national museum it is said, has made arrangements to investigate this "find"

The discovery of the skeleton has revived the old Aztec legend that in a prehistoric age a race of giants lived in the valley of Anahuac, a name given by the aboriginal Mexicans to that part of the Mexican plateau nearly corresponding to the modern valley of Mexico City These giants, known as Quinatzins the story goes were afterwards destroyed by the Olmecas, also of great stature who in turn, perished by earthquake interpreted as an expression of the wrath of God

So many women are successful in running a house better than a man can run his business because they do it without a single theory.

SIMPLE SATIN EVENING CAPE.

The simpler the design and the finer the quality of the material the higher the style of the evening wrap this year Satin and soft, clinging lustrous broadcloths are the accepted favorite materials for such garments, and all the pastel shades with white are equally favored. This model is on the burnous order, with collar facings of handsome embroideries in silver and gold The fabric is a pale blue chiffon satin and the lining of the same [illegible] over an inner lining of light-weight flannel is in a [illegible] pink.

OHMS, AMPERES AND VOLTS EXPLAINED.

Meaning of Electrical Terms in Everyday Uses.

When an electric current is flowing in the trolley wire or electric lighting circuit there are three factors involved One of these is the pressure expressed in volts which causes the current to flow, another is the resistance or opposition offered by the circuit to the flow which is expressed in ohms, the last is the current strength or volume expressed in amperes, which is maintained in the circuit as a result of the pressure overcoming the resistance The ohm is named in honor of George Simon Ohm a distinguished German electrician The volt is named after the Italian scientist Volta The ampere is named after the French scientist Ampere

The unit of current is called the ampere The unit of electrical pressure or electromotive force is called the volt The unit of resistance is called the ohm The unit of electric power is the volt ampere and this is called the watt Seven hundred and forty-six watts per hour equal one horsepower The unit of energy—the product of electric power and time is called the joule, but this unit is too small for practical purposes and the kilowatt-hour is used instead The kilowatt-hour is the work done by a thousand watts working for one hour

These electrical terms are as familiar to electrical engineers as feet and inches are to the average boy The layman does not understand because he has never been taught has never had to use the terms has never read about them

It is easier to understand these terms if we consider electricity as a fluid and liken it to a current of water flowing through a pipe The rate of flow of water in the pipe depends upon gravitation and the height of the reservoir or source above the outlet The greater the height of the source the greater will be the pressure of water and the greater the flow in gallons per minute It is just the same with electricity A current flows from a high potential to a low potential whenever the two are joined by a conducting wire It is merely a difference of level Watch a stream of water from the nozzle of a garden hose striking a bank of soft earth Considering it as a stream of electricity, which unfortunately cannot be seen the force of the stream or its pressure represents voltage the size of the stream or flow the amperage the wattage the amount of work done in washing away the dirt Suppose the interior of the nozzle and hose is rough which offers a resistance to the ready flow of the stream, this friction and resistance is represented by ohms in an electric circuit.

A WONDERFUL WEDDING CAKE

The Remarkable Creation of a Chicago Chef Who Intended it for the Duke D'Abruzzi.

From the Chicago Examiner

Now that an ungrateful patron has rendered fruitless his great labor of love in constructing a 1,000-pound wedding cake, Ben Mogni chef at the Great Northern hotel, has about made up his mind to give it to the prettiest Italian girl married in Chicago between Christmas and New Year's

The cake has been in the process of making and sculpturing since the latter part of July, and it was just finished Saturday Today it will be on exhibition in the dining room of the Great Northern hotel

Mogni intended it as a wedding present to the Duke d'Abruzzi and Miss Elkins. He began work on it when the engagement was announced last summer, and Frank Murphy head steward of the hotel had promised him a month's leave of absence to take it to Italy. Mogni was born on the d'Abruzzi estates, and was working for the present duke's father when the duke was born in Madrid 35 years ago

With a view to portability, the cake was made in seven sections each section a different kind of cake They are all fitted together in a wonderfully sculptured pillar, topped with a snow white horse of sugar and egg modeled after the duke's favorite Arabian steed, Le cheval blanc d'Arabie The base is surrounded with a decoration consisting of the insignia of the Annunciata, one of Europe's highest orders of knighthood conferred upon the Duke d'Abruzzi some time ago

From the floor to the top of the horse's head the cake measures 12 feet It required a week to bake each one of the sections and they are coated with sugar and egg to keep them from drying out A cake of this kind is supposed to be in condition to eat until it has stood five months

Mogni's creation is valued at $1 a pound or $1000 for the entire cake including in its make up consumed 15 cases of eggs, 300 pounds of small English raisins 350 pounds of sugar and other cake manufacturing materials in similar stupendous quantities

WESTINGHOUSE RESTORES FULL PAY

Pittsburg Dispatch to the New York Tribune

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company has without announcement restored to its three thousand employes a yearly total of over $400,000 which was taken from their annual pay roll last March when the policy of retrenchment was instituted

The only announcement made by the company was a little slip in the different pay envelopes issued Saturday in shops from London to San Francisco including Pittsburg Newark and Cleveland The old rate of wages is restored from January 1 Each of the three thousand employes receives an average increase of $15 a month

PADEREWSKI'S DIET.

From Tit Bits

Prior to his appearance at a concert, Paderewski would not thank one for a piece of the most toothsome dainty ever made [illegible] takes nothing until [illegible] a soft boiled egg When it is over he takes a hearty meal which he enjoys thoroughly as his appetite is excellent, although he is so abstemious During a concert he drinks a soda lemonade, made without sugar It need hardly be said that this is not intended as a stimulant After the concert he permits himself a draft of [illegible] beer.

BIG STRIKE IS MADE IN THE GREAT BEND

RICH SHOOT ENCOUNTERED IN GOLDFIELD DISTRICT.

Company Is Made Up of Indianapolis Men. Ore R[illegible] $1.75 Across Face of [illegible].

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Feb. 13.—An event of [illegible] interest, resulting [illegible] development in the Goldfield district is a shoot of high grade ore which [illegible] in the deepest workings of the Great Bend mine, in the Diamondfield section, five miles from the town of Goldfield and adjoining the Daisy [illegible].

The strike was made in a lease in which J. P. [illegible], president of the Great Bend company, is interested, and has been [illegible] officially by the company engineers, who pronounce it to be of prime importance, particularly in view of the fact that no ore of paying quality has heretofore been exposed at [illegible] depth on the [illegible]. [illegible] are [illegible] interesting.

In driving for a [illegible] fissure at a depth of 400 feet, [illegible] but a short distance from the shaft on the Diadem [illegible], the vein was entered and a drift was run for some distance along the hanging wall, exposing about 20 inches of ore which, it is said, maintains a value for that width of at least $175 a ton.

Assays taken the first 48 hours after the ore was exposed gave returns of $88, $142, $614 and $1.2[illegible]. Later a thorough sampling of the entire vein left no doubt as to the value of the find, and the vein gives every indication of improving with greater depth.

In common with other properties in the Diamondfield district, great difficulty was experienced for a time on account of the heavy flow of water and the unstable character of the ground, but a pumping plant has been installed, which has served to eliminate this obstacle, and development work from this time will proceed without hindrance.

The shaft, which has reached a depth of a little over 400 feet, will be continued to the 600-foot level, and the vein will be explored from that depth.

In the company workings of the Great Bend an ore shoot was opened at the 500-foot level, and about 300 feet distant from the new strike on the lease. It is believed that this is one and the same ore shoot, and, if this proves to be the case, an immense tonnage of excellent ore will be readily opened in the mine.

A small shipment of amalgam has been made from the new Florence mill and several carloads of concentrates will be in readiness for shipment within a few days. The plant is now working in excellent shape, treating from 85 to 90 tons of ore daily. This ore is taken from the mine dumps, which it is designed to get out of the way before the reserves from the underground workings are touched, and has been found to contain better values than was supposed would be obtained.

It is apparent that the leasers, in their haste to secure the greatest possible tonnage of high-grade ore, permitted occasional carloads of higher-grade ore to be thrown on the dumps without due care in sorting and without sampling the veins as they were opened up.

Some comment has been occasioned by the publication of a financial statement by the Florence company which shows a cash balance in the treasury on January 1 of but $181,769.65, and fear has been expressed in many quarters that the first quarterly dividend of the company would be passed. In this regard the company management declares that, while no promises have been made at any time to the effect that dividends would be paid upon any specific dates, and the policy of the company has been to make a distribution of profits at such times as they were warranted by the condition of the treasury, there is little likelihood that a reduction in the dividend rate will be necessary.

PLACER GROUND IS TO BE OPERATED

SYNDICATE BEING FORMED TO OPEN OLD TERRITORY.

Southern Slopes of Mineral and Carbonate Hill Will Be Scene of Activity.

Special to the Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Feb. 13.—Negotiations have been entered into between representatives of a syndicate, now in course of formation in Denver, looking to the lease or purchase of the placer ground on the southern slopes of Mineral and Carbonate hills, immediately adjacent to the boundaries of this city. This ground is owned for the most part by the Sun Consolidated Gold Mines company, the Cripple Creek Land and Mining company, and T. J. Moynahan, late of this city, and now a resident of Denver. The management of the Michigan Pipe Line company, with reservoirs at the base of Pikes Peak—western slope have also been approached as to terms for the supply of water for the dredges to be used in the operation of this ground.

This placer ground was the scene of activity in the early days of Cripple Creek, and the dirt is reported to have contained from $1 to as high as $3 per cubic yard. The ground is also referred to in the report of the United States geologists, Lindgren and Ransome, on this district, as follows: "Were water available, a considerable area could probably be washed with profit."

It is unlikely that work in any manner will commence during the winter months, but should the negotiations for lease or sale be successfully terminated, this city in particular would be materially benefited by the development of this placer territory.

Ore Shipments Heavier Than Year Ago, and the Outlook Is Pronounced Good.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 13.—Ore shipments to the Chamberlain-Dillingham sampling works show an increase of 18 cars in January over the corresponding month last year. This is a total increase of about 450 tons of smelting ore and is tangible evidence of the renewal of activity in the shipping mines.

Since a year ago there has been no real growth of the mining business, although the big development tunnels continued forward. The increase of ore shipments has, however, been inevitable and, while the movement is small as yet, it cannot be many months before a veritable boom in production will be on. There are more men at work in the district today than ever before in the hisotry of the city and the results are showing. Thus far no apparent revival of interest in prospects is notable, but that also will follow the restoration of normal conditions in the producing mines.

January affords the assurance that the year 1909 will be progressive and before the end of the year Idaho Springs will be the most prominently mentioned mining field in the state of Colorado.

SNOWBOUND CAMP MAKES SHIPMENTS

JANUARY OUTPUT FROM SILVERTON IS NOT BAD.

In Spite of Hard Winter, [illegible] Manage to Get Ore and Continue Important [illegible].

SILVERTON, Colo., Feb. 13.—The output for the camp for January amounted to 2,300 tons of concentrates and 250 tons of crude ore. This represents about two-thirds of normal January shipments, owing to the fact that the railroad was blocked for 10 days during the month.

A force of men has begun work on the Congress, near Red mountain. The property has been a shipper of high grade copper ore in the past, and at one time was worked extensively by Thomas Walsh. It is now owned by the Congress Gold and Copper Mining company, who have worked it during the last year under bond and lease. This was taken up recently and the title to the property passed into the hands of the company. The ore in which operations are now being conducted is a high grade copper product, with good values in other metals. The ore occurs in the form of a "chimney," which is so characteristic of the Red mountain region. Shipments will not be extensive during the winter, as the ore has to be packed by pack train to Silverton, a distance of 12 miles. The development, which will be continued throughout the winter, will put the property in fine shape for a big output during the summer months.

The Joe and John group, lying in Prospect gulch, near Gladstone, has recently been sold to the Allerton Mining and Milling company, Iowa capital from the town of Allerton. This property has been a shipper in a small way of very high grade lead ore. The group consists of seven claims and is splendidly located, being surrounded by some fine properties. A contract for driving a new tunnel a distance of 800 feet has been let, and work will begin immediately.

The Pittsburg tunnel, which is being driven by the Ross Mining company, to cut the veins of the Champion mine, on Sulton mountain, is making good progress during the winter, and the lower levels will be established early in the summer. The upper workings of this property have shown large quantities of a good grade ore, and when the lower level is established and connection made, the mine will be worked extensively. The new tunnel is directly on the line of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, affording easy and economical shipment.

PARNELL LODE OPENED THROUGH BURNS-MOORE

Property of Allen Mining Company will Be Developed in Tunnel.—Drifting Renewed.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 13.—J. B. Allen was here last week in company with Max Kloeger of Dallas, Texas, to inspect the Parnell lode, recently cut in the Burns-Moore tunnel. The Parnell is the east extension of the Little Flat mine, belonging to the Allen Mining company, of which Mr. Kloeger is a heavy stockholder. Dr. Shaller of the Burns-Moore accompanied the gentlemen and discussed with them the proposition of a lateral from the tunnel for the deep development of the Allen properties.

This is the logical manner of working these properties and it is probable that work in the lateral already driven on the Parnell by the Burns-Moore company will be continued on into the Little Flat. The distance from the tunnel to the end lines of the Allen holdings is but little over 500 feet. With the facilities of the tunnel the big bodies of low-grade ore in the mine would be profitably worked.

The showing of ore in the Parnell continues good and the Burns-Moore will continue the development of the vein both east and west from the tunnel. Some difficulty has been had with the pipe line of the power plant. That has been remedied and, with the increased flow of water in the stream, it will be practicable to resume driving the main tunnel at the same time that the lateral work is carried on. During the winter the work in the tunnel heading has been [illegible].

The cost of a reservoir system adequate to regulate the streams in the Ohio basin is estimated at $126,000,000. This estimate is based on a supposed necessity for the building of 100 reservoirs at an average cost of $1,250,000 each. To regulate the whole Mississippi valley in this manner would cost, it is estimated, $500,000,000.

100 TONS OF $35 TO $50 ORE DAILY

COMBINATION FRACTION MINE GOOD PRODUCER.

Mine Has Big Tonnage of This Ore Blocked Out in Readiness for the Mill.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Feb. 13.—At the rate of 100 tons daily ore from the Combination Fraction mine is now being treated in the mill of the Nevada Goldfield Reduction company. This ore has an average value of between $35 and $50 and the mine has a large tonnage of this character of rock blocked out and in readiness to haul to the mill. The impression which has gained wide circulation, that the Combination Fraction company has secured full control of the plant under a long term lease is erroneous as the agreement merely contemplates the treatment by this plant of a considerable quantity of Fraction ore while the sampling department remains in charge of and will be operated by the Nevada Goldfield company.

Shipments of ore from lease and mines within the district and from surrounding camps are noticeably on the increase and the sampling department of the Nevada Goldfield company's plant, which has the largest capacity of any in this district with the exception of the Consolidated company's new mill, will be called upon to handle a considerable tonnage of the character of rock which is shipped to the smelters and to milling plants elsewhere. The milling department is in excellent condition and has required no changes, the Fraction company having begun sending its ore to the stamps immediately upon the completion of negotiations for its treatment. The plant is capable of making a high percentage of saving in values and the arrangement must result in good points for the Fraction company.

HOW A CHINESE CITY MOURNS

High and Low Officials Assign People Places to Weep.

Hangchow Cor. Shanghai Mercury.

Soon after the news of the death of the emperor and empress dowager was confirmed official proclamations were issued instructing the people how to observe the mourning rite.

All festivities were interdicted and musical instruments were not allowed to gladden the ear. The high and low officials proceeded to designate places to weep, and the people generally had weeping places assigned them. The tablets of the departed sovereigns were placed in these places to receive the obeisance of the mourners. The government schools have suspended for some days and the students go about with white girdles around their waists. In most of the schools, both native and mission, memorial services were held.

On the streets lanterns with blue letters are hanging from nearly every shop, and there is a great display of white bunting. The sign boards are draped with it, and it is stretched over the street in places and before many of the shop fronts. The mottoes, "The whole empire mourns," "The empire weeps," etc., are freely used. The police wear white badges on the left arm. Girls wear white in their hair. All the red buttons on men's caps have been replaced by black or blue. Red is tabooed. Often the red letters on sign boards will be covered with white paper pasted over them.

In Spain about the only kind of plow in use is a primitive wooden affair with one handle and a tongue. To this is hitched a pair of small oxen or mules yoked up like oxen. The driver rests his right foot on a rear extension to keep the plow from jumping out of the ground, steadying himself by touching his left foot when about to lose his balance.

MAY WHEAT REACHES A NEW HIGH RECORD

Sells at $1.14 Per Bushel Gain of One Cent Over Thursday's High Mark Corn Bullish.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Wheat for May delivery sold here today at $1.14 per bushel, a gain of 1 cent compared with the record-breaking figure established Thursday was ⅛c. Corn and oats closed firm and buying by local shorts caused the upturn. At the close the net gain for the day was ¼c. Corn and oats closed firm and provisions easy.

The highest price paid for the May delivery in nearly four years failed to bring out any great amount of buying or selling of that option in the wheat pit today, the congested condition of the market holding many traders in check. The market opened easy. May opened ⅛ to ⅜ lower, at $1.12⅝ to ¾. Before the end of the first half hour, however, the demand for May had carried the price up to $1.13¾. From this figure there was some setback on selling inspired by the official report showing the amount of wheat exported during January from the United States, the figures showing a falling off of more than 11,000,000 bushels, compared with the same time a year ago. A lessened demand for cash wheat also had a bearish effect. Late in the session fresh demand for May forced the price up to $1.14. Final quotations on May were $1.13⅛. July sold between $1.00⅝ and $1.01⅝, and closed at $1.01⅛, a shade below the previous close.

Unsettled weather in the corn belt had a bullish effect on the corn market, but prices made only slight advances. At the close prices were ⅛@¼ to ⅜ higher, compared with Thursday's close.

Oats were relatively more active than corn, but trade was not of large volume. At the close prices were a shade to ⅛@¼ higher, compared with the previous close.

Moderate weakness was displayed in provisions. At the close prices were 2½ to 7½ lower than final quotations of Thursday.

FAT PIGS ARE COMMON.

St. Anthony's Faithful Attendant Was an Ordinary Hog.

From the Pall Mall Gazette:

The manager of the Kensington theater advertised for a little pig the other day to act in his pantomine. Replies have poured in by the bushel. The good man has discovered that pigs charming in the owners' eyes, fitted by habit and disposition to grace any stage, are common objects of the country. One was "brought up with my little boy," another has been a companion to the children and follows them to school; a third looks on its mistress as a mother—so she fondly imagines—a fourth sits up and begs like a dog. These tender descriptions were not Irish; bluff Saxon farmers and their hustling wives supplied them. No doubt the pig is a fascinating creature if you regard him in a metaphysical point of view—ignoring what scientists call the phenomenal. Most of us cannot be blind to his preposterous snout, his abominable little eyes and grotesque tail, or deaf to his raucous grunting. To see him waddling and grubbing is no joy, and his manners at dinner have supplied a proverb to all languages.

But people of strong mind and stomach who ride superior to these vulgar considerations fined great merits in the pig. Sir Walter Scott had a succession of pets which loved him with a passion beyond control. Lockhart tells how persistently one of them interrupted his walk with some great personage, refusing to be driven back. Sir Walter pleaded the contemporary example of Lord Gardenstone, an eminent judge. This dignitary raised his pig by hand from birth in order to secure all its inherent virtues uncorrupted. "It slept upon his bed while young and slender, comparatively; afterward the kind old gentleman used to spread his clothes for it on the floor as he undressed, and the sagacious animal sat on its hind quarters watching him until the operation was finished and its couch prepared.

But a great example might be adduced. St. Anthony is known by his attendant pig—a perennial joy to the school children on old windows. On that account St. Anthony has gone out of fashion—the young must be allowed to amuse themselves in church. Also his symbol is thought undignified. A lion or an eagle may properly be attributed to a saint—they are noble creatures which love slaughter and blood—but a peaceful vegetarian like a pig must be incongruous! But the poor animal found a benefit from this association once. A decree of Edward I. cleared London of pigs—in the street, that is. But it specially excepted those belonging to St. Anthony's hospital. They were to carry a bell for identification, and thus equipped might roam at large.

SLAVE SALE AT BROOKLYN.

Three Hundred Applicants Prefer Servitude to Pauperism.

From the New York American.

The advertisement of a "man for sale," placed in the American by Ed T. O'Loughlin, of 738 Carroll street, Brooklyn, has brought upon him such a flood of appeals that he announced Sunday he would be compelled to resort to an auction in order to find masters for everybody.

"As all these poor people have come to me in confidence, asking that their names be kept secret," said Mr. O'Loughlin, "the auctioneering will be conducted in a way to protect all who offer themselves for sale. Several say they are willing to go on the block and be knocked down to the highest bidder. If so, they will wear a mask or domino over their features to prevent their being recognized.

"No name will be used during the sale. The applicants will be spoken of like this: Lot 1, a mechanic, etc.; Lot 2, a farm laborer, with details as to his age, experience, etc."

All told, 300 applicants for servitude have written to Mr. O'Loughlin as the result of his first advertisement. About forty letters were received from people who wanted to "buy" servants. The latter came from all parts of the United States. The president of a vacuum cleaner company, of Lima, Ohio, wrote that he wanted a half dozen men. A widow at Fort Worth, Tex., wrote:

"Have seen your sale of men in New York. If you have still a good, healthy white slave who is not afraid of a little work, I would like to enter into negotiations for his purchase. You may give me the ha-ha, but I am in deadly earnest. I have a big house here, which I own, and plenty of land surrounding it. There is only one thing lacking—a man. I am 35 years old, and considered good looking. I will trust you to pick out the right man, and I will pay the freight."

Many letters from the far west offer work on farms and ranches.

DESERTS FOR PANCAKE FEAST.

Soldier Who Gained Liberty for Cakes Loses It for Syrup.

St. Louis Dispatch to the New York Press

Though the pancakes of his wife inspired such memories while in the army that they caused him to desert and thus gave him liberty, the syrup that was to be put on them caused Earl Stevens, who deserted from the Seventeenth infantry at the Presidio, San Francisco, about two weeks ago, to lose his liberty and landed him in a cell.

Since he deserted Stevens says he has been at the home of his wife, 1303 Chestnut street, and has "laid low" all the time, enjoying the pancakes, "which only Edna knows how to cook," and making up for six months' lost time in eating them. Detectives Patrick Murphy and John Quinn were yesterday morning walking near Thirteenth and Chestnut streets when they saw a face they thought was familiar. It proved to be Stevens, and they arrested him.

"Wait a minute," said Stevens, as the detectives started to hustle him off to headquarters.

"You know my wife's cooking some pancakes over at the house, and I started out to get some syrup for them. If it was not for those pancakes you would not have caught me. Let me enjoy them and I will give up willingly." The detectives let Stevens go to his home, where he had another meal of pancakes, and then went to the station with him.

Mrs. Stevens said she and her husband had been separated six months by his enlistment, and though he said it was her cooking that brought him back, she thought it was "just herself."

The establishment of a Scandinavian steamship service to America is being actively urged in Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

COLORADO SPRINGS GAZETTE

THE little boys and girls must buy their Valentines, for the kindly saint who presides over the day has given to little boys and girls a goodly portion of it's friendly joy. So Mother and Auntie May take the little boy and the two little girls and go to the nicest valentine shop they can find. The little boy puts on his new brown suit, with the eton collar and the wide windsor tie, and pushes his plaid cap back on his head. And the little girls don their straight broadcloth coats, which are made very much alike this year, except that Ethel's has a border of soutache braid about the edge, and on the deep cuffs and the wide turn-down collar, while Emily's is trimmed with straight bands of dark cloth.

Ethel's wide hat turns down over her curly hair and is adorned with a big rosette in front and two short [illegible]. And Emily's hat turns up from her face and is trimmed with a big bow at the back, a bow with fringed ends. But the little girls are dressed pretty much alike, and they look very sweet indeed as they buy their valentines.

Mother wears her afternoon suit of dark grey broadcloth, with a long straight coat trimmed with an elaborate braided design on pearl grey cloth straight across the shoulders, and with narrower bands in the same pattern about the collar and at the edges of the cuffless sleeve. Her hat is of dark grey felt, in a dainty "pot shape," trimmed with a pleated braid of silk and a flat cluster of feathers.

Auntie May has put on her charming empire dress of tan cloth, with a low yoke of pucked net and Iris crochet, and with wide fold of the material that come over the shoulders and fasten with big flat buttons at the side. She wears a big hat with sweeping plumes, does Auntie May, and she looks very pretty, the children think. They think, too, that she is having quite as good a time as they are, looking at valentines. In fact, they are quite convinced of this. And down in their wise little hearts they know very well, the children, that Auntie May loves St. Valentine's day herself.

No Startling Changes in Spring Styles

By Ella Stan

First—Dress of natural colored pongee made princess style with a tucked panel in the back. The bolero corsage is made with the high waist-line and is cut away at the sides and under the arm showing fulness of the material which is laid in pleats at the shoulder. The yoke and lower sleeve are of tucked chiffon. The upper sleeve is made with three wide tucks. Buttons and simulated button-holes trim the opening at the neck, the sleeves and waist-line.

Second—Black cashmere de soie. The skirt is made with a panel back and front. Between the panels there is a wide band of black and white striped silk. This silk is used in the yoke and lower sleeves. There is a piece in the front richly embroidered in silver thread and black floss over this. The bodice is draped, fastening a little to one side with a rhinestone buckle. The chemisette is of baby Irish lace with a small band of the lace at the wrist.

Third—Dress of white mohair. Bodice is trimmed with heavy lace, joined by a pointed band of coral velvet, trimmed with white soutache, below this the material is slightly full and gathered into the high waist-line. The skirt and waist are cut in one and there is a stitched band extending from shoulder to hem.

Fourth—Front view of No. 1 showing the panel cut away over two pleats.

While the [illegible] the [illegible] in Paris [illegible] out on the Directoire lines are still well liked by the [illegible] and women, for there is a certain [illegible] about the scant dimensions of the skirt, high waistline and long sleeves.

If, however, the new tendency to the Merovingian type strikes the popular [illegible], it will lead away from these very [illegible], which, though retaining their simplicity of cut, will be rendered [illegible] by a richness of trimming, heavy in appearance.

As styles pass from the Grecian to the Merovingian, on the whole, gowns will savor of the barbaric splendor of the Middle Ages, and from the merging of the two periods, we shall obtain the novelty feature that will mark the new gown. The salient points of the Merovingian type are the lengthened waistline, the tight, full, long sleeves and sumptuousness of trimming.

It is interesting to watch how cleverly the modiste is bringing about this change. The long waistline has never been considered pretty, or even youthful, but as is always the case when fashion dictates, we bow our heads and submit.

This time dresses of the Princess order have been selected to carry us over from one extreme to the other. The gown does not fit the figure, but retains the Directoire feature of the absence of waistline.

The backs and fronts are paneled to a distance of six, eight or ten inches below the normal waistline, this effect being given either by trimming, or by the use of a [illegible] material.

A remarkably pretty model of this [illegible] was carried out in Danube-blue [illegible] silk. The panels reached [illegible] to about ten inches [illegible] each about ten inches wide, and formed of the material horizontally tucked.

To the bottom of these panels the deeply plaited skirt was joined, thus following out accurately the costumes of the Merovingian period. A combination of black satin and jet, the jet being used for the panel, would make a most striking evening gown.

Trimming features are of great importance in the Spring gowns, and there is a tendency towards the revival of jet. However, this may not be generally taken up before next Autumn. For it is rather heavy and warm-looking for the Spring and Summer, but for women who wish to be in advance of the styles, this form of trimming may be employed to freshen up some evening gown that has done service through the Winter.

Metallic Effects.

Dull metallic trimmings will share popularity with jet. Broad insertion of metallic filet are shown on which beautiful designs are carried out in glossy, flat soutache braid. The whole trimming is generally of one tone, although a combination of colors is permissible if the right shades are selected.

For instance, a ground-work of seid-gray worked over with metallic blue is extremely effective.

The cabachon is an important feature of such trimmings, and is a novelty of the season.

Paris has gone mad over these metallic effects, and women are scouring around to procure everything possible in metallic nets, laces and trimmings. The old dresses from the attic are being brought out, and tarnished gold and silver insertions ripped from them in order to place them upon the new gowns.

Metallic nets and cloths are employed in colors, as well as in gold and silver. Tinsel threads are interwoven with colored silk, which gives a series of beautiful pastel colorings in metallic effects.

In fact, everything of the barbaric Medieval appearance is sought after. The [illegible] distant period of the sixteenth century is represented in the working up of elaborate embroideries on all-over designs of lace.

There is a great difference in the artistic productions of these periods; the first is very simple and the second elaborate and rich in the extreme.

In button trimmings there are many novelties, that if suitably selected will add much to the appearance of the costumes on which they are placed.

Notably among these are the odd effects in colored pearl, which is obtained by dyeing the buttons. Material-covered, hand-embroidered buttons are employed on all silk and linen costumes, both for actual use and for ornamentation.

The place that braid holds among the new trimmings should not be lost sight of. The latest novelty of this sort is known as "rat-tail" embroidery, and in all probability it will be used on the linen costumes to take the place of soutache, that was so popular last season, for it seems that materials of this character require some such form of trimming in order to produce the most pleasing effects.

The braids used for this work are known as "rat-tail" cord, and are arranged in a scroll and long curved design so closely applied that the design almost completely hides the material.

Net is also ornamented with this cord, and when thus elaborated makes a most pleasing guimpe, the long unbroken lines being in perfect accord with the fashionable tight sleeves.

Tailored waists of butcher's linen have the fronts, collars and cuffs braided in the rat-tail design.

Combination undergarments are a necessity with the style of gown now worn, and shops are continually showing them with some new and practical feature.

A novelty well worth consideration is that of the corset cover and short skirt, the latter being a deep plaited flounce arranged to form the pantaloon and attached to a fitted circular yoke that extends some ten or twelve inches below the waistline, thus doing away with all fullness over the hips.

Another pretty garment is a combination petticoat and knickerbockers. In this there is a deep circular yoke to which is joined the petticoat, also cut on the circular, and the decidedly scant knickerbockers. The little, close-fitting knickerbockers are trimmed with narrow frills of lace and drawn tight above the knees with elastic bands. As this garment is intended for use under lingerie frocks, the petticoat is elaborately trimmed with lace. Broad bands of [illegible] insertion and puffs of linen are arranged alternately.

Petticoats that are partly made have long been appreciated by the women of Paris, but not until recently could they be secured in this country, and now they can be had in the large shops. Those of the circular plaited style are the newest.

In reality these half-made petticoats are about as near completion as it is possible for an unfinished garment to be. All that is required to make them ready for wear is to sew up the back seam of the plaited portion and put hooks and eyes on the yoke.

[illegible] that the dress skirt must fall in around the feet. to obtain this effect all unnecessary material in the petticoat should be avoided, and, therefore, the dust ruffle, which has always proven so desirable on account of its lengthening the life of the skirt, must go.

Paris shops are showing sun plaited petticoats of satin set on to a deep circular yoke. The lower part of the skirt is gored, allowing a fairly ample width.

This gored section is then sun-plaited, the marks of the plaits ceasing at the top, where the skirt is joined to the yoke in a straight seam, the circular cut of the gored portion being so arranged as to do away with the necessity of plaits, gathers or darts where it is joined to the yoke.

These skirts reach only to the shoe-tops and are worn not alone with walking skirts of abbreviated length but with suits and costumes having trains and made without a lining, or a drop skirt. This permits the skirt to swing in around the feet.

Besides, Parisian women realize the charm of a petticoat which is sufficiently short to permit the picking up of the dress without bothering with the petticoat.

The petticoat that is long under a long dress is, if anything, of a greater nuisance than the dress itself, and if we are in the future to wear trailing jupes, perhaps the ordeal of carrying them will in this way be made easier for us.

Cotton crepes, all-over embroideries, hand-embroidered linens and various forms of net are the materials employed for the new waists.

A strong feature on all these is the use of handsome embroideries in motif and all-over designs. Blouses made of very rich and massive embroideries in tinsel are toned down by veilings of colored net.

Washable tulle waists are ornamented with large patterns of machine embroidery and highly colored effects on plain linen are new and pretty. In Paris the vogue for metallic effects is carried out on waists by the use of metal net both in gold and silver. These waists are made in a very simple style, as the fabric itself is of sufficient [illegible].

Machine embroidered net [illegible] prettily over silk of a matching tone.

The place that baby Irish and Cluny laces have held for the last few seasons might lead one to suppose that they would be put aside for something newer, but there is no evidence that their popularity is on the wane, and insertions of Irish are seen not only on lingerie waists of linen but also on nets and cotton crepes.

Next in favor is the Cluny. The idea in both cases seems to be to use the lace in heavy effects on sheer foundations.

Nets dyed to match the new Spring suitings are elaborately braided in self-colors and made into chic little Directoire waists, thus transforming the two-piece suits into a costume with a wrap.

For strictly tailored waists linens printed in colors are new. Last year there was a decided vogue for stripes and, therefore, these are no longer given preference, but printed patterns, prominent among which are dots of various sizes from the tiny pin size to the small coin or spot.

Other conventional figures, such as squares, diamonds and interlaced rings, add to the list of those from which one may select. This will at least suggest to us the use of similar effects in cotton weaves, which are less expensive.

Waists have been growing scanter and scanter, and now the blouse or shirt-waist is almost without fullness. The shoulder line is long and the close fitting sleeves are joined with very little fullness.

The majority of waists are finished in the regulation length, but those of a more dressy order, made on silk foundations intended to complete a costume, show the high waist line.

These are to be worn with skirts mounted on high belts. In Paris the tailor-made suit is almost without exception of the high-belted style.

Cushion Cover Designs

WHEN using this printed design from the paper the directions are as follows:—

If the material used is very sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

In transferring a design when only one part is given fold your linen so that the two right sides come together. Between these two sides insert two sheets of impression paper, placing the wrong sides of paper toward each other, then place your design on the folded material and draw each line firmly with a hard, sharp pencil. You will find that both sides of the design are produced on the linen.

One-half of the pattern for a cushion cover is published to-day.

This can be embroidered on silk, heavy linen or denim with good effect.

The flowers and dots should be worked in the solid satin stitch and the outlines done in soutache or coronation braid.

The braid is laid along the lines and is caught to the material with small stitches on the right side and longer ones on the wrong.

Mercerized cotton No. 20 or twisted silk can be used for the embroidery.

COLD WEATHER FUN

By Mary Dawson

A NOVEL [illegible] devised by a school teacher to entertain the boys of her class and a corresponding number of girls was an Evening With Heroes. It proved so interesting as well as instructive to the young people that I pass the idea along to other teachers or to mothers with like problems on their hands.

The questions which formed the basis of the game were written on cards with blanks left opposite for the names of the celebrities when guessed. They embrace the heroes of fact, fiction and legend. Each card was decorated with a tiny laurel wreath in water color, while the pencil and the ribbon with which it was attached to the card gave the colors of the class. A girl and boy shared each card between them, acting as partners.

The following list of questions and answers will serve to show possibilities of the puzzle, though it makes delightful work for odd hours to get up an original one.

What Scotch hero compelled the English to recognise the independence of his native land in 1328? Ans. Robert Bruce.

What naval hero sailed the ocean blue in the times of Queen Bess and was knighted by her? Sir Francis Drake.

Who is the national hero of Spain? Rodrigo Diaz, called "The Cid."

Give the hero of Homer's Iliad? Achilles.

What valiant hero was most active in defending Troy against the assaults of the Greeks? Hector.

What hero is celebrated for his archery? William Tell.

What hero of romance was a nephew of Charlemagne? Roland (also known as Orlando).

What Scotch hero was betrayed into the hands of the English and by them executed in 1305? Wallace.

What great Englishman, a hero of medieval times, plays an important part in Ivanhoe? Richard Coeur de Lion.

What English king was a hero of Holland? William III, of Orange.

What great Flemish hero, born about [illegible], was a brewer's son? Philip Van Artevelt, of Ghent.

What hero of our Revolutionary War was executed as a spy by the British? Nathan Hale.

What mythological king originated a [illegible] of table? King Arthur, of Britain, who [illegible] the Round Table.

What valiant knight is a hero of Arthur's [illegible]? Launcelot.

Who [illegible]? One of the Paladins of Charlemagne, a cousin of [illegible]

Allow half an hour for the puzzling out of the [illegible] knights and give a well-written book on the Round Table or on the [illegible] which [illegible] around [illegible] as a prize.

A Bag Social.

A [illegible] party on another order, which was recently given with great success, was a Bag Social, the idea of a city hostess with little to spend. For the invitations she got small paper bags such as [illegible] use for [illegible] and [illegible] all that's nice." On these the invitations, very informal, were written. They were then [illegible] like [illegible] in conventional envelopes for sending through Uncle Sam's [illegible]

When the [illegible] guests were all on the [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] a length of stout [illegible] to which [illegible] was pasted a square of paper with a number written on it, the numbers ranging from one to twelve.

Each player received a card and a pencil, the former having the numbers from 1 to 12 written down the left-hand margin, and at a given signal there was a general rush for the bags. Each player felt the little receptacles without detaching or opening them, and then wrote down the contents as these were thought to be opposite the appropriate numbers. The tiny things inclosed in the bags were invariably simple, as a bobbin of darning cotton, a key, muffin ring, apple corer, paper knife, thimble, bodkin, cork, etc. They prove very puzzling nevertheless, with their outlines blurred by the folds of the bags and but one set of answers was entirely correct. This list won for the maker a prettily embroidered laundry bag. Half an hour passed like five minutes in guessing the concealed articles.

Another pleasant round was a word puzzle founded on words beginning with the syllable bag. Examples:—

What bag is found in Asiatic Turkey? Bagdad.

What bag is heaviest? Baggage.

What bag is lightest? Bagatelle.

What bag fits very ill? Baggy.

What bag makes most noise? Bagpipe.

What bag is a self-centered major in Dickens' works? Bagstock.

The player identifying the largest number of bags in this game [illegible] a bag of peanut candy.

Afterwards a large bag, distended at the top by a barrel hoop, was suspended from the ceiling at one end of the room so as to hang on a level with the heads of the company. Standing at the opposite end of the room the various guests tried to toss rubber balls into the swinging bag. Each [illegible] correctly placed counted one point for the persons throwing it. Score was carefully kept, and the person [illegible] that points received a tea-[illegible] bag (a tiny one of [illegible]) filled with candy.

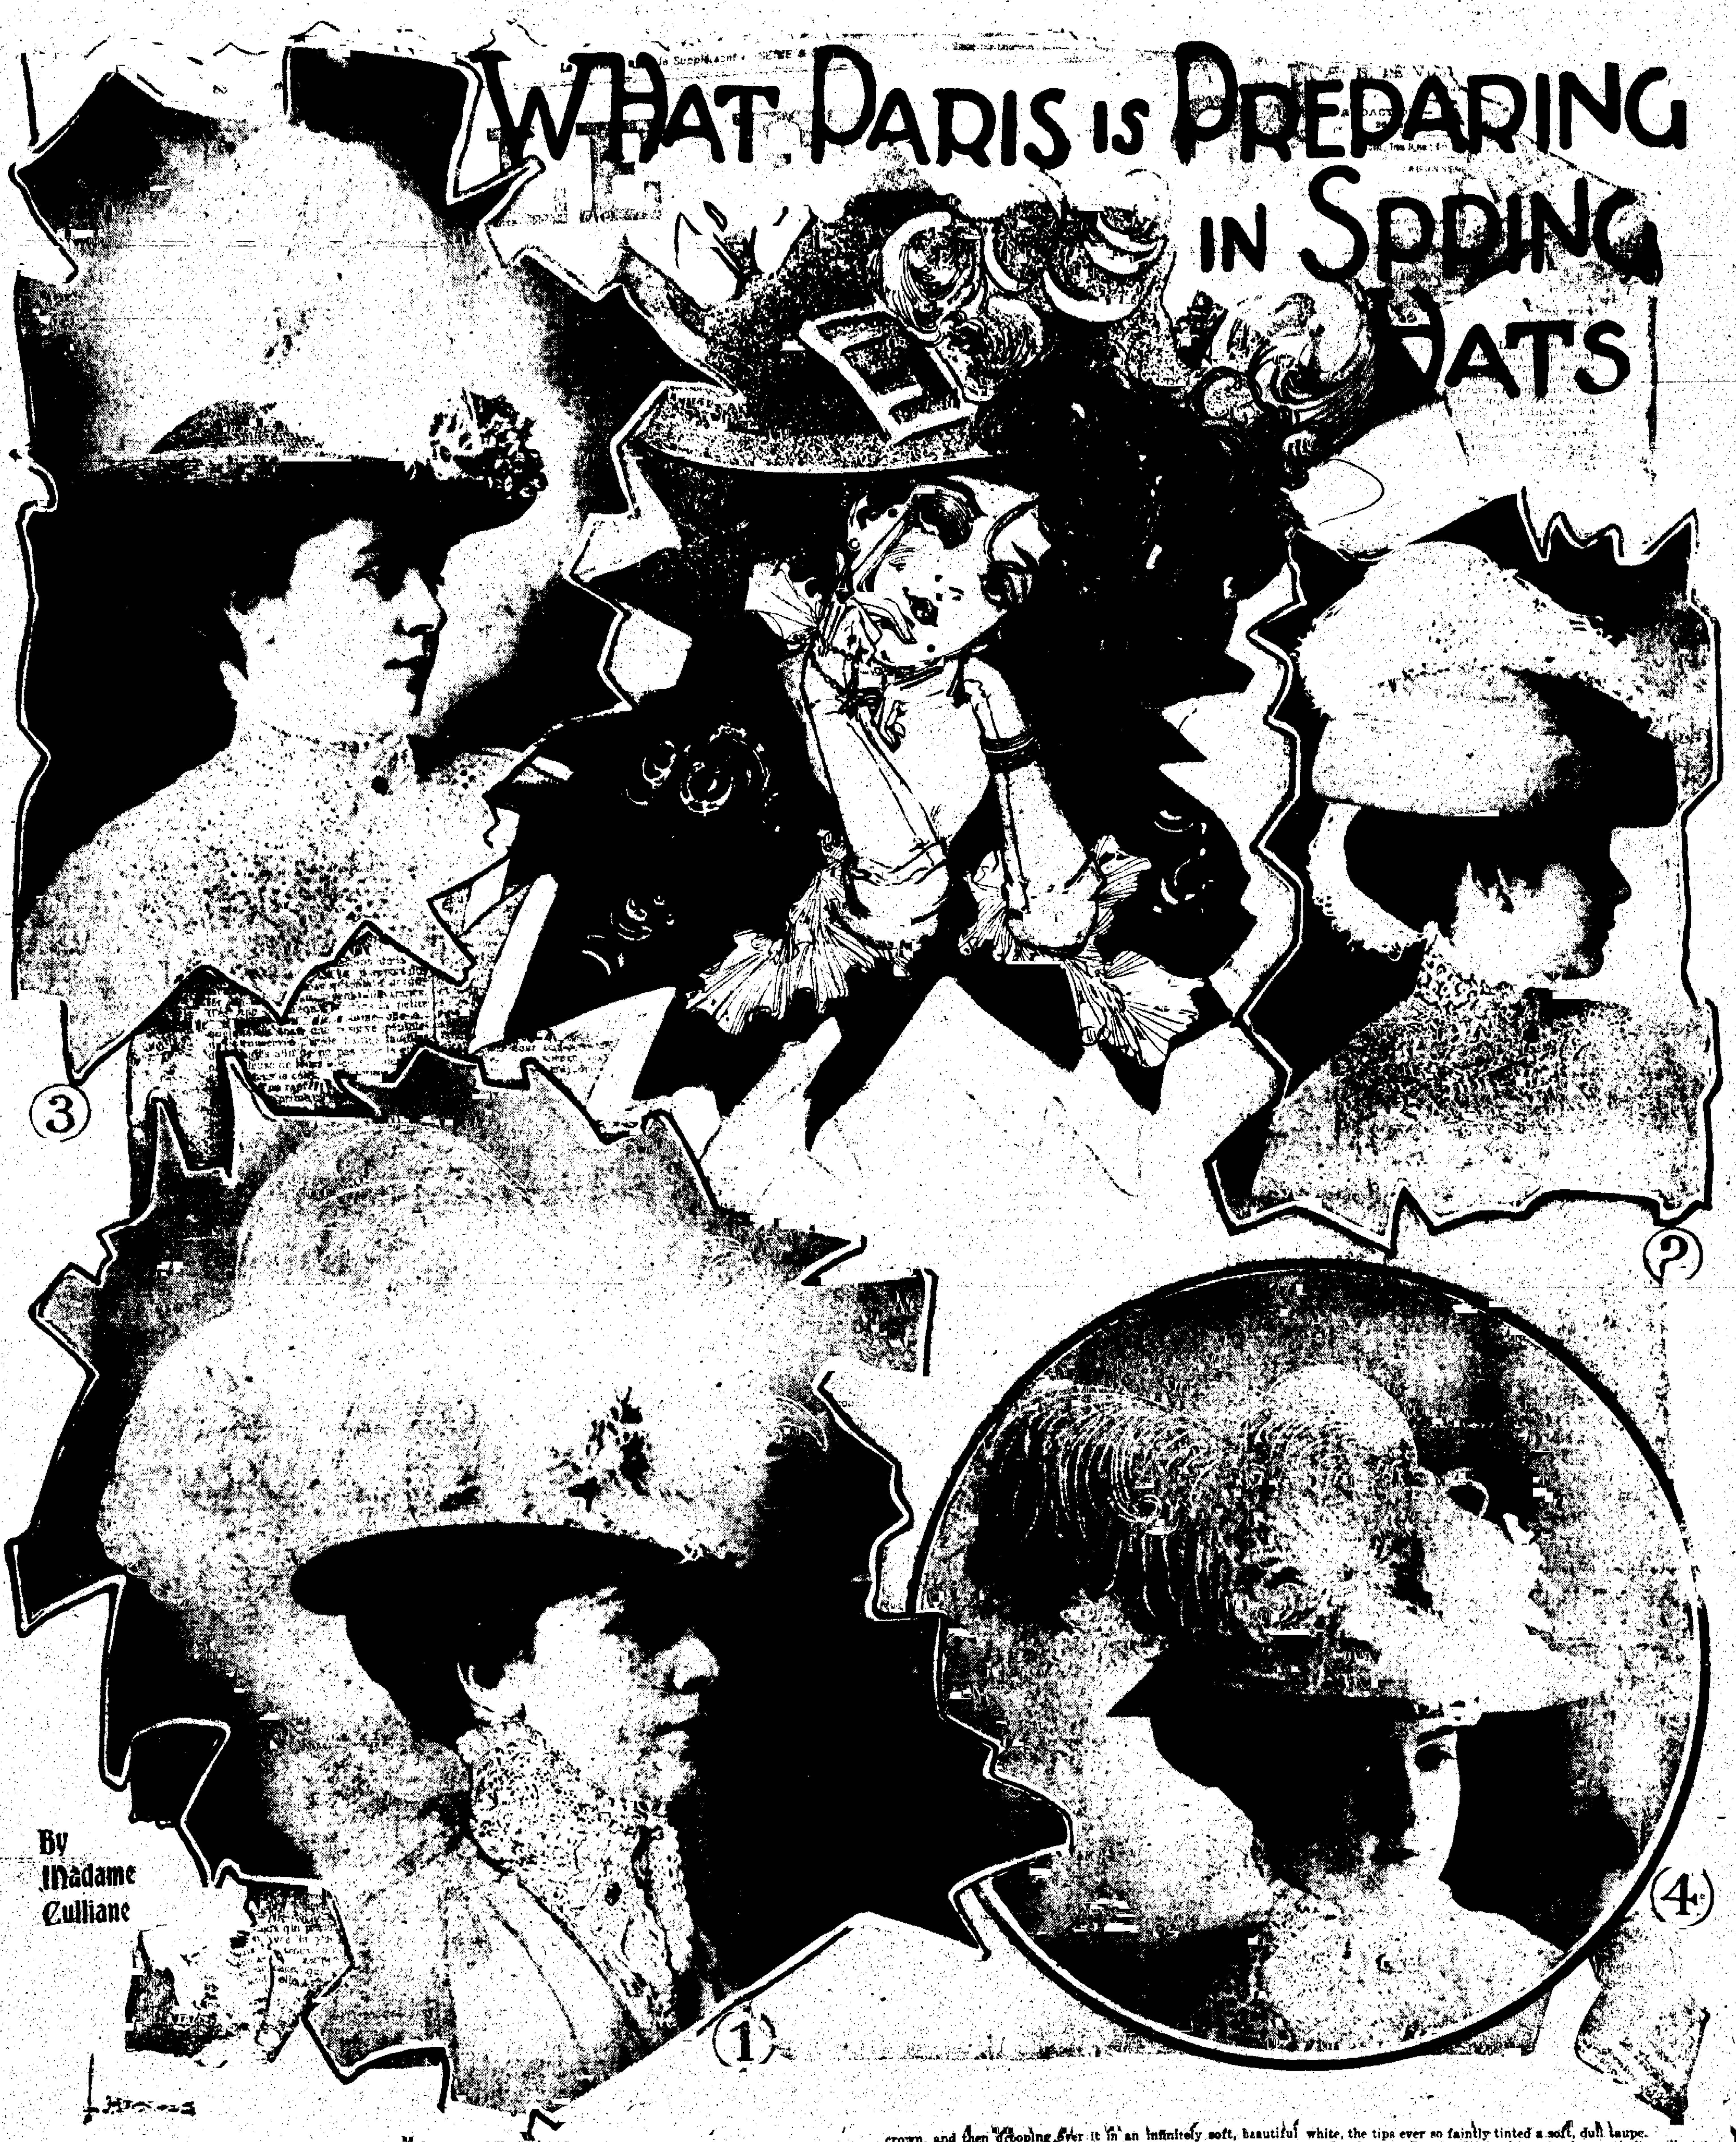
Again, a [illegible] paper bag filled with candy was swung with a cord from a [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] blindfolded in turn. He was then given a walking stick and sent to break the bag with a blow. If he succeeded in this within two minutes' time the [illegible] which [illegible] down were his and another bag was suspended for the newcomer. If he failed to reach the bag and burst it in that time he won nothing. Paper-covered [illegible] are best for this. The bag should come just above the heads of the company (in point of height, not in point of location) and the blindman is sent on his way from the opposite end of the room.

When Making Curtains.

The woman who believes in making her own curtains of net or [illegible] muslin will find that laying the [illegible] of the net once more much [illegible]. If, [illegible] of [illegible] she [illegible] in the hairpins.

Cut a notched piece of stiff cardboard for the gauge, turn in about an eighth of an inch, then run the gauge along the hem with the notched part [illegible] Crease the top with thumb and [illegible] stick the [illegible] the net at [illegible] will be [illegible] the [illegible]

WHAT PARIS IS PREPARING IN SPRING HATS



By Madame Culliane

THIS Spring will be a great season for pressed and blocked straw shapes in hats.

In illustration No. 1, we have a smart, modified form of the Lavalliere capeline a rather large, exceedingly becoming shape, with the new, rather bulky, bowl-shaped crown, almost as wide at the top as at the bottom, and perfectly flat at the former point. This crown is blocked separately from the brim and is of pure white Milan.

The brim is of the same material, but there is a wide, deep black border outlining it—quite the latest feature and it droops ever so slightly from the head size, and is a trifle wider in front and back than at the sides, which produces the smart capeline effect.

Two exquisite, snow-white plumes, fairly glistening with quality and beauty, are fastened near the top of the crown, drooping softly over it, and extending far beyond the edge of the back brim, [illegible] the [illegible] of this model's contours.

A big fluffy rosette, also made of white ostrich, but tinted a deep black in the center, is poised over the stem of the plumes, concealing their joining.

Model No. 2 is of a slightly less pretentious, but equally attractive shape. The Milan straw of which it is fashioned is a little coarser in grain, and tinted a soft, dull Mogol brown, the latest in browns; a combination of burned onion and khaki.

The rather low, but wide, bowl-crown slopes down gracefully into a sort of amazon brim—narrow, and rolled up at the sides to form a little revers, which flatten out into a shallow point in the center front, and slope down deliberately at the back. The silhouette created by this movement is of the utmost grace and beauty, and reflects on the entire ensemble.

A willow plume of immense length and fullness, and shading from deep Mogol brown into a lovely, pale, creamy ivory tint, is [illegible] in the center front, rising high beyond the top of the crown, and then drooping over it in an infinitely soft, beautiful shower effect.

A smart representative of the at present much-affected turban is illustrated in the following photograph.

The shape is in a lovely, light tone of Gravier (gravel, or sand color) and is composed by a bowl-shaped crown of unheard-of width, and a height just sufficient to relieve the crown of every indication of bulkiness, which is closely encircled by a wide, tall brim, turned up sharply, in the correct toreador fashion.

Two beautiful ostrich plumes, the one immensely long, the other slightly less so, afford the trimming. They are massed up to form a high mound at the left side, the quill ends softly slipped between crown and brim, and the shorter plume droops softly over the top of the crown, increasing its height quite considerably, while the long one extends over the brim, away down to the nape of the wearer's neck.

The color of these stunning trimming accessories is pure white, the tips ever so faintly tinted a soft, dull taupe.

Another excellent model is shown in the concluding illustration—a representative of the strictly high class millinery, and conspicuous by outlines of wonderful beauty, and supreme, rich, though decidedly simple, elegance.

The graceful shape of fine Milan in a lovely, deep tone of Bois Joli (the latest novelty in soft, vague, pinkish, rosewood tints) consists of a tall crown, straight from headsize to top, and very slightly rounded off at the latter point (which effects that the colossal circumference appears considerably reduced), and a brim of even, moderate width throughout, which droops very slightly, in harmony with the lines of the crown, and is gracefully dented at the left side.

The garniture effects that the contrasts in the proportions of brim and crown are cleverly modified the brim made more important, and the rather too rigid outlines of the crown effectively blurred.
